MILWAUKEE JUNIOR!

Takes the Lead!

TO THE FARMERS:

I have sold these machines in Tecumseh and vicinity for six years past and my sales have increased each succeeding year. The farmers who have bought this machine know, from a practical test, that it is the best machine on the market, and I expect to make my seventh season take the cake in the number of sales. I have just been having a tussle with the grip, but am now on deck again. Life is too short to relate and the newspaper too small to print all the good points about the MILWAUKEE JUNIOR. But call at my rooms in the Usborne Block and I will SHOW you the machine and EXPLAIN its workings.

Yours, for a Big Wheat Crop,

GEO. C. POCKLINGTON.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

"100 Doses One Dollar" means simply that Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most economical medicine to buy, because it gives more for the money than any other preparation. Each bottle contains 100 doses and will average to last a month, while other preparations, taken according to direction, are gone in a week. Therefore, be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla, the best blood purifier.

Hayti has so many revolutions that it makes a man dizzy to think about it.

Around the County.

Blissfield wants a good public hall on the ground floor.

The Milan School Commencement will occur on the 16th.

Milan had a baloon ascension, in addition to the races last Saturday.

Miss Mary Coleman, who has for four years been employed as dish washer in a Hillsdale hotel, has saved $562.28 during that time.

The Blissfield Gas and Oil company has been wound up, and the Treasurer is anxious to know what to do with $198.03 in cash left on hand.

Bert. Walker, a former Blissfield boy, now sails "up in a balloon," having recently purchased at Jackson a complete outfit for making ascensions.

Churches and Sunday-schools in the vicinity of Devil's lake will circulate petitions to the Mackinaw railroad, requesting the suspension of Sunday excursions to the lake.

Dr. Allen, of this city, has been appointed a member of the pension board to succeed Dr. Hull. This was brought about through the influence of Hon. E. P. Allen, a brother of the doctor.—Adrian Messenger.

Wheat on sandy land is reported badly damaged in some localities hereabouts from the frosts. The damage is said to be in the joint of the straw near the ground, letting the straw tip over and lodge. Some whole fields are claimed to be ruined.—Dundee Reporter

Judson Schomp, of Weston, with a wagon load of sand, tried to cross a bridge. The bridge broke and threw the whole business into the creek, smashing the wagon and brusing the team. Schomp had plenty of "grit" left, but lost his sand.—Adrian Press.

A neatly clipped lawn is a thing to be desired, but it does not help matters any to clip it close down to the ground. Set the mower to cut as high as it will, and your lawn will look just as well and there will be less danger of killing out the grass roots during a period of drouth.

We are sorry to learn that people so far forget themselves as to take flowers and slips from plants placed on the graves in oak grove cemetery. There is a very stringent law against such desecration and we hope that the act will not be repeated.—Manchester Enterprise.

"Anything new?" queried the Advance scribe of Agent Donaldson yesterday. "See this?" It was a circular prohibiting agents from giving to the press any information regarding shipments or receipts. The pencil was quietly put away with the mental conclusion—the Lake Shore be——.—Blissfield Advance.

Quite a serious runaway occurred at Norvell last Thursday. While Mrs. C. J. Harper and child and Miss Cross were driving near the railroad, their horse became frightened at a standing box car and run away, throwing the occupants of the carriage out, and injuring all more or less seriously.—Brooklyn Exponent.

Activity prevails at the fair grounds this week. A force of workmen and teams are at work grading the track. Several carpenters are also erecting the main exibition building. It will be business thereat until the work is completed. All the work is to be of the most approved and substantial manner.—Dundee Reporter.

The school board have been fortunate enough to secure the services of Prof. Chas. L. Blodgett as superintendent of our schools for the coming year. Prof. Blodgett taught the Saline schools for five years, is a graduate of the normal, and will graduate a B. A. at the university this month. He has a wife and one child.—Manchester Enterprise.

A peculiar incident occured in Hillsdale Wednesday morning. During a heavy thunder shower lightning fired a residence on College hill and at the same time struck a wire and wrung the electrical alarm connecting the engine house with the college. The fire company were out and on the scene of the fire before the occupants of the house were aware of what had happened.

Scove Stacy of the TECUMSEH HERALD, attempted to ride on one of Adrian's electric street cars a few days since—the result was nearly as bad as when Jonah attempted to make a voyage—the electric contraption wouldn't cooperate, and in the absence of a whale on which to complete his journey the scribe proceeded on foot, poorer (by five cents,) but wiser for the experience. Moral—Never attempt to ride on an Adrian electric car unless you have a clear conscience.—Addison Courier.

The investigation of the management at the Industrial Home which has been in progress this week has brought to light nothing that will be a discredit to Miss Scott's administration. Wednesday afternoon several witnesses were called to the stand and duly sworn; Rev. Kerridge, Rev. Spencer, ex-member of the board Corbin, Hon. T. H. Hinchman, member of the board of control for several years, and the assistant superintendent Miss Sarah Herick. Each gave testimony in favor of Miss Scott and her management. Miss Scott in her report to the board of control denies the charge of being cruel in her management of the inmates. She stated that in some cases when the girls became unmanageable that extreme measures were resorted to, but in no case were they deprived of necessaries or comforts.—Michigan Messenger.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 11, 1891.

American tin has but very little tin in it. It is composed of brag, brass, buncombe and bluster in about equal proportions.

The President is still engaged in his search for an honest man to become Commissioner of Pensions. He finds it rather a difficult task.

It is useless to deny that the new movement called the "People's Party" is a very significant one and it may become a powerful one. It is likely to hold the balance of power in the next Presidential contest.

The Louisville Courier Journal propounds this new and startling query: "Is the tariff a tax?" Our individual opinion has been that it is a tax. But if the tariff is not a tax, then what's the matter with sugar?

Secretary Blaine is getting better. But instead of going back to Washington he hies himself off to Bar Harbor. What is the trouble? We fear that the reciprocity between the President and his Premier is getting somewhat strained.

Mr. Columbus Delano, who was some years ago a member of President Grant's cabinet, is responsible for the statement that the Republican farmers of Ohio will unanimously support McKinley. Other Ohio Republicans are far from being as confident as Mr. Delano is, and apparently their sources of knowledge of the situation are quite as good as his.

The Directors of the Union Theological Seminary have decided by a vote of 20 to 2 to sustain Dr. Briggs. This action will force a direct issue between the Seminary and the General Assembly. When Greek meets Greek, then comes the tug of war. It is evident that a crisis is approaching in the history of the Presbyterian church of America.

Senator Pugh of Alabama has written a letter to the Farmers' Alliance of Dallas County, in answer to a resolution asking for his views upon the Sub-Treasury scheme. He tells them that it has no chance of standing in the courts; that the notes issued would have an ephemeral existence; that they would be redeemable in nothing, and without even the merit or value of fiat money.

Speaking the visit of Mr. Cleveland to Buffalo, the Courier says: "The cordial greeting which Mr. Cleveland received was prompted not only by this personal friendship, but also by the fact, as strongly expressed by the Commercial (Rep.), 'that in the positions of exalted responsibility to which he has been called since he left Buffalo he has conducted himself in a way to reflect honor upon the city where he so long resided.'"

These be troublous times for creeds. Now it is the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Briggs, who has been tried by the New York Presbytery for heresy and found guilty by a vote of four to two. Rev. Henry Van Dyke resigned from the committee of investigation because he was in sympathy with the accused in his views. Dr. Briggs, last January, was placed in the chair of Biblical Theology in the Union Theological seminary, and in his published inaugural address the heresy is discovered. The expressions which conflict with the confession of faith concern "the authority of the church" and "the sources of Divine Authority." —Toledo Bee.

The New York Herald is getting impertinent. Just read this:

If the ship owners and ship builders should be protected from foreign competition, then every American industry ought to be equally protected. The American farmer, par eminence, may, with equal or greater fairness, demand a bounty upon every ton of wheat or corn, cotton or tobacco exported from the United States, in order that he may compete on equal terms in foreign markets with foreign agriculturists, since his outlay for farming implements, clothes and hired labor is greatly increased by the operation of the McKinley tariff laws.

MR. DANA ON THE FARMERS.

Mr. Charles A. Dana is the editor of the New York Sun.

He has an undying hatred for Mr. Cleveland.

He tried to beat Cleveland in 1884 by supporting Ben Butler, and he did defeat him in 1888 by the assistance of David B. Hill.

Now this distinguished editor is trying again to compass the defeat of Mr. Clevland by pushing Hill to the front and denouncing tariff reform.

Mr. Dana wishes to have the farmers taxed for the benefit of manufacturers, but when the farmers ask for some favors in return he grows very indignant. In a recent interview Mr. Dana says:

The Farmers' Alliance is really as antagonistic to Democratic principles as anything in the land. It is a socialistic organization, seeking to establish an aristocracy of farmers, endowed with principles which nobody else will have. It seeks special privileges for a class, and the method by which it proposes to attain these ends are as socialistic as themselves.

Democratic principles as interpreted by Mr. Dana, mean protection for the whiskey seller, subsidies for steamships, high taxes for the benefit of the manufacturer, and to the devil with the farmer.

"Mother," said John, "please make Bill keep quiet; every time I hit him with the hatchet he yells."

Mr. Dana knows no more of the farmers than he does of the Democrats. The greatest scheme of socialism ever invented is the tariff. Its avowed purpose is to tax one glass for the benefit of another, yet Mr. Dana worships the tariff, and assails Mr. Cleveland falsely, maliciously, with all the senile hate he can command, because Mr. Cleveland says the tariff should be reduced.

The truth is that Mr. Dana sees that the uprising of the farmer means the downfall of the tariff, and so he begins by calling names. And the whole lot of broken-down politicians, the tools of the whiskey rings, the men whom Mr. Cleveland would not permit to "run things" when he was President, are all assailing Mr. Cleveland to-day trying to reconcile the people to. Gov. Hill, and denouncing the farmers as socialists. We believe that the perpetuity of free institutions depends most of all on the intelligent farmers of America.

We believe these farmers have been foully wronged; that for a generation they have been robbed by schemes like the tariff.

We hold that any kind of agitation is better than stagnation. The farmers may make mistakes, they may follow false leaders for a while, but they will in the main keep to the straight path. They are not socialists, nor communists, nor protectionists, but simply plain American citizens who begin to see their rights and who intend to have them.

When they come fully to understand matters they will put a stop to the creation of offices, they will cut down expenses, they will refuse bounties and subsidies to the rich, they will let the farmers sell where they please and buy where they please. In other words, they will teach in season and out what Mr. Cleveland taught when he was President: "The Government should be supported by the people, not the people by the Government." That would drive all of Mr. Dana's friends away from the public crib; and among the subsidists and bounty hunters and pension sharks there will be weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth.—Home and Farm.

THE FIGHT IS ON.

So long as the difference between Dr. Briggs and the more conservative Presbyterians was confined to its original limits it was, while important, not vital. The church could do without Dr. Briggs, and there is little doubt that Dr. Briggs could ave found a field of usefulness outside of the church. Now however, that the authorities of the Union Theological Seminary have refused to recognize the right of the general assembly of the church to veto the transfer of the advanced and liberal divine from the chair of Hebrew to that which he occupies, the personal element is largely eliminated from the contest and there is prospect of the most serious struggle within the lines of the Presbyterian denomination since the days of slavery.

It is difficult to see how the square issue between the conservative and the advanced Presbyterians can be avoided, or how, whatever the result of the test, the disagreement can be accommodated. The Union Theological Seminary has much at stake in the matter, and the appeal to the civil courts which is threatened will give opportunity for a line of defense different from that which was possible before the assembly, or will be possible when the trial of the charge of heresy comes up in the local presbyteries. There will be less theology and more law, with the probability that an absence of personal feeling on the part of the court will make the trial the more interesting.—Detroit Free Press.

"THE DISCONTENTED."

A morning newspaper refers contemptuously to the men assembling in Cincinnati as the "delegates of the discontented."

The men in question may be very wise or very unwise—but it is no reproach to them that they are the "delegates of the discontented." The Congress which adopted the Declaration of Independence was composed wholly of the delegates of the discontented, and so has been every other gathering of men which has instituted any of the great reforms of history.

It is not a reproach to a man to be discontented. The HAMPDENS, the PATRICK HENRYS, the JEFFERSONS, the ADAMSES, the FRANKLINS and all the rest of Liberty's lovers have been the discontented and the delegates of the discontented; and it was their discontent that made them the benefactors of mankind and the scourgers of wrong.

Every man of honest mind is discontented with wrong, injustice and oppression and is at war with those things, whether on his own account or in behalf of his fellow-men. Discontent is the motive power of human progress. It has accomplished the overthrow of despotic power and the emancipation of the people so far as those ends are accomplished. It alone can complete that work. It sometimes errs in its objects and methods, but it would be the saddest of all days for humankind on which discontent should be eliminated from the list of active forces or the "delegates of the discontented" should be made to hold their peace.—New York World.

HARRISON A SOCIALIST.

In the course of a speech at Omaha, President Harrison declared that he desired, "by every method, to enhance the prosperity of all our people, and have this great government in all its undertakings touch with beneficent and equal hands the pursuits of the rich and the poor." He further declared that his own administration had been engaged in efforts to secure large foreign markets for our farm products; and that the reciprocity scheme and subsidised ships would eventually accomplish that object. These declarations interpret the phrase first quoted, and show that Mr. Harrison, probably without knowing it, is simply a rank Socialist, who imagines that it is the business of government to take care of the people. Such a notion is entirely irreconcilable with true Democratic ideas, and is a part and parcel of the old monarchical notion that the government is a king, who is the father of his people, and bound to promote their prosperity by benevolent methods.

All that the Government of the United States need do to enable Western farmers to obtain more in exchange for the products of their toil is to take its hands off, and cease to restrict trade by tariffs. It does not need to treat with any other nation in order to accomplish this. It then will only remain for it to devise a system for meeting public expenditures that will not restrict industry or cramp exchange at home. Having done so much, the States can follow its example in adopting rational systems of taxation, and needless burdens now artificially imposed upon the necks of the people being thus removed, the people will take care of themselves and of their Government also, and there will be no demand that any Government shall "touch with beneficent hand" the business pursuits of either the rich or the poor. It will find that about all asked of it will be to preserve the peace and let honest people alone.

A NO-PARTY PLATFORM.

A friendly critic writes us, in renewing his subscription, that the Christian Union used to be Republican in politics, and is so no longer; and he wants to know whether the Republican party has changed, or the Christian Union.

Both.

If a paper desires to exert a positive political influence, it must unite with one of the great political parties; if it wishes to exert a positive ecclesiastical influence, it must unite with one of the great denominations. The Congregationalist has an influence in the Congregational denomination, the Churchman in the Episcopal denomination, the Examiner in the Baptist denomination, to which the Christian Union does not aspire. Similarly, the party organ has an influence on party politics which we deliberately forego for the superior advantages of independency. The Christian Union holds itself at liberty to criticise what is evil, to commend what is good, and to report judiciously what is mixed in all parties and in all denominations.

But the Republican party has also changed.

Before the war, the Republican party stood for the principle, Liberty national, slavery sectional; during the war, first for Nationality, second for emancipation; at the close of the war, for the enfranchisement of the negro as a necessary corollary of emancipation. The Christian Union is of opinion that on these issues it was wholly right.

But those issues have all passed away; they are all settled; new issues have arisen; and the Republican party has necessarily framed new policies to meet new issues.

Shall the business of the Government be administered on business principles? The Republican party says Yes! in its platform; No! by the acts of its political managers. We believe that its platform is right and its actions are wrong.

Shall the Government attempt to promote industry by subsidies, loans, land grants, and a high protective tariff? Or shall it confine itself to protecting the individual from wrong, and give industry a free field and no favor? The McKinley bill and the Postal Subsidy bill take the first view, the Christian Union the second.

Shall the negro be protected in his ballot by Federal interference, or shall he be educated, made a man of, and left to protect himself? The Lodge Election Bill takes the first view, the Christian Union the second.

Shall the great carrying corporations be treated as individual enterprises, and the railroads as private property? or the railroads as public highways, and the corporations as public servants under public control? The Republican party has given to this question no decided answer. The Christian Union answers decidedly that the first position is proven untenable, that in the second lies the safety of the nation.

What shall we do with the saloon? The Democratic party says, practically, Let be. The Republican party says, practically, Handle with care. The Prohibition party says, Prohibit everywhere. The Christian Union says, Fight the saloon by whatever method in each locality gives the best promise of the most immediate success.

Finally a considerable proportion of party leaders and organs demand that the people support the Republican party for what it has done in the past. The Christian Union replies that no party is to be supported except for what it is, does, and is pledged to do in the future.

The Christian Union is neither Republican, Democratic, Prohibition, nor Alliance, but absolutely independent. We believe that there is room in the United States for one weekly journal which belongs to no party, but dares to speak the truth, without fear or favor, regarding all parties and all policies.—Christian Union.

DEAFNESS CAN'T BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the musous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A CONFEDERATION PROPOSED.

The following announcement followed by the platform of each of the organizations named, is being sent out to the membership of the various societies:

At a conference held in the city of Lansing, May 12, 1891, the following organizations were represented: The Patrons of Industry, the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, the Knights of Labor, and the Citizens Alliance and Industrial Brotherhood.

The demands of these organizations were read and the declarations of principles were carefully compared and their aims and objects were found to be practically identical.

In the interest of united effort in the future, of all reform elements, it was agreed that the question of a union of all these organizations be submitted to each subordinate association of Patrons of Industry, each sub-Alliance and each Assembly of Knights of Labor, looking to a confederation for political action which shall secure to them the aims and objects for which they were organized.

We herewith submit to you the several platforms above referred to and ask that you take immediate action by vote of your members as to the advisability of a united independent political movement.

Each subordinate association, Alliance and Assembly is urged to report said action to their respective State Presidents or chief State officer at as early a date as possible, that they may take such further action as shall be necessary to carry out the wishes of the respective orders.

A CITY LUXURY.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

THE WESTERN FARMER AND THE SINGLE TAX.

HARTFORD, Minn., March 16.—I have been for years an ardent believer in the single tax, but have never before addressed a letter to The Standard, except to send in my yearly subscription. I am located in a backwoods district, and being usually driven with work all the year round I have had no opportunity to do any missionary work, except to keep up a desultory correspondence in a few papers. I should not write now if it were not for the fact that I can see that the single tax is getting before the people of my community in some mysterious manner, just as epidemics spread, without any apparent cause. The late political cyclone made me representative of my county in the Minnesota legislature, and, being known as a believer in the single tax, my correspondence shows unmistakably that the outlines of the cat are becoming visible to many. A resolution expressing the sentiments of a local farmers' club was placed in my hands recently, which disapproved of a state bureau to encourage immigration, "as all the benefits of immigration accrue to land speculators." I do not know that any of these farmers are single tax men, but there is no doubt they soon will be. Numerous petitions are being signed by farmers, urging the enactment of a law that will compel railroad companies to pay taxes on their lands, acquired under land grant acts that exempted them from taxation, "for," say these farmers, "the settlers who have improved the country have given these railroad lands all their value and enabled the owners to exact a higher price from the purchasers who want to settle on them and improve them." These farmers are learning their A. B. Cs, and will get on in time.

A widow, who has taken up a homestead claim in Dakota, passed through our neighborhood last week, asking aid to keep her family from starvation until she could get another crop from her land. The authorities had done all they could for her and others in similar circumstances, but all they could give them was some corn meal, and her youngest child was suffering from lack of nourishment, the coarse food disagreeing with its young and delicate organization. She was only one of many living on the free lands of Dakota who have lost three crops from drought, but having no where else to go they cling desperately to the only land they can call their own. One more season of drought and failure of crops will depopulate portions of Dakota. There are thousands of families living out there on the bleak plains clothed in rags and subsisting on the most meagre diet, praying Heaven to give them rain, so that they can make enough money to build themselves homes, while millions of acres of fine agricultural lands in Minnesota, Iowa and other states situated in the region of ample rainfall are lying vacant, in the grip of the land speculator.

I believe the present session of the Minnesota legislature will result in strengthening the cause of single tax. It is composed largely of farmers who are earnestly seeking a remedy for existing industrial wrongs, and are especially desirous of formulating a platform upon which the farming class and the so-called wage workers can occupy as a common ground. Single tax men will know where they will finally land if they persist in an honest search for a remedy that will emancipate all industry. Within the past year I endeavored to get the single tax discussed in the county and local farmers' alliance organizations in my county, but failed to get a hearing. Recently I have received notices from two different localities requesting me to be present on dates named, to participate in a discussion of the single tax. I think we can make these meetings so interesting that the people will want more of the same kind.—J. H. Sheets, in the Standard.

English Land Tax.

Commenting on the debate on land taxation in the house of commons, Michael Davitt's paper, the Labor World, after showing how the landlord parliament of England had reduced the land tax which formerly constituted the bulk of revenues of the English government, to a merely nominal proportion of the total amount raised by taxation, says:

The total rent-revenue derived by landlordism from the land each year, including ground rents and royalties, is difficult if not impossible, to ascertain accurately. But it is generally computed at land, £200,000,000 to £250,000,000. This vast sum is not the result of from lord energy, intelligence, or outlay. It is the earning, the creation of the industrial community. If every landlord in Great Britain emigrated to the antipodes and remained there forever, the economic value of the land would go on producing the wealth which the landed aristocracy is now appropriating as its property. The influence which they, as a class, exercise upon the production of this wealth is about equal to that which they exercise upon the growth of the bodies of the human units of our population. The labor of the masses, the social necessities of the community, the daily wants of the people and the general progress of the arts and sciences as applied to the organism of society, are alone responsible for the wealth which, in the name of rent, a small and a useless class are taking year by year from the nation.

Instead of five millions, the entire taxation, local and general, should be levied upon land values. These are the products of the combined energies of the whole population. They are, therefore, the one legitimate subject for national revenue. They grow from the inalienable patrimony of the state. Every citizen contributes to their development. No man's house, or food, or clothing, or earnings would suffer from the appropriation of land values for fiscal purposes. On the contrary, every tax now levied upon the necessaries of life could be abolished if the land of the country was again made the source from whence the state should derive the means with which to carry on the duties of government. It would be an act of restitution, and not of revolution. The people would be only taking that which they and they alone, create, and the nation would only be enjoying again the right of which it was deprived by a privileged class in making the "economic earning" of the soil defray the cost of administering the affairs of the commonweal. To the cry of "confiscation," which this demand would call forth from landlords, the people can answer "restoration." The "confiscation" has been the work of the landlords. To levy taxes for the needs of the state is legal and constitutional. Land reformers, who demand the land for the people, seek only a constitutional reform by legal means.

"Cozy" Murphy, the Landlord.

There lived in Dublin, some years ago, a gentleman named Murphy—"Cozy" Murphy, they called him, for short, and because he was a very comfortable sort of a Murphy. Cozy Murphy owned land in Tipperary; but as he had an agent in Tipperary to collect his rents and evict his tenants when they did not pay, he himself lived in Dublin, as being the more comfortable place. And he concluded, at length, that the most comfortable place in Dublin, in fact the most comfortable place in the whole world, was—in bed. So he went to bed and stayed there for nearly eight years; not because he was at all ill, but because he liked it. He ate his dinners, and drank his wine, and smoked his cigars, and read, and played cards, and received visitors, and verified his agent's accounts, and drew checks—all in bed. After eight years' lying in bed, he grew tired of it, got up, dressed himself, and for some years went around like other people, and then died. But his family were just as well off as though he had never gone to bed—in fact, they were better off; for while his income was not a whit diminished by his going to bed, his expenses were.

This was a typical landowner—a landowner pure and simple. Now let the working farmer consider what would become of himself and family if he and his boys were to go to bed and stay there, and he will realize how much his interests as a laborer exceed his interests as a landowner.

How to Tax Mines.

The Detroit Tribune had, in a recent issue, a remark to the effect that "The democratic scheme to tax the northern Michigan mines out of existence won't win." Commenting on this the Detroit News says:

The democratic nor any other party could "tax the northern Michigan mines out of existence," if it had the most intense desire to do so. The mines were in northern Michigan before there were any democrats, and they will be there when all the democrats are dead and forgotten.

But while the democrats could, by bad legislation, shut up our mines, they could also, by good legislation, compel their working to their utmost capacity, giving labor employment, reducing the price of the raw material, through increased production, and enabling every manufacturing concern using iron and copper to increase the sales. The democrats could do all this by changing our present tax law from a specific tax on the product of the mine to a direct tax on the value of the mine, independent of all improvements. Our present tax law dealing with mining property makes it advantageous to work as few mines as possible. Consequently there are many thousands of acres of mining lands in Michigan, containing millions of dollars' worth of ore, paying practically no tax at all.

Why the Farmer Should Favor the Single Tax.

So far from the effect of placing all taxes upon the value of land being to the advantage of the towns at the expense of the agricultural districts, the very reverse of this is obviously true. The great increase of land values is in the cities, and with the present tendencies of growth this must continue to be the case. To place all taxes on the value of land would be to reduce the taxation of agricultural districts relatively to the taxation of towns and cities. And this would be only just; for it is not alone the presence of their own populations which gives value to the lands of towns and cities, but the presence of the more scattered agricultural population, for whom they constitute industrial, commercial and financial centers.

THE land holders of Detroit are bursting with indignation. The city assessors have been assessing the land of that city at a higher rate than ever before, and have thus added several millions to the taxable values. The Detroit Journal thinks that "the ideas of Henry George have not been without influence on the assessors, for there has been a more systematic effort to get at land values than ever before." The assessors have struck their heaviest blow at "acreage property," and the holders of this property—"the men," says the Journal, "who are holding for an increase of land value"—will be pinched terribly, "many of them to the point at which they will be forced to sell to those who will improve, or else improve themselves." Good.

TRACING out the cause of unequal distribution of wealth which appears in all civilized countries, with a constant tendency to greater and greater inequality as material progress goes on, we have found it in the fact that, as civilization advances, the ownership of land, now in private hands, gives a greater and greater power of appropriating the wealth produced by labor and capital.—Progress and Poverty.

IF I have worked harder and built myself a good house while you have been content to live in a hovel, the tax-gatherer now comes annually to make me pay a penalty for my energy and industry, by taxing me more than you.—Progress and Poverty.

BOOK OF THE LAW FOUND

LESSON XI, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 14.

Text of the Lesson, II Chron. xxxiv, 14-28. Commit Verses, 14-16—Golden Text, Ps. cxix, 72—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

14. "Hilkiah the priest found a book of the law of the Lord given by Moses."

Hezekiah cleansed and repaired the temple and restored the true worship.

He was succeeded by his son Manasseh, who reigned fifty-five years, and for a part of his reign tried to do as much for the devil as his father had done for God; but being taken prisoner and carried to Babylon, he repented and became a changed man; and being restored to his throne and kingdom, he sought to restore the worship of the true God. His son Amon reigned two years and did evil. He was succeeded by Josiah, his son, in whose reign our lesson is found. He began to reign at the age of 8 years: when 16 he began to seek God; and when 20 he began to cleanse the land of idols. At the age of 26 he began to repair the house of the Lord (see vs. 1, 3, 8), and it was as the priest took the money from the receptacles in the temple into which the people had put it that this old book was found.

15. "I have found the book of the law in the house of the Lord."

Thus said Hilkiah, the priest, to Shaphan, the scribe, as he gave him the book. It is probable that this is the book referred to in Deut. xxxi, 24-26, and if so it would be nearly 800 years old.

16. "And Shaphan carried the book to the king."

As Shaphan went to report to the king concerning the accomplishment of the work he took the book with him, having first read it for himself (II Kings xxii, 8).

17. "They have gathered together the money that was found in the house of the Lord, and have delivered it into the hands of the overseers, and to the hand of the workmen."

18. "Hilkiah the priest hath given me a book. And Shaphan read in it before the king."

19. "And it came to pass, when the king had heard the words of the law, that he rent his clothes."

By the law is the knowledge of sin (Rom. iii, 20), and as Josiah heard the law of the Lord he saw as he never had before how great the sins of the nation were. His heart trembled at the word, and therefore he was a blessed man (Isa. lxvi, 2).

20, 21. "Go, inquire of the Lord for me, and for them that are left in Israel and in Judah, concerning the words of the book that is found."

These men were appointed by the king to ascertain more fully concerning these words. Here is a priest and a king, but a prophet is wanted who will make plain the word of the Lord.

"Great is the wrath of the Lord that is poured out upon us, because our fathers have not kept the word of the Lord, to do after all that is written in this book."

There is more than enough in any of the last six chapters of Deuteronomy or in Lev. xxvi to cause Josiah to have uttered these words; and it was manifest to all that many of these curses had already actually come upon the land and upon the people because of their sins.

22. "And Hilkiah and they that the king had appointed went to Huldah, the prophetess."

This was in the eighteenth year of Josiah's reign, or five years after Jeremiah began to prophecy (Jer. i, 2), and we wonder that they did not go to him. Zephaniah also prophesied in Josiah's reign (Zeph. i, 1), but for some reason the messengers go to Huldah.

23. "And she answered them, Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, tell ye the man that sent you to me."

These men were only the messengers of King Josiah; their business was to deliver the king's message correctly and carry back a correct answer. Happy are all messengers who are privileged to carry a "Thus saith the Lord!"

24. "Thus saith the Lord, Behold I will bring evil upon this place, all the curses that are written in the book."

In Jer. ii, 12; vi, 19, the Lord calls heaven and earth to witness against the people because of their sins; and also in Isa. i, 2. In Jer. xix, 3, 15; xxxv, 17, He also repeats what He here says by Huldah, that He will surely bring evil upon them.

25. "Because they have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods."

Many were the entreaties by Moses and Joshua not to forsake God, and solemn the warnings as to what the result would be if they forsook Him (see Deut. xxxi, 16, 17; Josh. xxiv, 20). And yet that very thing they did, so that the prophets and Psalms are full of lamentations because Israel forsook the God of their fathers (Jer. ii, 12; v, 7; ix, 13; xix, 4; xxii, 9, etc.).

26. "And as for the king of Judah, who sent you to inquire of the Lord, so shall ye say unto him."

The evil spoken of was to come upon the ungodly people, but the Lord knoweth them that are His (II Tim. ii, 19), and no evil can befall them. Ezekiel saw in a vision a man with a writer's inkhorn, who was to set a mark upon the foreheads of those who sighed and cried because of the abominations done in the land; and when the destroying angel went forth he was to begin at the sanctuary, but not come near any upon whom was the mark.

27. "Because thine heart was tender, and thou didst humble thyself before God when thou heardst his words."

The Lord is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart. A broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise. God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble (Ps. xxxiv, 18; lvii, 17; Jas. iv, 6). He observes all who tremble at His word, and is ready to show Himself strong on their behalf (Isa. lxvi, 2; I Chron. xvi, 9). He hears the prayers of such. When we take heed to His word, and ask in accordance therewith, we may be sure that He hears.

28. "Behold, I will gather thee to thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered to thy grave in peace, neither shall thine eyes see all the evil."

Josiah was not to witness the sufferings of his people nor the desolation of his land. It was God's will for him that he should have a peaceful death and burial, while his spirit went to join the company of the redeemed who had passed over before him. That he died in battle was owing to his willfulness and his refusing to heed the words of God through Necho (chap. xxxv, 22, 23). We bring much evil upon ourselves which God would gladly spare us if we were only obedient. Let us humble ourselves to walk with God, and be in the fear of the Lord all the day long (Prov. xxiii, 17). Let us stand with the faithful few who seek to do right in the sight of the Lord. And may we be able to say sincerely, "The law of Thy mouth is better unto me than thousands of gold and silver."

ANOTHER BEAUTIFUL DECORATION DAY AND SERVICE.

The Masonic Fraternity of Tecumseh Decorate the Graves of their Deceased Brethren with Flowers,

The practice of decorating the graves of departed members has been observed by the Masonic fraternity in many places for several years. It is a very appropriate ceremony and is being more generally observed with each returning year.

This year Tecumseh Lodge concluded to institute the custom and the time selected was last Sunday afternoon. It proved to be a beautiful day for exercises of that character. The rain of Saturday had nicely laid the dust, the weather was cool and yet bright, with a keen, healthful breeze, and a few fleecy clouds occasionally shading the sun.

Shortly after two o'clock the members of the Tecumseh Lodge gathered at their Lodge room, and they were reinforced by a number of visiting brothers from Clinton, Manchester and other places. Promptly at three o'clock the procession filed out upon Chicago street with one hundred and twenty Masons in the ranks, and marched directly to the cemetery. Upon arriving at the grounds a hollow-square was formed upon a vacant block, South of the main avenue, and a short literary and musical program was presented.

THE PROGRAM.

A choir of male voices, all members of the order, led by Mr. Dickinson, sang "The Golden Shore." Miss Jennie Root, organist of the Eastern Star Lodge, presided at the organ. W. M., Mat Blosser, of Manchester, then recited a prayer from the Masonic Manual. The choir rendered a chant, "I Will Give You Rest." Editor C. F. Field gave an address upon the principles of Masonry. The address, though brief, was one of more than ordinary merit, and we take pleasure in printing it in full herewith.

EDITOR FIELD'S ADDRESS.

The occasion which calls us to this consecrated spot on this holy day of rest is one that appeals to all the nobler instincts of our nature—awakening emotions and inspiring thoughts which can not but make us better men, more charitable neighbors, more loyal citizens, truer Masons.

Respect and love for the dead, which prompts us to commemorate their virtues and forget their faults, belongs to the nobler side of human nature. For as intelligent and immortal beings, we have a spiritual as well as a physical nature, and the needs of our spiritual are no less real, though less tangible, than those of our physical. If we had no love for our friends we would forget them when they were gone from earth; if we did not believe in a higher existence than that of sense, there could be no such service as that which presents itself to us to-day, there could be no such ceremony as that in which we are about to engage.

But because of the promptings of that better nature with which our great Creator has endowed us, because we have a higher nature than the brute creatures around us, because of an innate consciousness that we are immortal by nature, we have been impelled to come to this beautiful city of the dead, in order to plant flowers upon the graves of our deceased brothers and commemorate their virtues. Because we have within us a firm faith in immortality we come here to do honor to those who have passed from our earthly lodge to the celestial lodge above, that house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

I need not tell you, brothers, that Masonry embodies noble sentiments and affords us valuable lessons of life. The principles that underlie the institution are as broad as human wisdom unaided by divine inspiration can conceive. Its beautiful symbols afford striking lessons of mortality, its precepts inspire to right living, its tenets are faultless, so far as human goodness and virtue can attain. And yet I would not be understood as placing Masonry on the same footing as Christianity. The one is of human origin, the other divine. The one carries with it such authority as can come from good and wise principles, conceived by intelligent but mortal beings; the other expresses the will of God himself, as embodied in his revealed word. The one is desirable for our social and moral advancement; the other is essential to our eternal happiness. But Masonry is, none the less, a blessing to the world. Though it cannot take the place of the Christian church, it in no way antagonizes it, but rather harmonizes with it in its teachings of virtue, morality and brotherly love.

Masonry is engaged in raising mankind to a higher plane of morals and in making men better citizens, better neighbors, and in no way interfering with their being better Christians. In its own sphere, therefore, it is engaged in doing a work of great value to mankind.

The origin of the order is vailed in obscurity. It is believed to be of great antiquity and it has vague traditions reaching back to the days of Solomon and Pythagoras. Whatever of truth there may be in these misty legends as to the early history of the order, is really of very little consequence to us who live in this 19th century of the Christian era. Masonry, as we understand it to-day, in its organized form, had its beginning in London in the early part of the 18th century, and was formulated by Christian men, actuated by a desire of being of service to their fellow men. The order is estimated to contain to-day over 2,000,000 members and to include over 20,000 lodges. To-day it is growing more rapidly than ever before, attracting to its altars many of the noblest and best men of the age.

Traditional Masonry has for its prime requirements belief in God, and opens its doors to Jew and Christian, Mohammedan and Brahmin. Its central idea is the universal brotherhood of man. Masonry, however, as practiced in civilized countries, is founded upon the Christian's book of books. The Holy Bible, with open page, is found upon every Masonic altar in Christendom. Its precepts are enjoined, its language is quoted, its doctrines are illustrated in the esoteric work of every legally constituted lodge of Free and Accepted Masons.

For these and many other reasons Masonry appeals to the moral and religious side of our nature and deserves the support of all good men and true.

Among the many profitable lessons which Masonry inculcates there is none more earnestly and forcibly taught than the doctrine of the immortality of the soul and the resurrection of the dead. What brother among us has not been thrilled, time and again by the sublimity with which the resurrection is taught in the esoteric work of the blue lodge! Who of us has not been inspired to a nobler conception of our immortal nature by the impressive ceremonies of our work! Surely, we can not be aught but elevated in purpose and broadened in mind by the sublime teachings of Masonry!

It is, therefore, peculiarly appropriate that we, as firm believers in a future life, should come to this sacred spot, on a day devoted to the Supreme Architect of the universe, before whom we have been so solemnly taught to bow, and place upon the graves of our dead brothers the emblems of beauty and immortality.

We come, without pomp or parade, to perform a simple ceremony of love and affection, to call to remembrance our departed brethren and to commemorate their virtues. Forty-one of them are quietly sleeping within these grounds awaiting the day of resurrection, when the Lion of the tribe of Judah shall prevail to raise their bodies as incorruptible as their souls.

Most of these brothers were known to at least some of us. It is but a short time since some of them went in and out among us. They have all knelt at the same altar, they have taken the same obligations, they have joined in the same ceremonies, as ourselves. As we plant the evergreen, the emblem of immortality, upon their graves, may we remember, that although mankind in a state of nature has never been able to prove the immortality of the soul, yet through the merits of the Lion of the tribe of Judah, we enjoy the blessed assurance of a life beyond the grave. As we place flowers upon their lonely beds, may we realize that, though earthly flowers fade and wither, the beautiful examples of well spent lives and the beneficent influences of a noble character as exemplified in the ideal Mason, will form an incorruptible garland whose fragrance will linger around our memories long after we have obeyed the summons of the Grand Warden of heaven, and leave behind us influences that will bless the world long after our bodies crumble into dust.

Permit me, brothers, to close these feeble words, by quoting the language of a brother who stood pre-eminent among the craft, Bro. Rob. Morris:

There's a world where all are equal, we are hurrying toward it fast;
We shall meet upon the level there, when the gates of death are past;
We shall stand before the Orient, and our Master will be there
To try the blocks we offer with his own unerring square.

We shall meet upon the level there, but never hence depart:
There's a mansion, 'tis all ready for each trusting, faithful heart;
There's a mansion and a welcome, and a multitude is there,
Who have met upon the level and been tried upon the square.

The choir rendered another song, "Solemn Strike the Funeral Chimes," which closed the literary program.

The members of the order then formed in procession and received from the members of the Eastern Star all the floral decorations. These were made in a uniform style, each one representing a square and compass, made of a light wooden frame and covered with evergreens and flowers. There were two large floral stars for the two deceased members of the Eastern Star Lodge.

The procession then made the circuit of the grounds, halting at convenient intervals and facing about towards the graves to be decorated. The ceremony of decoration was very simple, consisting of announcing the name of the deceased member with this formula: "In memory of our departed brother, ———, we deposit this emblem on his grave." This ceremony was performed by brothers J. F. Hicks and S. P. Hosmer. At its conclusion the procession reformed and marched back to the Lodge room.

A large crowd assembled at the cemetery to witness the exercises, and the spectators were most favorably impressed with them, most of the crowd remaining through the entire ceremony. The floral emblems were exceedingly beautiful and appropriate, and were prepared on Saturday by the members of the Eastern Star Order.

The Masonic fraternity of Tecumseh certainly have reason to congratulate themselves over the signal success of their first attempt to commemorate the Masonic Decoration Day.

Below is a full roster of the names of those departed ones whose graves were honored with floral emblems:

WALLA WALLA, W. T., May 29, 1891.

DEAR HERALD:—I have been a reader of your paper so long, and have so many friends who read it, to whom I cannot write personally, and yet of whom I think often and to whom I would like to send messages of love and good-will, that I have decided to write you a letter, and through you to all my friends who read your paper.

I have now been in Walla Walla only a month. I came via Omaha and the Union Pacific. One can come from Chicago to Pendleton, 30 or 40 miles from here, without change of cars. Pullman sleeper, Tourist sleeper, chair car and dining car all come from Chicago to Portland without change. The accommodations are excellent and agents and train men are kind and helpful.

The country, after leaving central Nebraska until you reach northern Oregon, is very uninteresting. The mountains are in sight but little, though much of the way you are from 3,000 to 8,000 feet above the sea. Wyoming and Idaho—or at least the portions through which the Union Pacific runs—are a desolate plateau, with little but rocks and sage brush. They say that cattle live on the plains but what they eat is a mystery. Cheyenne, Rawlins and Laramie are considerable towns but if I lived there I would be glad to get back to "God's country again." They say that the railroad goes through the poorest part of the two States and I can believe it.

But when I woke up at Pendleton, Oregon, in the morning, and took the train for Walla Walla, I seemed to be in a new world. Grass and wheat and trees and orchards began to appear.

The Walla Walla Valley is a beautiful valley. The Walla Walla River rises in the Blue Mountains, about eight or ten miles from the city, and mepties into the Columbia at Wellala, thirty-five miles from here.

It is rolling prairie, intersected by numerous streams of clear, fresh water from the mountains and covered with fields of wheat. When Chas. Francis Adams, then President of the Union Pacific R. R., was here a few years ago, they took him out a few miles from the city to a high point commanding a wide view of the Valley, and he said that he had never seen so beautiful a valley, though he had travelled in Europe and all over the United States. A friend took me to the same place a few days after I came and I can assent to its beauty.

It is certainly a wonderful wheat country. They have but little rain here,—none from the last of June to October. They sow the wheat in the dry dust in the fall and when the rains come it springs up, and they say that wheat has never failed here. They count 30 bushels to the acre a poor crop. Sometimes they raise 60 and even more to the acre. They use binders that cut a swath twice as wide as the binders in the east, thresh it in the field, put it into sacks and leave it in the fields till they are ready to haul it to market.

They summer fallow the ground and sow in the fall, so it takes two years to make a crop of wheat,—one year wheat, the next fallow ground, but no manure. They raise alfalfa—two, three, or four crops a season. They also sow spring wheat for hay and raise barley and oats to some extent.

Near Walla Walla the land is divided into 5, 10 and 20-acre tracts and sold or leased for fruit and vegetable gardens. They raise and ship immense quantities of vegetables and all kinds of fruits, the small fruits, and apples, peaches, pears, plums, cherries, apricots, nectarines, etc. The winter lasts about six weeks and is sometimes quite cold, but they begin to plow and plant in February. Though so far north the season is from four to six weeks earlier than in southern Michigan. We have in the market now all kinds of vegetables, even early potatoes and turnips raised here. Cherries and strawberries have been in the market over a week. Roses of all kinds are in full bloom and very abundant.

Walla Walla is a beautiful town of 7,000, with finer business blocks than Adrian and more large and fine dwellings with elegant lawns. There are twelve or more churches, not very well patronized, I am sorry to say. About 400 soldiers are in garrison at Fort Walla Walla, just out of the town. The State Penitentiary is located here, a large Catholic hospital, Whitman College, under the care of the Congregationalists, and the Seventh Day Second Adventists have purchased large lands near here and will begin work on a college this summer. Two of their leading men from Battle Creek, Mich., have been here the past week to make arrangements for it. The city is well supplied with as fine water as I ever saw, soft and cold, from large springs near the city. It is cold enough for use in the hottest weather without ice. The lawns and gardens are sprinkled with it and the houses are all supplied.

The city is so embowered in trees that one can see but little of it from any eminence around. The one drawback here is the dust, which in the late summer and early fall fills the country roads over which the wheat is drawn from fence to fence as high as the hubs of the wheels and envelopes driver and team in a cloud of dust as fine as flour and with a wind makes a cloud that hides the sun.

I have always been charmed with southern Michigan and am still; but here they do not have the long winters and the late springs. Old residents think that the climate here the year round is the finest they have known. I like Walla Walla because it is like a Michigan town. It is not prohibition. Saloons abound; but since the lynching of a gambler by the soldiers for killing one of their comrades the saloons have been closed on Sunday. Improvement in morals and manners will come with time, and I hope that the church to which I minister will have no small share in this good work. I love dear old Raisin and cherish tender memories of my people there. But the work is on, the needs are greater here, and Providence seems to have called me hither, and I shall try to build up a strang, vigorous, working church.

The State Sunday School Convention meets at Walla Walla next month.

To my friends in Raisin church, and to my fellow workers in the Sunday School cause in the County I send greeting and cheers. We are on the winning side and we are enlisted for the war.

Yours truly,
L. M. BELDEN.

Hosmer's jewelry store will hereafter be known as "The White Front." The front of his store has blossomed out into a beautiful white, which is a very appropriate color for a jewelry store.

Mrs. Ethlyn Clough, of the Brooklyn Exponent, has taken a position on the Jackson Courier. She employs a good foreman to take charge of the Exponent and will give her attention henceforth to the duties of her new position.

Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Brown, of Toledo, came here on Saturday and were the guests of Miss A. M. Hewett until yesterday. Mrs. Brown passed her school days in Tecumseh and has many friends among the older residents. Mr. Brown returned home yesterday and his wife will remain until Saturday to complete her visit.

Albion College commencement occurs on the 25th inst. The year has been the most prosperous in its history. A faculty of twenty-five teachers and an enrollment of five hundred and twenty-nine pupils with a Freshmau class of sixty-eight show this institution to be not only in a flourishing condition but entitled to rank among the promising schools of the West.

The new time cards on the railroads make quite a change in the time of closing the mails. Mails over the Lake Shore will go substantially as heretofore. On the Mackinaw the mail west will go earlier in the day. The mail east will go in the forenoon instead of afternoon. The corrections will all be found in the post-office time card, as published this week.

G. Griswold, of Tecumseh, was here last week and paid for two years to The Messenger. Mr. Griswold was three years old when his parents settled near the present site of Tecumseh and has lived for 66 years near the original settlement, never having moved but once or twice in his life. He believes that he has lived coutinuously in the county the longest of any of the old pioneers. While there are others who came here before him and are here now, they have not lived continuously in the county all these years. Speak out if you know of any man or woman who has lived over 66 consecutive years in this county.—Messenger.

A late copy of the Isbell, Ala, Progress has been received, from which we learn that our old friend Frank Baxter is now located in that new booming city. He is the secretary of the Isbell Land Co., a company of large capital organized to develope the new town. The city is located in the center of the iron region of Northern Alabama and is destined to become a wealthy mining town. Among a large number of items about the Land Co. we select this one, showing that Frank is already on the ground prepared to push business:

W. F. Baxter, the Secretary of the Land Company, accompanied by his wife, arrived Thursday to take charge of the details of the land sale and arrange for other matters of interest to the future of the "Industrial City." They are the guests of Dr. Oscar Sargent.

Artistic Photography.

An important change in Photo parlors has taken place in our city, by which Mr. C. H. Daws assumes ownership of the Heck gallery. The people of Tecumseh congratulate themselves on securing so able an artist as Mr. Daws has proven himself to be in the many years in which he was connected with the Fairbanks' studio of Adrian, whose work, by the way, is more than locally famous. If artistic posing and elegant workmanship is the factor for Mr. Daws' success we are assured of the same. He expects to open the gallery and be in readiness to receive customers on Monday, June 22d.

SIR JOHN IS DEAD.

Grief in Canada Over the Death of Premier Macdonald.

He Passes Away Quietly at Earnscliffe at 10:15 O'Clock Saturday Night—His Death Leaves the Dominion Without a Cabinet.

SIR JOHN MACDONALD.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 8.—Sir John Macdonald, premier of the dominion, died Saturday night at 10:15 at Earnscliffe. He never rallied from unconsciousness and passed quietly away. It was hoped that his consciousness and ability to take nourishment and sleep until Friday night would lead to the absorption of the clot of blood resulting from the original hemorrhage of the brain, and ultimately by reason of his immense vitality to complete recovery. He died without a struggle surrounded by Lady Macdonald, Hugh John Macdonald, Mary Macdonald, the only daughter of the dead chieftain, John A. Macdonald, his grandson, Mrs. Stewart, a relative of the family, and Joseph Pope and Fred White, his secretaries.

The official programme of the funeral arrangements is as follows: The body will be privately moved from Earnscliffe to the parliament buildings and will lie in state there from 10 o'clock Tuesday morning till the hour of the funeral. The state funeral will leave the parliament buildings at 1 o'clock p. m. Wednesday for St. Alban's church and thence to the Canadian Pacific railway station, whence the body will be conveyed to Kingston. The body will lie in state at the city hall, Kingston, until Thursday noon, when the interment will take place.

The premier's death dissolves the ministry and Canada is without a cabinet. It is now in order for the governor general to call upon some members of the late cabinet to form a ministry. Who this will be is of course a mystery as yet, but in all probability Sir John Thompson, minister of justice, will be the governor general's choice. His excellency will then issue a royal commission empowering the new premier to act and appoint the members of his cabinet. When this is done the premier will report his decision to the house of commons and the new government will again live.

IT HAS THEM ALL.

The Whisky Trust Completes a Gigantic Monopoly.

CHICAGO, June 5.—The whisky trust has triumphed at last. The Distilling and Cattle Feeding Company, the incorporated name of the trust, has purchased the Henry H. Shufeldt and the Calumet Distilling Company's plants, thus creating one of the most absolute and complete monopolies the commercial world has ever heard of. The purchase price, it is understood, is in the neighborhood of $4,500,000. The purchase leaves the trust practically without a rival. The trust was organized four years ago, and with these purchases has succeeded in gobbling up every distillery in the entire country.

Gen. Wallace Says He Has Retired.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., June 6.—Gen. Lew Wallace, when shown an article from the Indianapolis Sentinel saying that he was scheming for the republican nomination for governor, denies that he had ever done a thing in that direction. Moreover he emphatically declares that he is entirely out of politics so far as nominations are concerned. The Sentinel said that Gen. Wallace had some very damaging papers against United States Treasurer Nebeker and only allowed him to be appointed to his present position on condition that the latter should use his influence in the state convention for Wallace.

Blown Up by Dynamite.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., June 8.—About 7 o'clock Saturday night at Chattanooga furnace a dynamite explosion occurred in which three colored laborers lost their lives. The furnace has been closed down and the workmen were blasting out the old iron in the foundation to rebuild the stack.

Drink Was His Ruin.

KEOKUK, Ia., June 5.—William Apfel committed suicide at Warsaw, Ill., Thursday by shooting himself with a revolver. He was formerly a wealthy cigar manufacturer, but was ruined by drink. He left a note saying he could not quit drinking and hence had determined to kill himself.

Had a String Tied to Him.

MEADVILLE, Pa., June 6.—Dr. John Thompson, of Linesville, this county, tied his feet together with a rope, hitched the rope to a tree, and then plunged headlong into a creek and was drowned. He was 67 years old and had frequently threatened suicide on account of ill health.

Nebraska Murderers Hanged.

OMAHA, Neb., June 6.—Charles Shepherd and William Furst, who murdered Carl Pulsifer December 10, 1889, and then robbed the body of $20, were hanged at Fremont at 10:39 Friday morning. Shepherd nearly fainted on the gallows, but Furst acted entirely unconcerned.

Death of John E. Lovejoy.

MONTICELLO, Ia., June 6.—John E. Lovejoy, the last surviving brother of the martyred Elijah Lovejoy, died Friday morning at his home in Center Junction.

Weighed 507 Pounds.

Killed His Two Brothers.

WATERVILLE, Wash., June 8.—Jacob von Bremen quarreled with his two brothers, John and Henry, over a division of stock and killed them both.

Population of London.

LONDON, June 6.—The census of London shows a population of 4,211,056. The outer ring has a population of 1,422,276.

INNOCENTS SLAIN.

Fanatics Blow Up a Schoolhouse in Russia.

LONDON, June 8.—Advices from St. Petersburg say the schoolmaster of the Tersk district has, by his liberal ideas and teachings, excited the religious frenzy of the peasant inhabitants of the district, as they saw in him a power which they considered inimical to the conservative views they had been taught and the interests they deemed their duty to protect. They accordingly held a meeting and as a result they dug a mine under the schoolhouse, and during the morning session when the room was filled with children they proceeded to fire it. A tremendous explosion ensued and the building was completely wrecked. The noise at once attracted a crowd and busy hands soon set to work to bring the wounded and dead children from the ruins. The scene was pitiable in the extreme, strong men breaking down like their wives and daughters when the corpse of some little creature more horribly mangled than the others was brought out by tender hands. It was found that ten children had been killed outright and twelve others have been seriously wounded. Some of these it is feared will not be able to survive the injuries received. By a curious coincidence the schoolmaster against whom the whole affair was plotted and whom it was sought to remove escaped unhurt. The fanatics believed he alone would be killed, but they mistook the position in which his chair was placed, as well as the strength of the powder they had placed in the mine. Their stupidity, therefore, has resulted in this fearful slaughter.

A. BRUTE'S FATE.

A Child-Murderer Receives His Just Deserts in Ontario.

L'ORIGINAL, Ont., June 5.—Narcisse Laroque, who on October 7 last brutally murdered two little girls named McGonegal, was hanged here at 8:05 a. m. He died without a word and without the faintest sign of fear. He made no confession.

[Larocque's victims were the children of James McGonagle, a farmer living a mile and a half from the village of Cumberland, and were aged 14 and 12 years respectively. On Tuesday, October 7, the girls went to school as usual. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon they started for home and were last seen alive half a mile from there. They did not reach home and on Thursday a searching party scoured the country for them. At 10 oclock that night the party came on the two bodies of the girls in Gamble's Bush. They were lying side by side, partially covered by dead leaves. Mary's school books lay in her lap. Their tongues were protruded, and there was a dark circle on each neck, showing that death was caused by strangulation. They had also been assaulted. Larocque was arrested and convicted on purely circumstantial evidence.]

DAMAGED BY STORMS.

MARTINSVILLE, Ind., June 5.—A tornado swept over this town and vicinity yesterday, and every tree and house in its course was flattened and the damage to stock, grain, fruit and wheat was very great.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., June 5.—During a hurricane here yesterday three dwelling houses, a factory and a number of sheds were blown to splinters, several buildings unroofed and trees blown down.

THE CHASE ENDED.

The Chilian Vessel Itata Surrenders to Uncle Sam.

Five Thousand Rifles Secured—Her Action Due to an Arrangement Between the Authorities—Judicial Proceedings Will Be of Interest.

THE ITATA GIVEN UP.

IQUIQUE, June 5.—The Itata arrived here Thursday morning with 5,000 rifles aboard. It was immediately surrendered to the American admiral—McCann. The commander of the Itata states that the arms were not embarked at San Diego, but at a point many miles at sea. The Iquique government claims that this circumstance modifies the situation considerably and will probably result in a speedy solution of the difficulties between the admirals and the junta. The authorities at the same time declare that the cargo of the Itata is of little importance, taking into consideration the small number of arms.

The Itata's flight began about the 5th of May. She had laid to off San Diego, Cal., and there taken on a cargo of small arms for the Chilian insurgents or congress faction. Her action was discovered by the United States marshal, who seized her for violation of the neutrality law. In confidence that there would be no resistance to the seizure the marshal left a deputy and two men in custody of the ship. During the night the Itata put to sea, but after she had gone a short distance the marshal's posse and the pilot were sent ashore in a small boat. The matter was reported to Washington and the cruiser Charleston ordered to go in pursuit. The Charleston was at San Francisco, and before she could be coaled and provisioned the Itata had good five days' start of her. The Itata was convoyed at the outset by the Chilian warship Esmeralda, but the inability of the latter to obtain coal at Acapulco put her out of the race. The commander of the Itata had hoped to make some port in the hands of the insurgents, but the fact that he was out of coal and short of provisions, as well as the knowledge that he was closely pursued, drove him to Iquique. Ships of the United States navy that were here awaiting her coming promptly demanded her surrender, and the commander of the Itata, after a brief parley, complied.

IQUIQUE, June 8.—There is great excitement here over the decision of the American admiral to take the Itata without allowing the discharge of her arms and ammunition. The press is very bitter and considers that the United States, the cradle of republican ideas, commits a grave error in thus indirectly assisting the dictator.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Information has been received in this city from Chili to the effect that the insurgent schooner Itata, before proceeding to Iquique from Tocopila, landed at the latter place 5,000 rifles and a large amount of supplies.

A FATAL MISTAKE.

Physicians make no more fatal mistake than when they inform patients that nervous heart troubles come from the stomach and are of little consequence. Dr. Franklin Miles, the noted Indiana specialist, has proven the contrary in his new book on "Heart Disease," which may be had free at Baker & Hall's who guarantee and recommends Dr. Miles' unequaled New Heart Cure, which has the largest sale of any heart remedy in the world. THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent;
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. THE LULLABY.

He was a rollicking baby boy, a little storm of laughter,
And he filled the house with babble from the collar to the rafter,
Tipsy with fun and mad with mirth, a whirl of rush and rattle,
A music march was life to him, of dance and song and prattle;
And his mother sang to him each night, as to her neck he clung,
And this the quaint, queer lullaby that his fond mother sung:
He's a plump little lump of a boy
He's a fat little chunk of a man;
Go asleep, mamma's chunk of a baby,
Go asleep, mamma's baby boy.

But as the fateful years rolled on these feet were swift to wander,
Those baby feet, beyond the fields, beyond the mountains yonder;
And driven far and far away by fate's resistless forces,
Full often did those wayward feet stray in forbidden courses;
But through the revel-rush of life, above the clamorous din,
That baby song his mother sung, unbidden, would steal in:
He's a plump little lump of a boy,
He's a fat little chunk of a man;
Go asleep, mamma's chunk of a baby
Go asleep, mamma's little boy.

Through wild and dizzy mazes, through chasms dark with danger,
Pressed on the errant footsteps of this worn and reckless ranger:
Far from the placid vales of youth, of sunrise hope and gladness,
Timed to the drunken music of the fitful march of madness;
And still he heard his mother sing, whate'er the way he trod,
Through primrose vales or desert paths scorched by the wrath of God:
He's a plump little lump of a boy,
He's a fat little chunk of a man;
Go asleep, mamma's chunk of a baby,
Go asleep, mamma's baby boy.

His mother broke with grieving that her only boy should perish,
But nursed the love ineffable that only mothers cherish;
But weary years of grieving brought their heritage of madness,
Then the poor, gray, crazy mother felt again the old-time gladness;
For in her maddened thought she clasped her baby to her breast,
And with the old-time lullaby she soothed him to his rest:
He's a plump little lump of a boy,
He's a fat little chunk of a man;
Go asleep, mamma's chunk of a baby,
Go asleep, mamma's baby boy.

And then her wandering boy came home, to youthful scenes returning,
A nobler purpose in his soul, his wayward follies spurning;
She knew him not, and heeded not his penitent tears and pleading,
For madness is both stern and deaf and hears no interceding;
The strong man bowed before her as she sang her crazy joy,
And he said: "I've lost my mother, but my mother's found her boy:"
He's a plump little lump of a boy,
He's a fat little chunk of a man;
Go asleep, mamma's chunk of a baby
Go asleep, mamma's baby boy.

WHICH ONE?

The Predicament of a Bachelor Determined to Marry.

"You don't mean it."

"But I do, though."

"Isn't it a rather sudden conclusion?"

"On the contrary, my dear boy, I have been thinking of it for some time."

Fred Bent gave a low whistle.

"Well, I must say you have kept it mighty private."

"The best policy. If I had told you in the first place you might have persuaded me out of the notion. Now it is impossible."

"But you said you should never marry."

"All blow, my dear fellow. When a man is young, a mere boy, he does well to rail at marriage, and declare he will never wed. When he arrives at my years and gray hairs he will think better of it."

"But Laurie, honest old fellow, were you never in love?"

"Me—never!" And Laurence Weston laughed scornfully at the idea as he lighted a fresh cigar.

"Then you are not going to marry for love?" inquired Bent.

"No."

"What for, then?"

"Oh, a variety of things, I suppose," was Weston's answer; as he settled himself more firmly in his crimson easy chair and looked contemplatively at the ceiling, while the blue wreaths of smoke from his choice cigar made an ethereal halo about his handsome head.

"Money, for one thing, I fancy," he went on, "and then I am growing older, my chances to marry well—to my liking—will not always be as fair as they are now, and I always intended to marry finally."

"Oh! did you?"

"Yes, though I would never own it, but I am in earnest now, and I mean to marry before this year is out."

"Have you selected the lady?"

"There are two of them."

"Oh! you are going over to the Mormons."

"No, but you know a reserve force comes handy. 'If one won't'—you know the rest. Now, my dear Fred, all this nonsense about falling in love is bosh—pure humbug. I never could love one woman any better than another, unless I knew her better, and discovered in her nature more lovable qualities. I think it is much better to select a woman whom you think in every way likely to suit you, and then set about learning to like her. When a man is head over ears in love his judgment is warped and his eyesight proverbially poor."

Fred Bent laughed good-naturedly.

"I don't know, Laurie—I am always in love, so, of course, my advice is worthless to you."

"Exactly," said his friend. "Now these two young ladies—"

"Would you object to telling me their names?" interrupted Bent.

"Not in the least. They are both called Blanche."

"What! the two Blanches?"

"Yes, Miss Sturtevant and Miss Wellington—both very suitable in every way, and, as far as I know, 'heart whole and fancy free.'"

"Well, you ought to win," said Bent. "You are good looking and, by Jove, you have plenty of assurance. But I must be going," and he arose.

At the door he turned and called back:

"Shall I see you at the Leonards' to-morrow night?"

"Yes, I shall be there."

"All right; good night," and, whistling softly to himself, he passed out of the Merrick house, where Laurence Weston had his bachelor quarters.

After he had gone his friend finished his cigar and then, with a smile on his lips, retired for the night.

Laurence Weston was a handsome man, and he knew it and made use of the knowledge whenever he could.

He was a great favorite with the weaker sex—handsome men always are—and had he desired to, he might have counted his conquests by the score.

He was not wealthy. His income barely sufficed for his own luxurious living, and when he married he could by no means afford to despise that dross for which men have, before now, sold their souls.

Surely it was no harm for him to part with that insignificant organ in his anatomy, which he called a heart, in return for a fair amount of loveliness and gold.

The next night found him faultlessly attired, at Mrs. Leonard's reception.

A shimmer of peach-bloom satin, in the moving mass of humanity, attracted him, and taking a pair of sparkling brown eyes as guiding stars, he made his way to the side of Blanche Sturtevant.

As she made room for him beside her, she said:

"I thought you didn't like receptions."

"I do not, as a general thing," he replied, "but this had a peculiar attraction for me."

The meaning he threw into the glance he bestowed on her sent the delicate rose bloom to her cheeks, and she looked ten times as lovely to his fastidious eyes.

But suddenly, while he gazed at her pretty, flushed face, a queer sensation seized him. He felt actually timid about asking this beautiful girl to be his wife—even though he had been for years a man of the world. Somehow he felt as though she could read his very thoughts with those bright eyes.

"Do I look very badly?"

Her musical voice recalled him to his senses.

"I beg your pardon. Was I staring at you? Your dress is beautiful—and you."

"Thank you," she said, hurriedly.

"I fancied from the intentness of your gaze you had not quite decided whether I would do or not," and she laughed softly.

"I was in a brown study," he returned.

The crowd surged around them, and two or three men looked anxiously at the seat occupied by Weston.

Some music was playing in another room, and when the strain had ended he spoke again.

"Miss Sturtevant," he said, "I wanted to ask you a question to-night, but the crowd is so great that there is not much opportunity for confidential talks. If I will write to you to-morrow, will you favor me with a reply?"

"Certainly!" and the brown eyes smiled sweetly, and perhaps unconsciously, at him, as he rose to relinquish his seat to another admirer.

"There—that was neatly done," was his mental comment, "no fuss, no love-making to undergo—nothing disagreeable, and, if the fates are kind, I shall have one of the finest looking and one of the richest women in C. for my wife."

He threaded his way carefully among the crowd, replying to a kindly greeting here and there, and presently found himself in the conservatory.

But it was occupied.

Standing under a tall palm, a radiant vision in blue and gold, stood Blanche Wellington.

His face brightened as he approached her, for anything beautiful always appealed strongly to the artistic side of his nature, and what could be more beautiful than this tall, queenly woman with a crown of golden hair, and the deep blue of a violet lurking in the cool depths of her eyes!

What an opportunity there was to win for his own this lovely girl!

His conversation with Miss Sturtevant, a few moments ago, crossed his mind, but he dismissed it with a thought.

He could easily explain to her his request. Thank Heaven, he had not committed himself!

Miss Wellington turned to him with a smile.

"So you are here this evening. Do you enjoy it?"

"I have not—until now."

What did it matter if that sweet speech was false, it was very neat. At any rate it brought a beautiful color to the soft cheek of the maiden before him.

"Is it not beautiful in here?" she said.

"Yes," fervently, "it is a fit setting for you."

"Now you are flattering me."

"Indeed I am not, I am always truthful," and he threw a world of counterfeit tenderness into the dark eyes he turned upon her.

It was only a step from that to something more—and he took it.

Holding her soft, white hand in his, he began:

"Miss Blanche, I am growing very tired of a lonely life. I want some one to share my griefs and joys. Will you be my wife?"

"Really—I—I hardly know," she began.

At that moment gay voices were heard coming in their direction, and she drew her hand away from his clasp.

In another moment the lively party were in sight, and he had only time to murmur: "I will write to-morrow—will you reply?"

"Yes," and presently the cool, retired place was invaded by the merry-makers, and Laurence Weston beat a hasty retreat.

The next day he wrote the two letters he had promised—for he was a man of his word.

To Miss Sturtevant he wrote this:

MY DEAR MISS BLANCHE—I wish to apologize to you for some remarks I made to you last night, and to say that I have changed my mind concerning the matter I spoke of. It was really of no consequence, and I beg you will not give it any thought. It was only an idle question, which merely amounted to nothing, and in fact the cause which existed for my request no longer exists. Please treat the whole affair as a joke, and oblige. Yours, L. WESTON.

"There," he said, as he pushed the sheet to one side, "I fancy that disposes of Miss Sturtevant very easily. She will think it was some foolish joke—will never fancy I intended to ask her to marry me—for she thinks me a confirmed bachelor. She is a lively, good natured girl, and will soon forget the whole affair. Now, for Miss Wellington."

On another sheet of the fine cream note paper he always used, he wrote to Miss Wellington thus:

MY DEAR MISS BLANCHE—Had time permitted last night I should have urged you to accept my hand and heart. But the crowd was so great and the opportunity for private conversation so limited, that it was impossible. You promised to write to me—may I hope for a favorable answer? If so, please appoint a time for me to call and tell you all I would say, more fully than I can commit it to paper. Yours, L. WESTON.

"There," as he folded both letters and placed them in their envelopes, "I feel pretty sure of her reply, and now for a smoke."

This was in the morning, and in the evening Fred Bent dropped in, as was his custom.

For a few moments the two men smoked in silence.

Then there was a knock on the door, which Mr. Weston answered.

When he came back into the room he held in his hand two letters.

"If you will excuse me, Fred, I will read these," he said.

"Oh, certainly—go ahead. From the fair charmers, I suppose?"

Laurence Weston opened the letters at random.

The first read like this:

DEAR MR. WESTON—Although your proposal was a great surprise to me, for I always thought you were not a marrying man, I can say that I am inclined to regard it—and you—favorably. If you will call to-morrow at ten I shall be glad to receive you. Yours, BLANCHE STURTEVANT.

Blank dismay was pictured on his features as he opened the other and read:

MR. WESTON: Dear Sir—It is entirely immaterial to me whether your language of last night was a joke or not, and no apologies are necessary. Allow me to advise you, though, that in well-regulated society such jokes are considered insults to a woman. Yours, BLANCHE WELLINGTON.

"What's the matter, Laurie? You look as though you had a shock," said Bent.

"So I have. Here, read these," and he pushed the letters toward his friend.

Bent read them.

Then he burst into hearty laughter.

"What are you laughing at?" asked Weston.

"Ha, ha! Because, really, old fellow, I can't help it. It's too good—well, if it isn't rich. Did you mean to do it?"

"Mean to do what?"

"Can you ask me?" said Bent, tragically, waving the two sheets of scented note-paper in the air.

"What have I done? For Heaven's sake tell me if you can, Fred."

"Is it possible that you don't know? You are not very shrewd, Laurie, or else you are in love, and love, you know, is proverbially blind."

"Go on," said Laurence, impatiently.

"Why, man alive, you put your letters in the wrong envelopes, as near as I can see."

A sudden ray of intelligence darted over Weston's face.

"I believe I did," he said, ruefully, "and see what a scrape I have drawn my devoted head into."

"Could you make it up with Miss Wellington?"

"I feel sure I could. But Miss Sturtevant has practically accepted me, and see how I must insult her."

"And yet," mused Fred, "you ought to explain to Miss Wellington."

"I know it," distractedly, "but if I do, I must also explain to Miss Sturtevant."

"Now, honestly, Laurie, do you care anything for either one?"

Laurence Weston met his friend's gaze without flinching.

"No, honestly, Fred, I like and admire one as much as the other."

"Why not give them both up?"

"And get into the mire deeper than I am? Besides, I am determined to marry one of them."

"Well," said Bent, rising to go, "I am sorry for you, Laurie. This is what your assurance and sound common sense has brought you to. For my part, I prefer romance. Good-by, old fellow."

"Good-by," came mournfully from the depths of the easy chair.

At the door Bent halted.

"I say, Laurie, I might help you out. I might marry one of them."

"If you only would; but which one?"

"Aye, that's it," echoed Bent, as he closed the door and went down the hall; and the evening breezes wafted his words back, "that's the rub—which one?"—Agnes L. Pratt, in Boston Globe.

Superficial Judgment of Men.

In our judgment of men we are to beware of giving any great importance to occasional acts. By acts of occasional generosity weak men endeavor to redeem themselves in their own estimation, vain men to exalt themselves in that of mankind. It may be observed that there are no men more worthless and selfish, in the general tenor of their lives, than some who, from time to time, perform feats of generosity. Sentimental selfishness will commonly vary its indulgences in this way, and vainglorious selfishness will break out into acts of munificence. But self-government and self-denial are not to be relied upon for real strength, except in so far as they are found to be exercised in detail.—N. Y. Ledger.

A WONDER WORKER.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be Consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. "An almost fatal attack of La Grippe last winter left me with nasal Catarrh and such susceptibility to bronchial irritation that the slightest exposure would develop it, and a very little effort in public speaking would result in a distressing hoarseness so that I had serious fears of permanent disability.

"Besides, I suffered with dyspeptic troubles—notably what is popularly known as heartburn, from which I found it difficult to obtain relief. I was induced by a friend to try KING'S ROYAL GERMETUER, and it gives me great pleasure to say that its effect has been as magical as 'Koch's Lymph' is reputed to be, which is also a 'germ destroyer,' though taken in a different way.

"Catarrh, bronchial irritation, and dyspepsia have all disappeared before one bottle of the GERMETUER has been used.

Col. Fenn had quite an accident last Sunday. While hitching up the horses to come to church, he made a miss-step and fell, striking on his knee and injuring it quite severely. The Sunday School Institute held at the M. E. Church Tuesday and Wednesday was a great success. Many guests were here from neighboring towns in the district. The ladies of the society prepared dinner and supper on both days in the basement of the church. Everyone seemed to consider the meeting to have been one of great benefit to all.

Chas. Fabrique and Johnny Machin started home from Tecumseh last Saturday night and as they neared the bridge by the Episcopal church they heard a team coming from the other direction and attempted to pass; but it was so dark they ran into the wagon on one side and the bridge on the other and broke both forward wheels. The horse ran home and after drawing the buggy to the side of the road the gentlemen walked home.

A SOLDIER'S LETTER.

Dear Madam—I'm a soldier and my speech is rough and plain; I'm not much used to writing and I hate to give you pain. But I promised that I'd do it—he thought it might be so—if it came from one who loved him perhaps 'twould ease the blow. By this time you must surely know the truth I fain would hide, and you'll pardon a rough soldier's work while I tell you how he died.

'Twas the night before the battle and in our crowded tent more than one brave boy was sobbing and many a knee was bent. For we knew not when the morrow, when its bloody work was done, how many that were seated there should see its setting sun. 'Twas not so much for self they cared as for the loved at home; and 'tis always worse to think of than to hear the cannons boom.

'Twas then we left the crowded tent—your soldier boy and I—and we both breathed freer standing underneath the clear blue sky. I was more than ten years older, but he seemed to take to me, and oftener than the younger ones he sought my company. He seemed to want to talk of home and those he held most dear, and though I'd none to talk of yet I always loved to hear.

So then he told me on that night of the time he came away, and how you sorely grieved for him, but would not let him stay. And how his own fond hope had been, that when this war was through, he might go back with honor to his friends at home and you. He named his sisters, one by one, and then a deep flush came, while he told me of another, but did not speak her name. And then he said: "Dear Robert; it may be that I fall, and will you write to them at home how I loved and spoke of all?" So I promised, but I did not think the time would come so soon. The fight was just three days ago—he died to-day at noon. It seems so hard that one so loved as he was should be gone, while I should still be living here, who had no friends at home.

It was in the morrow's battle—fast rained the shot and shell; he was fighting close beside me and I saw him when he fell. So then I took him in my arms and laid him on the grass—'twas going against orders but I think they'll let it pass. 'Twas a Minnie ball that struck him—it entered at the side; and they did not think it fatal till the morning that he died.

So when he found that he must go he called me to his bed, and said: "You'll not forget to write when you hear that I am dead? And you'll tell them how I loved them and bid them all good-bye. I tried to do the best I could and did not fear to die. And underneath my pillow there's a curl of golden hair; there's a name upon the paper—send it to my mother's care. Last night I wanted so to live; I seemed so young to go. Last week I passed my birthday; I was nineteen, you know. When I thought of all I wished to do it seemed so hard to die; but then I prayed to God for grace and my cares are all gone by." And here his voice grew weaker and he partly raised his head, and whispered, "Good-bye, mother," and so your boy was dead.

I wrapped his cloak around him and we bore him out to-night, and laid him by a clump of trees, where the moon was shining bright. And we carved him out a headboard, as skillful as we could; if you wish to find it I can tell you where we stood.

I send you back his hymn book and the cap he used to wear, and a lock I cut the night before of his bright, curling hair. I send you back his Bible; the night before he died we turned its leaves together, as I read it by his side. I've kept the belt he always wore; he told me so to do; it has a hole upon the side—'tis where the ball went through.

And now I've done his bidding; there's nothing more to tell; but I shall always mourn with you the boy we loved so well.

OBITUARY.

Died at her home in Cambridge, May 20, 1891, of consumption, Hattie, wife of Frank Alderdyce. The deceased was a member of the Presbyterian church at Tecumseh. Through her strong christian faith she was enabled to meet the end with calm resignation. The funeral occurred at the residence, Rev. J. H. Fleming, of Brooklyn, officiating. She was buried in the cemetery at Cambridge junction. Besides a host of friends and relatives, she leaves a husband and daughter to mourn their loss.

The above notice is clipped from the Brooklyn Exponent. Mrs. Alderdyce was a sister of S. J. Helm, and of Mrs. M. P. Brown and her early life was passed here in Tecumseh where she had warm personal friends, who will regret to learn of her early departure to that home above. She was a member of the class that graduated from our high school in 1879., and did excellent work teaching in several schools previous to her marriage to Mr. Alderdyce of Cambridge, where she has since resided.

Card of Thanks.

I thank the business men, the benevolent ladies and kind-hearted neighbors for their sympathy and substantial aid during the sickness of my children and death of my husband.

MRS. R. VANDUSEN.

A CLOUD OF WITNESSES.

We know of no medicine that has so many testimonials to its efficiency as S. S. S., the great blood purifier. Many of the best known people in the country certify to the marvellous results it has wrought in the various forms of disease for which it is recommended. These testimonials come not alone from persons who have witnessed the effects of the medecine. Practicing physicians, druggists, pharmacists — in fact, all who have had an opportunity of observing the cures brought about by this great blood remedy—bear willing testimony to its efficacy. In its field, which is a wide one, covering some of the most serious ailments of humanity, S. S. S. has no rival.

TO DISPEL COLDS,

Headaches and Fevers, to cleanse the system effectually, yet gently, when costive or billious, or when the blood is impure or sluggish, to permanently cure habitual constipation, to awaken the kidneys and liver to a healthy activity, without irritating or weakening them, use Syrup of Figs.

THE MILWAUKEE

CHAIN POWER MOWER!

Takes the Lead!

And possesses all of the necessary requirements of a perfect Mower and stands first in the list of grass cutting machines.

It is entirely made of iron and steel, except the poll, neck-yoke, whiffletrees, swarth board and arm, which are of wood. It has no complicated nest gear with numerous bearings to wear out, only possessing five journal bearings in the entire machine.

The wheels are high and wide apart. We do not claim that our Mower wheels will completely clear the swath cut by our widest cutting apparatus; this would be absurd, as every casual observer understands that the farther the wheels are apart the greater will be the leverage of the axle upon the pole and that an extreme length of axle will therefore produce vibration and require a heavy pole.

Our Chain Power Mower is free from Vibration, Neck-Weight, Side Draft and we are enabled to use a Light Pole.

The weight of the cutting apparatus is carried upon the axle between the drive wheels, thus increasing the traction power of the Machine and making it a strong cutter.

Be sure and examine this Mower before purchasing. Call at my Rooms in the Usborne Block and see one.

Yours, for a Big Hay Crop,

FROM BAD TO WORSE.

The ordinary treatment of contagious blood poisoning is to drive one poison from the system by introducing another. The result, in most cases, has been that which usually follows a leap from the frying-pan into the fire. To put it mildly, mercurial and other mineral poisonings have disadvantages which are hardly less serious than contagious blood poison. In either case the system is wrecked; and yet there is no reason why humanity should continue to suffer. It is the office of S. S. S. to cure contagious blood poisoning. For that disease the medecine is surely a specific. And it is also its office to cure mercurial and other mineral poisoning. In short, S.S.S. is the great blood purifier. It destroys the germs of the contagious disease, and expels from the system all forms of mineral poisoning. It restores health and strength to the sufferer.

The main entrance to the house on the south side was decorated with a fine arch of evergreens with the word "Welcome" above in large letters. The front of the house was guarded by a small cannon made of evergreens, while on the left were the stacked muskets of the G. A. R. Company at Britton. Over the porch of the main entrance to the house, in letters of evergreens, were the dates of enlistment, discharge and reunion, viz.: August 12, '62; June 13, '65; June 13, '91. On entering the house the beautiful and appropriate motto, "In God we Trust," met the eye. It was a really beautiful and artistic piece of work—large white letters on a background of red. The windows were also decorated with plants of all descriptions and were a perfect paradise of flowers. The entrance to the house on the west side was decorated with another arch of evergreens with words above: "Reunion of Company F." What added a great deal to make the grounds of a warlike nature was a large and formidable looking cannon belonging to John Bechtold, our shoemaker, and used by him during these times of peace in guarding his shop and bedroom.

At an early hour the guests began to arrive and soon after our Britton Cornet Band struck up a lively tune and the second reunion of Company F, 26th Mich. Inf'try, had begun.

Soon after noon the large tables under the beautiful trees in the grove were spread with snowy tablecloths and soon covered with all the good things that money and cookery could procure.

The comrades present were as follows: J. Davidson, J. S. Lang, J. H. Dunbar, J. Ward, R. Everett, H. Becker, P. Brewer, H. Brimley, Geo. Beneway, C. W. Haynes, L. F. Howes, L. Hawes, H. Hadly, J. B. Ousterhout, J. K. Quick, H. Reynolds, Wm. Smallidge, R. Tappan, J. Thackery, T. J. Auten, J. Brighton, J. K. Crane, C. A. Lynn, J. Britton, H. Shores, M. Biggs, F. Brewer, A. A. Kennedy, A. W. Becker, H. Palmer, Jno. Exelby, W. Covell, J. W. Secor.

After dinner Chas. Haynes, of Dundee, the historian of the Company, gave a brief history of the past, calling to the minds of many comrades memories of those brief years. Dr. Barnes, of Tecumseh, also gave a very able address. Then followed singing by the local choir, also some very fine singing by Mrs. Jones and Miss Ella Hall, of Ridgeway, and Mrs. H. Stewart, of Dundee.

A most enjoyable day was spent and the company broke up about five o'clock, to meet again in Tecumseh, June 13, 1892.

Photographic views of the pleasant scene were taken by M. P. Brown, of Tecumseh, and also by Mr. Spencer, of Holloway.

The soldiers want to thank all the people of Britton for their kindly help, and especially would they thank the ladies who gave up their time to make the house and grounds a little fairyland by the beautiful flowers and evergreens procured by them. The local choir of lady singers and the Britton Band are also heartily thanked by them for their fine music, which formed the leading part of the entertainment.

The day will no doubt be one long to be remembered by the friends and former students of Raisin Valley Seminary.

A New Invention.

Some two years ago our townsman A. W. Slayton, well known in Michigan as the basswood lumberking, commenced work on a machine known as an odometer. It is to be attached to the hub of a wagon, carriage or cart wheel to tell how many miles you drive or your horse has been driven. Mr. Slayton has spent nearly two years time and a great deal of the time he has had a man to assist him. He has made a number of machines some for the spoke and some for the hub that did not work satisfactorily. At last he has made a perfect odometer. It is small, about as large as an ordinary watch but a little thicker. It is neat, being polished nickle plate. It is durable, all being made of brass without springs, weights or anything to get out of order. It can not be lost or tampered with, as it locks on with a key and is water tight and dust proof. It will be a boon to livery-men, a great convenience to doctors physicians and others to tell how far their horse travels during each day. It will be a pleasure to horsemen to know how long it takes to drive a certain number of miles. It is a necessity to every one that owns a carriage, cart, or wagon. Every vehicle should be oiled every time it has traveled at least 50 miles. All you have to do is to remove the cover of this little machine to tell how far you have traveled since it wa soiled. We predict very large sales of these odometers; first because they are very durable, light, neat and warranted accurate, and lastly, because they are cheap.

The Lake Shore time table which went into effect Sunday gives Adrian a new train west in the morning, and takes off the afternoon flyer, No. 5. The new train will be known as No. 15, and will go through Adrian at 8:38, reaching Chicago at 2:20 in the afternoon. It stops at Blissfield and Hudson in Lenawee county. No 12, the morning train going east will be a flyer east of Toledo, and will get into New York some three hours sooner than it did before. There are several other minor changes.

The Forum for July will contain a review of the policy and an estimate of the character of the young Emperor of Germany, by E. Heinrich Geffcken, Imperial Privy Councilor, who explains in detail the dismissal of Bismark and the relations between the Emperor and the ex-Chancellor. This article is one of the most important ever contributed to an American review.

The man who wipes his nose on his shirt sleve, says an exchange, picks his teeth with a fork, squirts tobacco juice on the hearth of the cook stove, rides to mill with corn in one end of the sack and a stone in the other, drives to market with hickory bark for lines, deposits his money in his last year's sock, insists on paying his taxes in coon skins and wild honey, fastens his one gallus with a wooden peg, and wears "possom belly" pants, is the same old rooster that has no use for his home paper, and his brother is the fellow who tries to do business in town without a line of advertising.

If President Harrison would only sit down on Prince Russell it would be one of the most picturesque sunsets ever witnessed in this country.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 18, 1891.

An exchange says that the government will be somewhat scattered this summer. Its seat will still be at Washington, but its head will be at Cape May and its brains at Bar Harbor.

The old saying is that "the longest way round is the shortest way to a fire." Perhaps that is the reason why President Harrison took a nine thousand mile circuit as a short cut to the White House.

A cog has slipped in the McKinley machine somewhere. We were told that the passage of that law would secure a higher price for wool. But wool is considerably lower than last year, with a weak market and a downward tendency.

The importation of bunting in 1889 amounted to the enormous total of fourteen yards, and yet the McKinley law gave Ben Butler's bunting factory an increased tariff to protect it against competition. The old flag must be protected you know.

The legislature has sustained the Governor's veto of the G. A. R. appropriation. The position of many of the Republican members becomes decidedly ludicrous. They abuse the Governor in the most scurrilous manner for interposing his veto, and then endorse his veto by their vote on the appropriation.

The N. Y. World says: "The Democrats of Ohio could pretty nearly settle the great presidential election in advance by re-electing Gov. Campbell this year upon a platform of tariff reform, home rule and honest and economical government." But it looks now as though the Democrats of Ohio were going to commit hari kari and throw Gov. Campbell overboard.

The recent decision of the Supreme Court sustaining the the original package law settles a vexed question and settles it properly. The right of each state to regulate its own internal affairs without interference from the national authority has been upheld. The regulation of the liquor traffic is relegated back to the states where it belongs.

The third party in Ohio will devote its entire attention, so report says, to the legislative districts for the purpose of defeating John Sherman's re-election to the Senate. If the Ohio Alliance shall accomplish simply that much, it will be doing the people yeoman service. The man who is responsible for the demonetization of silver has been in public life altogether too long for the welfare of the people.

The N. Y. World hits the nail on the head in this wise: Major McKinley and his friends are asserting that the people are discovering that his tariff act was falsely vilified last fall; and yet the manufacturers say they are losing money under it, the workingmen are striking against the reduction of wages and the merchants are denouncing that and the administrative measure as "unjust and infamous." What occupations do the discoverers follow? Are they all appraisers or defeated Republican congressmen?

Ex-Congressman McAdoo has a strong article in the June Forum on the tariff, showing its evil effects upon immigration. Every wage worker ought to read it. In summing up the subject he says: "I conclude that a very high or substantially prohibitory tariff in the United States is bound to force, in spite of all more restrictive measures, a large, unhealthy, undesirable, abnormal immigration of those who care nothing, and desire to know less, about our citizenship, an immigration which is inimical to American labor and contrary to the best interests of the whole country. I conclude, also, that it will lead eventually to a dangerous alien ownership of American properties and to alien control of our industries and domestic commerce."

TAXES PER CAPITA.

Burden of Taxation on Each Man—What the Tariff Tax Amounts to.

The Pittsburgh Dispatch, a republican journal, has been calling attention to the enormous taxation per capita which the country is now paying, and to the fact that the example set by congress causes an increase in state and city taxes. The Dispatch says:

The extraordinary action of congress in calling for one thousand million of dollars for its appropriations this year appears to have set the pace through the country, and it is not alone the gentlemen in the saddle at Washington who can ride hard and fast when the popular check-rein is loosely set.

The Dispatch then estimates the taxation paid per capita by the people of Pittsburgh as follows:

1. The congressional appropriation calls for the equivalent of a per capita tax of about $15 upon each of the population of the country.

2. The state of Pennsylvania's appropriations are reported as being likely to call for near $25,000,000, which, if allowed would represent a per capita tax of $6 on the population of the state.

3. The city of Pittsburgh's appropriation of $4,550,000 for the year is almost $20 per capita on the population of the city.

4. Allegheny county tax, say $3 per capita population of the county.

How these taxes accumulate for the working and producing members of the community may be seen from the following concluding reflections of the Dispatch:

These rough but sufficiently close estimates show for the current year the equivalent of a total per capita tax of $47 for residents of our own city. Allowing for infants, for the helpless, incapacitated and unemployed, the usual average of four to every adult workingman, and it appears that on the labor of the latter there is a total yearly tax of $2 5

But there is one side of the question which the Pittsburgh paper does not touch upon. The tax of $15 per capita levied by the last congress in the two years of its existence represents what is actually paid into the United States treasury in tariff duties and internal revenue taxes on whisky and tobacco. This estimate leaves out of account the increased cost of domestic commodities by reason of the protective tariff. It has been estimated by careful statisticians that for every dollar that goes into the treasury $3 goes into the pockets of private individuals. In this way many people not only escape the payment of their $15 in national taxes but even fill their pockets under the forms of law from the earnings of other people's labor.

Tariff taxes alone amounted during the fiscal year 1890 to $225,000,000. If we estimate that every producer has four other persons dependent upon his labor, this sum would give a tariff tax of about $17 for each producer. Combining with this the tax which goes to private protected individuals, estimated above to be three times as great, we have a total tariff tax of $68 per year for each man who labors.

Now that so many people are trying to find out the cause of agricultural depression would it not be well to turn attention to the $68 in tariff taxation? To show how it works take a county of 20,000 people. In this county it may be roughly estimated that one-fifth, or 4,000 men, are workers. Sixty-eight dollars for each of these would amount to $272,000 for a single county for one year, apart from state and county taxes.

Clearly the people of this country are taxed too much; and there can be no doubt that excessive taxation is a prime cause of hard times.

THE FLOOD OF SHODDY.

How the Use of Shoddy Has Grown—Figures Which Startle—The Nation's Cloth and Why It Does Not Last.

The extent to which shoddy is worn by our people cannot be known with any exactness. The latest figures on the subject are for the year 1880. The figures for last year's census will not be known for several years yet. It is doubtful, however, whether any statistics about the shoddy business can be relied upon. The business has always been looked upon by the people with a large measure of contempt. Hence it would not be too much to assume that many shoddy makers find ways to evade the census taker.

Such figures as we have, however, we are compelled to use; and until the results of Porter's census are published we must content ourselves with the census of 1880. According to that census the raw material put into our woolen goods were as follows:

	Pounds.
Domestic wool	222,991,581
Foreign wool	73,200,698
Camel's hair	1,583,119
Mohair	159,678
Buffalo hair	671,027
Hair of other animals	5,664,142
Cotton mixture	48,000,857
Shoddy	52,163,926
Total	404,434,978

The wool as reported in the above table is wool in the grease. It is estimated by the treasury department and by the ways and means committees of congress in making up the wool duties, that wool in the grease will shrink in washing and scouring to one-third of its weight. Calculating the shrinkage, however, even on a more generous basis than this, say at 60 per cent. instead of 66⅔, it is found that our 222,992,531 pounds of wool, above reported, becomes 118,476,891 pounds. In other words, our "woolen goods" in 1880 were made of 118 parts of pure wool to 108 parts of shoddy, hair, cotton or other substitutes.

The growth of the shoddy business from 1870 to 1880 is shown by the fact that in the former year our shoddy mills used 19,372,002 pounds of raw shoddy, and in 1880 the amount had risen to 52,136,926 pounds on a scoured basis, which is equivalent to 79,000,000 pounds of raw shoddy. It is certain, too, that the increase in the use of shoddy has gone on steadily since 1880. The shoddy makers take their place now in the advertising columns of trade papers and in their market reports as holding a place among our most respectable industries. The men who mine gypsum and other minerals for adulterating candy never appear in the advertising pages of our trade papers to offer their stuff for sale. Not so with the shoddy men; they come forward and announce their business with never a blush.

The use of shoddy in carpet making is even more extensive than in our so-called "woolen goods" industry.

Every housewife knows that with every touch of the broom flocks fly from her carpet. It is not hard to understand this when we find that in 1879 in the carpet manufacture the proportion was 80 of wool and 20 of shoddy; that in 1880 it was 68 parts wool and 32 parts shoddy. What the percentage of shoddy has become in this year of grace can only be guessed at by noting the new expensive and "improved" machinery which the carpet manufacturers have lately added to their plant to enable them to spin stuff that heretofore has been entirely worthless.

The Dobsons, of Philadelphia, gentlemen whose frankness should not deprive them of their repute for being the most honest of carpet manufacturers, defending their trade against the charge of importing "carpet wools" for use in clothing manufacture, estimate that of 55,000,000 pounds of carpet material 10,000,000 are clean wool, equivalent to 27,000,000 pounds raw wool; 20,000,000 are shoddy and 25,000,000 other mixtures.

The growth of the shoddy business has called into being a great number of factories especially devoted to the manufacture of the stuff, some of which are concerns of large capacity. One of these mills, that of F. Muhlhausen & Co., of Cleveland, O., has been described in a trade journal as the most extensive shoddy mills in the country, and probably the largest in the world. The capacity of the concern is thus stated by the same paper:

"The production of these mills is very large, and since the new addition has been in operation, 20,000 pounds per day has been turned out, yielding an annual product of about 5,000,000 pounds. Their last pay roll shows over 480 hands employed; their help are mostly Bohemians. They have 300 sorters to keep the material ready for the machines. This plant was first established in 1871.

"It is interesting to note the success which has attended the firm in its business and the steady manner in which it is increasing, the demand for their shoddies growing larger and larger every year."

A PROBLEM.

The People Must Consider the Difference Between a Revenue and a Protective Tariff.

"A revenue tariff," said McKinley at the great protection banquet, "is always paid by the consumer."

Undoubtedly! But with what the major calls a protective tariff the consumer pays not only the duties on the imported articles, but the increased tariff price of the domestic article as well. Careful investigators have calculated that for every dollar of tariff taxes that the people pay to Uncle Sam they pay three dollars to protected manufacturers.

Now it is clearly and flagrantly unjust to compel the people to pay any taxes which go, not to the government, but to private individuals. All the specious talk about building up domestic industries, patronizing home enterprises, developing a home market, and all that can never make the plain people of this country believe that they can be enriched by taxation, or that taxing themselves for the benefit of more favored persons can ever be either just or necessary.

People of ordinary common sense will never believe that taxation is anything better than a necessary evil; yet an evil to be submitted to, for governments cannot exist without taxation. Where, however, they are compelled under the mockery of law to go beyond the legitimate needs of the government and pay three dollars to some prosperous protected manufacturer for every one dollar they pay the government, they may submit to this extortion for a time through ignorance; but once the people find out the amazing character of this so-called "American system" it will be a cold day for those who are now warming their toes at the public stove.

Meantime the problem for the people to solve is this: If revenues are to be raised by tariff duties at all, is it not far more economical to put those duties on articles not produced in this country at all, so that every dollar of taxes paid shall go to the government, rather than put protective duties on goods made in this country and thus put into operation a system of private taxation far more burdensome than public taxation? In either case the tariff is a tax; but under protection the tariff is three or four taxes rolled into one. Let the public choose.

UNBLUSHING SHODDY

Boldly Advertises Itself—Specimen Advertisements—A Great American Industry.

The great use made of shoddy by our manufacturers has called forth in the advertising columns of our woolen trade journals a host of advertisements of shoddy establishments. The shoddy men have become bold, and publish their business to the world. In their eagerness to get customers they have so crowded the columns of the woolen trade papers that one finds in these about as many advertisements of shoddy as of wool. The latest number of the American Wool Reporter, the leading journal in our woolen business, contains over forty advertisements of firms which handle shoddies, wastes, extracts, etc.

It is worth while to reproduce a few of these advertisements here, in order that the people may see with their own eyes how this great American tariff industry is pushing its way to the front and boldly offering its miserable stuff for sale to the makers of our "woolen goods." Here are a few of the advertisements in the latest number of the Reporter:

East Brookfield Woolen Co., manufacturers of shoddies and wool extracts, and dealers in wool, wool noils, waste, flocks, etc. Extracting done by the improved wet and dry system. Correspondence solicited, East Brookfield, Mass.

Austin C. Graves, dealer in wool waste, flocks, noils, shoddies, wool, garnetted merino waste, etc. Church and Arch streets, Albany, N. Y

F. Muhlhauser & Co., shoddies, Cleveland, Ohio. Boston office, No. 177 Purchase street.

Established 1850. Smith & Cooley, manufacturers of flocks and shoddies, and dealers in flocks and wool waste. Stafford Springs, Ct.

Charles F. Pierce, dealer in wool, noils, worsted and wool waste, garnetted stock and shoddies. Thirty-three Canal street, Providence R. I Frederick Fowles J. J. Collins, William Turner Fowles Collins & Co., limited, dealers in wool, flocks, waste, shoddy, nails, hair, etc., 102 Church street, Philadelphia.

Topics Of The Month.

The subjects that have had the greatest share of attention from thoughtful men for the past month have undoubtedly been Immigration, Our Currency, the Case of the Rev. Dr. Briggs, and the International Copyright Law, which will go into effect July 1. The June number of The Forum contains discussions of all these subjects. The Rev. Dr. Briggs himself contributes a criticism of the churches for insisting on non-essential parts of their creeds. Ex-Congressman William McAdoo, of New Jersey, points out the intimate relation between immigration and the tariff, making an argument to show how by the exclusion of foreign goods and by the free admission of foreign workmen we play into the hands of other nations. Senator William M. Stewart, of Nevada, considers silver coinage with reference to the need of more money and makes the strongest statement perhaps that has anywhere appeared on the side of those who favor the free coinage of silver.

This question is considered still further in a new department of The Forum which this month contains a series of financial artilles—one, a discussion of our gold export by Mr. Joel Cook, the financial editor of the Philadelphia Ledger; another, a statement about Western Lands and Mortgages by Mr. James Willis Gleed, of Kansas; and the third, the Outlook for Southern Investments by Mr. John L. Williams, of Richmond, Va. Col. Theodore A. Dodge, who is perhaps our foremost military writer, has an essay reviewing the career of Von Moltke and its bearing on the warfare of the future. Sir Charles W. Dilke explains the rise and the political importance of the New Australian Commonwealth. General Francis A. Walker discusses the accuracy of the Census of 1890, particularly in the great cities; and Mr. Henry Holt makes a forecast of our international copyright law.

DEAFNESS CAN'T BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the musous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A PHYSICIAN'S OPINION.

Dr. A. M. Spaulding of Grand Rapids, Mich., says: "I prescribe Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup in my practice, and unhesitatingly recommend it. It operates upon the liver, kidneys and bowels, destroying the poison in the blood and tissues. It is a grand tonic and appetizer, and for a diseased stomach or dyspepsia, has no equal."

"BAGGS married? You surprise me! What did he have to get married with? "The girl."

Purify The importance of keeping the blood in a pure condition is universally known, and yet there are very few people who have perfectly pure blood. The taint of scrofula, salt rheum, or other foul humor is heredited and transmitted for generations, causing untold suffering, and we also accumulate poison and germs of disease from the air we breathe, the food we eat, the water we drink. There is nothing more conclusively proven than the positive power of Hood's Sarsaparilla over all diseases of the blood. This medicine, when fairly tried, does expel every trace of scrofula or salt rheum, removes the taint which causes catarrh, neutralizes the acidity and cures rheumatism, drives out the germs of malaria, blood poisoning, etc. It also vitalizes and enriches the blood, thus overcoming that tired feeling, and building up the whole system. Thousands testify to the superiority of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier. Full information and statements of cures sent free.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

THE BOSTON GLOBE FOR THE SINGLE TAX.

In an editorial article on "Tax Reform in Maine," the Boston Globe makes an admirable criticism on a recent article by Judge Emery in the Lewiston Journal, which, after admitting that taxes on personal property should be abolished unless every dollar of such property can be reached, merely goes on to recommend more drastic methods for compelling people to disclose to the tax collector the character and extent of their possessions. The Globe says that such inquisitorial methods invade personal liberty; that a man has a right to his own and a right to keep its amount secret if he chooses; that people feel this to be so, and, though they submit to some invasion of their personal liberty, they still feel it to be an invasion and resent it. It points out, as a curious inconsistency in Judge Emery's argument for the taxation of every thing, his declaration that it is an axiom in the science of taxation that tools and the products of labor should be exempted, since the very purpose of the kind of tax reform the judge is advocating is to compel the payment of taxes on "tools and the products of labor." It further predicts that if Maine adopts such measures her people will find that few new enterprises will be started and that many existing establishments will be moved to states less disposed to put a fine on industry. The Globe thus concludes its article:

When will legislators learn that capital is easily movable, and will not stay where it is severely taxed? The "tools of labor" include machinery. Tax machinery heavily and you drive manufacturing industry out of the state. Tax the products of labor and you discourage the employment of labor. And where in the state of Maine or elsewhere in the wide world will Judge Emery and the tax commissioners find any thing to tax that was not produced by labor. There is only one taxable thing that labor did not produce and taxation can not drive away. That is land. If Judge Emery is sincere in wishing to exempt the products of labor from taxation there would seem to be no recourse but to favor raising the revenues mainly or wholly by a land tax. With such a tax in operation there would be as much land in Maine as before, and it would be as fertile. But the houses, barns, cattle and crops of the farmer would be exempted; so would the machinery of the manufacturer, the tools of the laborer, the savings of everybody. Capital would flow in instead of out. Many wise men have advocated such a change in the tax laws, and if Maine should try the experiment it would be watched with the greatest interest in every part of the country.

Effect of the Single Tax on the Farmer.

The farmer would be a great gainer by the substitution of a single tax upon the value of land for all these taxes, for the taxation of land values would fall with greatest weight, not upon the agricultural districts, where land values are comparatively small, but upon the towns and cities where land values are high; whereas taxes upon personal property and improvements fall as heavily in the country as in the city. And in sparsely settled districts there would be hardly any taxes at all for the farmer to pay. For taxes, being levied upon the value of the bare land, would fall as heavily upon unimproved as upon improved land. Acre for acre, the improved and cultivated farm, with its buildings, fences, orchard, crops and stock could be taxed no more than unused land of equal quality. The result would be that speculative values would be kept down, and that cultivated and improved farms would have no taxes to pay until the country around them had been well settled. In fact, paradoxical as it may at first seem to them, the effect of putting all taxation upon the value of land would be to relieve the harder working farmers of all taxation.

But the gr ain of the working farmer can only be seen when the effect upon the distribution of population is considered. The destruction of speculative land values would tend to diffuse population where it is too dense and to concentrate it where it is too sparse; to substitute for the tenement house, homes surrounded by gardens, and to fully settle the agricultural districts before people were driven far from neighbors to look for land. The people of the cities would thus get more of the pure air and sunshine of the country, the people of the country more of the economies and social life of the city. If, as is doubtless the case, the application of machinery tends to large fields, agricultural population will assume the primitive form and cluster in villages. The life of the average farmer is now unnecessarily dreary. He is not only compelled to work early and late, but he is cut off by the sparseness of population from the conveniences, the amusements, the educational facilities, and the social and intellectual opportunities that come with the closer contact of man with man. He would be far better off in all these respects, and his labor would be far more productive, if he and those around him held no more land than they wanted to use, while his children, as they grew up, would neither be so impelled to seek the excitement of a city nor would they be driven so far away to seek farms of their own. Their means of living would be in their own hands, and at home.

In short, the working farmer is both a laborer and a capitalist, as well as a land-owner, and it is by his labor and capital that his living is made. His loss would be nominal; his gain would be real and great.

So far from the effect of placing all taxes upon the value of land being to the advantage of the towns at the expense of the agricultural districts, the very reverse of this is obviously true. The great increase of land values is in the cities, and with the present tendencies of growth this must continue to be the case.

The Colored Alliance Indorse Single Tax.

The last number of the New Earth prints the following important news item as "selected." It is important, because, if true, it brings within the ranks of the single taxers a tremendous force for pushing the movement ahead. Here is the item:

"The Colored National Farmers' Alliance," said Col. Humphrey, "has a million and a half of members, and extends all over the south and southwest. It does an immense exchange business in the commercial centers of Houston, New Orleans, Mobile, Norfolk, Va., and Charleston, S. C.; besides having many subordinate exchanges and co-operative stores all over the country. It has its official newspaper—the National Alliance, of Houston—has built upwards of four thousand alliance school-houses and two thousand alliance churches, has awakened hope, encouraged industry and thrift, introduced order and cleanliness, and added another room or two to thousands and thousands of little homes. It encourages the colored people to keep away from the whites, and to rely upon themselves for their welfare and amusements, supplying separate societies, separate schools and separate churches. This separation of blacks from whites stops race troubles. I do not know of any difficulty that has occurred between our colored people and whites within eighteen months. I have lived fifty years among them, and I say these colored people are as quick as white people to learn. This is shown in their rise from slavery twenty-five or thirty years ago to their present intelligent and independent position.

"What about the single tax idea?" I asked.

"I am a single tax man, heart and hand, and so is the whole colored alliance. In the official paper I keep the single tax idea before the eye. The present land and taxation system is a premium on worthlessness."

The Effort of Appropriating Ground Rent to Public Use.

To appropriate ground rent to public uses by means of taxation would permit the abolition of all the taxation which now presses so heavily upon labor and capital. This would enormously increase the production of wealth by the removal of restrictions and by adding to the incentives to production.

It would at the same time enormously increase the production of wealth by throwing open natural opportunities. It would utterly destroy land monopoly by making the holding of land unprofitable to any but the user. There would be no temptation for anyone to hold land for future increase in its value when that increase was certain to be demanded in taxes. No one could afford to hold valuable land idle when the taxes upon it would be as heavy as they would be were it put to the fullest use. Thus speculation in land would be utterly destroyed, and land not in use would become free to those who wished to use it.

About Personal Property Taxation.

A bill passed the Albany legislature last Wednesday to tax all inheritances above $5,000. In the debate on the bill the whole question of personal property taxation came up; and, among other statements made, was one by Senator Fassett, that Commissioner Coleman had testified that it was impossible to find more than 10 per cent. of the personal property in New York city when the time came to value it for taxation. The estimated value of the personal property in New York city was $16,000,000; yet last year the commissioner had only been able to find $1,680,000,000 of it, and only $280,000,000 paid taxes; all the other was sworn off. Of this amount the banks, which are so much despised by our farmers, and estates paid 90 per cent. Senator Fasset had come to the conclusion that not 5 per cent. of the personal property in this state was reached by taxation, and it could not be reached.

EDWARD H. BAILEY, of Bloomington, Ill., writes: As an evidence of the value and importance to the cause in placing Mr. George's works in public libraries, I have to relate that to-day I called at the beautiful public library in this city, where I learned that "Progress and Poverty" was loaned. When I entered I asked the attendant, a lady whom I found to be very intelligent, if she could give me a printed list of the books in the library on political economy. She said she had no such list, and inquired if I wanted George's works.

"Have you 'Progress and Poverty?'" I asked. "It belongs to our collection, but it is out now." "Is it read much?" "O, yes; there are many applications for it. We very seldom have calls for any other political economies." The lady went away and returning presently dumped four or five books before me. "These are all the books we have on political economy," she said, "and they are seldom called for. Lawyers, preachers, teachers and students generally ask for 'Progress and Poverty.'" The books she brought me were by Walker, Perry, Sumner and one or two others.

THE poverty, which in the midst of abundance, pinches and embrutes men, and all the manifold evils which flow from it, spring from a denial of justice. In permitting the monopolization of the natural opportunities which nature freely offers to all, we have ignored the fundamental law of justice—for so far as we can see, when we view things upon a large scale, justice seems to be the supreme law of the universe.—Progress and Poverty.

IF a man to-day, in any of the states of the Union, makes two blades of grass grow where one grew before, the tax gatherer comes down and fines him for it. If he builds a house where there was none before, he has to pay a fine of so much each year. The bigger the house he builds the more he has to pay. The more he produces, the more he saves, the more he is supposed to be taxed for it.

CAPTIVITY OF JUDAH.

LESSON XII, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 21.

Text of the Lesson, II Kings xxv, 1-12. Commit Verses, 4-6—Golden Text, Hos. vi, 1—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

1. "Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, came, he and all his host, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it."

As we saw in the last lesson Josiah's turning to God and great revival reached but a few comparatively, while the nation as a whole continued in sin.

"According to the Word of the Lord."

2. "And the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of Zedekiah."

Jeremiah had at this time been a prophet forty years, for he began in the thirteenth year of Josiah, after which Josiah continued eighteen years, and the eleventh of Zedekiah was twenty-two years later (Jer. i, 2; II Kings xxii, 1; xxiii, 31, 36; xxiv, 8-18). The thirty-five years which elapsed between Josiah's great passover in the eighteenth year of his reign (II Chron. xxxv, 19) and the destruction of the city, is suggestive and perhaps typical of about the same period which elapsed between the greatest of all passovers, when Christ our passover was sacrificed for us (I Cor. v, 7) and the last destruction of Jerusalem by Titus.

3. "The famine prevailed in the city, and there was no bread for the people of the land."

4. "And the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled by night; and the king went the way toward the plain."

And yet this was the city which God had chosen to put His name there—the city of the Great King, beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth.

5. "And the army of the Chaldees pursued after the king and overtook him in the plains of Jericho, and all his army were scattered from him."

This also was made known to the captives at Babylon by the prophet Ezekiel (Ezek. xii, 13, f. c.). Contrast the safety of Hezekiah when besieged by the great army of Sennacherib, and the wonderful deliverance God wrought for him in answer to the prayer of himself and Isaiah (II Chron. xxxii, 20-22; Isa. xxxvii, 36). See also the peace and safety of Elijah when besieged by the Syrians (II Kings vi, 16, 17), and consider what God did for Abijah and Asa because they relied on him (II Chron. xiii, 18; xiv, 11, 12).

6. "So they took the king and brought him up to the king of Babylon to Riblah; and they gave judgment upon him."

At the same place, just twenty-two years before, the king of Egypt had put bands upon his brother Jehoahaz and took him to Egypt, where he died (II Kings xxiii).

7. "And they slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes, and put out the eyes of Zedekiah, and bound him with fetters of brass, and carried him to Babylon."

Jeremiah had said, "Thine eyes shall behold the eyes of the king of Babylon, and he shall speak with thee mouth to mouth, and thou shalt go to Babylon" (Jer. xxxiv, 3). The same spirit had said through Ezekiel, "I will bring him to Babylon, to the land of the Chaldeans; yet shall he not see it, though he shall die there" (Ezek. xii, 13). See how these somewhat difficult, and in a measure seemingly contradictory, prophecies were literally fulfilled, and all made perfectly plain in the fulfillment. He saw the king of Babylon; they looked upon each other and spoke to each other. He also went to Babylon, but he never saw Babylon, for after seeing the king of Babylon at Riblah, and after being compelled to witness the death of his sons, his eyes were put out. How fearfully sad the consequences of unbelief! but what is all present physical suffering when compared with the endless torment of Rev. xiv, 9-11?

8. "Nebuzar-adan, captain of the guard, a servant of the king of Babylon."

The literal meaning of the Hebrew phrase here translated "captain of the guard" is "chief of the slaughtermen or executioners" (see the margin of Gen. xxxvii, 36).

9. "And he burnt the house of the Lord, and the King's house, and all the houses of Jerusalem, and every great man's house burnt he with fire."

The people could now truly say, "O God, the heathen are come into thine inheritance; thy holy temple have they defiled; they have laid Jerusalem on heaps" (Ps. lxxix, 1). "Our holy and our beautiful house, where our fathers praised Thee, is burned up with fire, and all our pleasant things are laid waste" (Isa. lxiv, 11). This magnificent building, costing hundreds of millions of dollars, and which stood less than thirty-four years in its original splendor (I Kings xiv, 25, 26), is now completely destroyed and all the city burned with fire; and sin did it all.

10. "And all the army of the Chaldees that were with the captain of the guard, brake down the walls of Jerusalem round about."

And thus they continued until the return of Nehemiah, many years after the return of the 50,000 under Zerubbabel (Neh. i, 3), and amid the greatest opposition and hatred was the wall rebuilt (Neh. iv, vi).

11. "Now the rest of the people that were left in the city did Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the guard, carry away."

Some were slain (vs. 18-21); at three different times 4,600 were carried captive (Jer. lii, 28-30), while some were left in the land. Some were carried captive for their good, that He might bring them again, and build them and plant them in their own land, and give them a heart to know Him, while others who were disobedient were taken to be consumed and destroyed because of their sins (read Jer. xxiv). The same event or series of events may happen to both the righteous and the wicked; to the one it means blessing, to the other cursing. The same glad tidings of salvation preached to a congregation may mean life to some and death to others (II Cor. ii, 15, 16).

12. "But the captain of the guard left of the poor of the land to be vine dressers and husbandmen."

To the poor of the people, who had nothing in the land, he gave vineyards and fields (Jer. xxxix, 10). Gedaliah was made governor over these, and Jeremiah chose to dwell with him among the people that were left in the land (Jer. xl, 4-6). Gedaliah was slain by Ishmael, and he in turn was defeated by Johanan, who ere long took all the remnant of the people, men, women and children and kings' daughters and Jeremiah and Baruch, and went down to Egypt, where probably Jeremiah died (Jer. xli, 3, 8, 11, 12; xliii, 4-7).

Thus was the land desolate "To fulfill the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah" (II Chron. xxxvi, 21). Mark the last four verses of the books of II Kings and the prophecy of Jeremiah, then read Jer. xxiii, 5-8, and believe that the God who raised up Jehoiachim out of prison after thirty-seven years, is just as able to raise up Israel 3,300 years after the promises to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and, dear reader, I entreat you to believe God and be subject to Him.

THE UNION PICNIC.

THE YEOMANRY OF NORTHERN LENAWEE TAKE A DAY OF RECREATION.

A Large Gathering Last Saturday at Putnam's Grove, Sand Lake—The First Crowd of the Season.

The officers of the Union Picnic Association decided to hold their annual outing this year in the month of June, instead of delaying it until August. Last Saturday was the day selected, and although the date chosen was a busy season for the farmers, yet a large gathering assembled in Putnam's beautiful grove to enjoy a day of recreation.

At an early hour in the morning the farmers began to arrive, and when the noon hour had come the grove was well filled with teams and the tables were laden with the good things for which the farmers' wives of Northern Lenawee are noted. Old men and silver-haired matrons were there. The young fellows with their best girls were there in goodly numbers, and last, but not least, handsome babies were there by the dozen.

Promptly at twelve o'clock a general attack was made on the edibles along the entire line and an hour was spent to good advantage in filling up the multitude. All were amply provided for, and there were remnants enough remaining to accommodate that portion of the crowd who chose to remain until dark and partake of supper before returning home.

At one o'clock the Band called the crowd to the hillside in the Western confines of the grove, where the literary exercises of the afternoon were to be held.

The assemblage was called to order by the President of the Association, Mr. Horace B. Eaton, who, after a few introductory remarks, announced the program in the following order:

First, music by the Tecumseh Kid Band, led by Prof. Skinner.

Prayer by Rev. F. E. Arnold, Pastor of the Tecumseh Baptist church.

Then followed the report of the Secretary and the election of officers.

The following officers for the ensuing year were then elected by acclamation:

President—Clarence Cook, of Tipton Grange.

Vice Pres.—S. N. Munger, of Union Literary.

Secretary—L. M. Waldron, of Tecumseh and Franklin Club.

Treasurer—W. B. Keyser, of Northern Lenawee Club.

Miss Lena Alexander then favored the audience with a recitation which was very finely rendered.

Music by the Band followed.

Another recitation was given by Miss Jennie Gillespie. Although young in years Jennie performed her part splendidly and she was greeted with hearty applause at its close.

Mr. B. G. English, of Manchester, was then introduced, who appeared as a substitute for R. S. Rawson, who was on the program but was unable to be present. Mr. English took as his subject, "Farmers' Clubs and their Work." "The business of the Club is to educate the masses and improve them in their calling. "We do not want to return to the old days when men farmed it without brain labor. Farming has become an art and requires men of brains to succeed in it. The mechanic works under a boss and simply obeys orders. The farmer must calculate his own work and his daily routine is constantly changing in character. This is an age of improvement. The yield of wheat, corn, wool and hay has increased very much in the past twenty-five years and they can be still further increased. The time has gone by when our brainy boys should be permitted to leave the farm. We need them at home to help run the farm. The watchword of the present day is "Educate."

Mr. English is a good talker and his remarks were well received.

The Tipton Glee Club gave the audience a trio which brought down the house and in response to an encore they did so some more.

Elmer and Viva Mellon gave a violin duet which was beautifully executed and in answer to an encore Elmer responded with "Pop goes the Weasel."

Thos. F. Moore, of Madison, was then called upon for a short talk.

"I have been urged," said he, "to take the place of some who were on the program and are absent. I am proud to look in the faces of this large gathering of Lenawee citizens. I was here in an early day, have witnessed the hardships of the early settlers and have seen the progress you have made. I have traveled in most of the states of the Union and I believe that Michigan leads them all, especially when we are oppressed with hard times. Compare our own with other countries and we have the greatest country in the world. I rode through New York on a strap railroad. Campare those days with the present. When the war broke out I had one grown-up son. I said to him: 'You can stay at home and care for mother and I will go, or I will stay and you can enlist; one of us must go to the front.' Those were trying times. I believe in treating the old soldiers liberally, but I think there should be a limit to the pension business. Look at the outflow of gold that has recently taken place to the old country. What other country could stand such a drain? The country is threatened with political evils which must be cured, we are cursed with wrongs which must be righted. Office holders will bear watching, to whatever party they may belong. I believe that the rising generation will be educated to correct these wrongs. There are a good many things that need overhauling before the people's rights are properly respected in legislation."

Mr. Moore's remarks were heartily applauded and carried conviction with them. He is one of the veteran farmers of Lenawee County and always talks right to the point.

The program concluded with a selection by the Kid Band and the bulk of the crowd then adjourned to the base ball grounds, where a game was in progress between the Clinton and Dundee Clubs.

During the remainder of the afternoon the crowd scattered, some witnessing the base ball game, others boating and riding on the Manitou, others strolling about the grove and along the South shore. It was a beautiful day for such a gathering. The clerk of the weather was in his most genial mood and nearly the entire crowd remained at the Hotel and on the grounds until after supper.

The base bal game was hotly contested, lasting about three hours, and resulted in a victory for Dundee by a score of 16 to 11.

The attendance was fully up to that of former years. About 300 teams passed into the grove during the day, and a low estimate of the total number present at three o'clock in the afternoon placed the number at 2,000. Many people living in the vicinity of the lake arrived after dinner, and some estimated the attendance at 3,000. The plan adopted last year of charging a small fee for admission of teams upon the grounds was followed this year. It affords an easy and equitable method of raising the funds to meet necessary expenses. The fact that Treasurer Keyser was re-elected again this year shows that his management of the financial end of the concern meets the approval of all interested.

During the past year Mr. Putnam has made many improvements on his grounds which add much to their beauty and convenience. The barns have been moved south on the brow of the hill and farther away from the house, and the flat where they formerly stood has been seeded down. The base ball ground has been nicely fitted up. There is one more improvement which he ought to make and he would then have a model grove to accommodate a large gathering. A rostrum and seats should be built on the hillside in the western part of the grove. A platform could be located at the lowest point, about where the west table now stands, and the seats constructed up the hillside in the form of an amphitheatre. A large crowd could then be accommodated to listen to a lengthy literary and musical program. We commend this scheme to Mr. Putnam's favorable consideration. The crowd last Saturday were well pleased with their entertainment, and Mr. Putnam added new laurels to his previous reputation as an accommodating landlord.

For downright pleasure and old-fashioned enjoyment the fifth annual meeting certainly surpassed all former gatherings of the Association.

ORANGE BLOSSOMS.

Seldom has Tecumseh known a happier wedding party than that assembled at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Smith on Wednesday evening of last week, the occasion being the marriage of their daughter Margaret to Mr. Louis B. M. Schneider, of Adrian.

Promptly at eight o'clock the strains of the wedding march were heard, executed by Miss Louise Phelps upon the piano, and directly after the bride and groom appeared, followed by the officiating clergyman, and took their place beneath a beautiful floral arch composed of red roses and syringa blossoms, which was surmounted by a bell of white flowers and the monogram "S S" made of marguerites and clover blossoms. Beneath these beautiful emblems, and surrounded by their friends, the clergyman pronounced the words, in simple form and in the German language, which made the happy couple husband and wife. Rev. H. Juengel of Sturgis, a brother-in-law of the groom, performed the ceremony. At its conclusion the usual congratulations followed, which were conferred with the usual German heartiness and good-will. A wedding supper was then served, which would have satisfied the ambition of the most exacting epicure. The remainder of the evening was happily passed in social converse, music and mirth. At a late hour the married pair took their departure, amid a shower of rice, for their future home in Adrian, where they have a nice house ready furnished for their occupancy on Broad street in that city.

Among the guests from abroad were Rev. and Mrs. Juengel, Sturgis; Mrs. Geo. C. Schneider, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Schneider, Mrs. F. Schwartz, Mrs. Ray, Miss Bach, Adrian; Mrs. C. M. Burlingame, Coldwater; Mrs. J. S. Trauger, Columbus, Ohio; Mr. Will Smith, Miss Carrie Smith, Youngstown, Ohio; Mrs. Heshley, Toledo; Mr. Ed. Lauer, Monroe; Miss Emma Zorman, Moscow; Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kloffenstein, Battle Creek.

The groom has but few acquaintances here, but those who know him best affirm that the bride has chosen wisely. The bride has lived in Tecumseh many years and has won a host of friends. The numerous and elegant bridal gifts she received gave proof of their esteem in the most substantial manner. The HERALD takes the liberty of joining with them all in extending to the happy couple its sincere wishes for their future welfare and prosperity.

June, flowery June, is here. There can be no mistake on this point. The thermometer proclaims it, and the college and school commencements all announce it. The sweet girl graduate is in her glory now.

Dr. Snyder has invented a new and very ingenious device for generating gas from gasoline. It makes a nice white light and could doubtless be utilized for practical purposes. He ought to apply for a patent and push it.

"The A B C of Money," by Andrew Carnegie, in the June number of the North American Review, will command, as it deserves, the careful study of people of all classes and business pursuits. It is written in the clearest style, and cannot fail to be helpful to all who wish to arrive at a correct understanding of the subject under consideration.

A double-page portrait, drawn from life, of Thomas A. Edison in his laboratory will be published in Harper's Weekly for June 10th. A sketch of the Yale and Princeton base-ball teams, with portraits, will be another interesting feature of the same number. The four-page Supplement will comprise an article on the New York Coffee Exchange written by Dr. Richard Wheatly and amply illustrated.

Remember the Farmers' Social Club, picnic at Sand Lake Saturday. No tiresome speeches to listen to, no band to pay, but the old men will smoke and spin yarns, the women get dinner and gossip, the young people gather water lilies, and the little people play in the water. SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE for June continues the notable series on "The Great Streets of the world," and "Ocean Steamships;" Francisque Sarcey being the author of the article on "The Boulevards of Paris" and William H. Rideing contributing the paper on "Safety on the Atlantic." The illustrations in both groups continue to be very rich, and appropriately supplement the text, adding to its significance and picturesqueness.

The Wheelmen's club met last Thursday evening and elected the following officers:

President—Alf. James.
Vice Pres.—B. F. Steinhoff.
Sec. and Treas.—W. J. Ingersoll.
Captain—Fred. J. McNair.
Lieut.—Henry McClure.
Bugler—Geo. Tiffany.

Fall in, ladies and gents. The club is now ready for action. It has already an enrolled membership of forty. We wonder if the by-laws permit the election of honorary members.

The series of "Familiar Letters" by Horace Greeley is concluded in June Lippincott. The last letter is a very touching and pathetic one, written but a few days after the writer was defeated at the polls. "So many of my old friends," writes Mr. Greeley, "hate me for what I have done, that life seems too hard to bear." Life was not borne by the great editor for much longer, for but a few days after writing these words he died. Some curious letters written to Mr. Greeley during his Presidential campaign by various cranks are added. This series of letters by Mr. Greeley will be of great value to the future biographer.

An interesting legal examination was held Monday and Tuesday before Justice Davidson. Frank Hendershot of Macon was charged with setting fire to Mary Kelley's house, and the Court held an examination upon that charge. Prosecuting Attorney Wood appeared for the people and Seth Bean for the defence. On account of the torrid state of the weather the parties adjourned to the old court house park and held court beneath the shade of the oaks and maples. We wonder if old Sile Doty's ghost silently witnessed the proceedings. The examination was continued Tuesday forenoon in the same temple and the accused was then discharged as there was no evidence implicating him.

The following item clipped from the Milan Leader explains itself. We reproduce it in justice to Mr. Patrick Kehoe, who is a brother of Mr. Phillip Kehoe's of Tecumseh:

Two weeks ago we published an account of the stabbing affray in which Wm. McManus was knifed by Pat Kehoe. Mr. McManus placed the matter before the prosecuting attorney, and that gentleman and the sheriff have been investigating the affair, and as a result of such investigation have refused to issue a warrant for Mr. Kehoe's arrest, on the grounds that he acted in self-defense. Our account of the affair was given us by the stabbed boy's father; the sheriff's investigation goes to show that the boy was ordered out of the cart for calling Mr. Kehoe a hard name, and when out he struck Pat several blows and continued aggressive even after Pat drew his knife.

A Birthday Anniversary.

Last Saturday occurred the 95th anniversary of Mrs. Chloe Woodard, who is supposed to be the oldest inhabitant of this village. The event was one of interest and pleasure to all. Her children, six in number, with their husbands and wives, a number of grand children and great grand children, were present and dined with her, which she appreciated and enjoyed very much. The relations from abroad were: an only brother, A. C. Caldwell, Ionia, and daughter, (niece); Mrs. J. F. A. Raider, Newyago; Mr. and Mrs. Philip Totten, (daughter), Petoskey; Mrs. F. J. Totten, (daughter), Kalamazoo; Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Woodard, (son), Rome; Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Woodard and son Ray C., (son and grand son), Elkhart, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Totten, (grand son), Brooklyn; regrets and pictures from relatives in Hartford, Conn. All came to pay their loving token of respect to the aged parent, who was kindly remembered. Mrs. Woodard has been a very active worker in her day. Since her 80th anniversary she has completed a large amount of work of various kinds, among which are: one silk quilt containing 1054 pieces; one quilt containing 1080 pieces; one quilt containing 900 pieces; pieced 16 patch work quilts; quilted five quilts; embroidered seven pillow shams, two toilet sets; knitted 40 pair of hose, 12 pair of mittens, besides making many garments. When failing strength compelled her to give up work, reading then became her favorite past-time; from reading the daily news to large volumes of books were read and enjoyed. Two successive seasons suffering from LaGrippe which destroyed her eye sight so that she can read no more, she feels her work is done and is waiting patiently for the promised rest.

Artistic Photography.

An important change in Photo parlors has taken place in our city, by which Mr. C. H. Daws assumes ownership of the Heck gallery. The people of Tecumseh congratulate themselves on securing so able an artist as Mr. Daws has proven himself to be in the many years in which he was connected with the Fairbanks' studio of Adrian, whose work, by the way, is more than locally famous. If artistic posing and elegant workmanship is the factor for Mr. Daws' success we are assured of the same. He expects to open the gallery and be in readiness to receive customers on Monday, June 22d.

Gilman which fully explains this part of the business. The rig will be completed with their matched black team.

The children of the Baptist Sunday school were all in a happy mood last Sunday morning, for Children's Day was properly celebrated at their church. The floral decorations were exceedingly tasty and beautifully arranged. The services, which consisted of singing and recitations were listened to by a large congregation. In the evening at the close of the regular service, two candidates received the holy rite of baptism.

The Presbyterian Church was filled with a large audience Sunday morning to witness a special service, commemorative of Children's Day. The pulpit was nicely decorated with flowers and potted plants. The Kid band covered themselves with glory at the Union Picnic last Saturday. They received praise on all sides for their fine playing, which was far superior to what people anticipated. The boys are improving with every rehearsal.

As the State Association has no summer meeting this year, the session will be attended by many editors in the eastern section of the state. The citizens of the "handsome city" have promised the hospitality for which they are so noted.

A retired farmer who has time to try experiments and note the results, says that for the last three years he has planted a bean or two in each potato hill, and has never seen a bug on the potato tops where beans were growing in the same hill. If this is a protection against the bugs, the remedy is simple, and will pay for the trouble in the crop of beans.

It is expected that the Alumni Exercises will be more than usually interesting this year. They will be held at the Lilley House on Friday evening, June 26th, at 8 o'clock. The program will consist of address of welcome to class of '61, by C. A. Slayton, President of the Association. Response by Harry McClure, President of the class of '91. History—Class of '83, by Miss Ida Taylor; vocal and instrumental music; toasts, etc. P. S. McKinnon will officiate as toast-master. The Tecumseh Orchestra (10 pieces) will furnish the instrumental music. Full program next week.

The concert given last Friday evening by the pupils of the lower grades of the public schools, under the direction of Miss Dora Grayson, was a musical entertainment of rare excellence. The choruses all showed careful training and rehearsal. In fact it was almost a marvel how so many children of all grades of musical ability could be drilled to sing together in such perfect unison and harmony. The class drill by the Primary grade was beautifully given. The Little Shaking Quakers was exquisitely rendered and brought forth a rousing encore. The second part consisted of a selection from the Flower Queen, in which Miss Grayson had an opportunity to display her skill as a vocalist as as well as an organizer. Miss Ella Jackson presided at the piano to excellent acceptance. A large and appreciative audience was present, who were enthusiastic in praise of the entire entertainment. The program, too, was of reasonable length. In short, it was a model musical entertainment from first to last, reflecting the highest credit upon both teacher and pupils.

FATAL WATERSPOUT.

It Causes Loss of Life and Property in Texas.

Live Stock, Crops and Other Property Swept Away—Victims of the Flood in Indian Territory—Cloudburst at Dayton, O.

MANY DROWNED.

GAINESVILLE, Tex., June 12.—News has been received here from Frazier, Green county, of destruction of life and property caused by a terrible waterspout, accompanied by a windstorm, which visited that town and vicinity Tuesday night. Rain had been falling several days, and Tuesday night about 11 o'clock a waterspout burst and in a few minutes the streets were 4 feet deep with water, presenting the appearance of a raging torrent. All the business houses were flooded. Men secured buggies and with great difficulty succeeded in hauling the women and children to places of safety. Three persons were drowned in Turkey creek—Pomp Poindexter, a young farmer, his sister and a young man named Albright. The dwelling house of Capt. Phillips was lifted from its foundation and carried nearly a mile, when it was hurled against a tree and wrecked. Phillips and one of his daughters caught some floating debris and were washed ashore half a mile from where the house was demolished. Mrs. Phillips and her babe caught a plank and were washed into the branches of a large tree, where they remained till the next day, when they were rescued by parties in a boat. A large number of houses were blown down and many others washed away. Dug-outs were filled with water and hundreds of people rendered homeless, and all their live stock, crops and other property swept away. A young farmer named Burdone, while trying to reach the shore in a ferryboat, was thrown from the boat and drowned.

ST. LOUIS, June 12.—A special from Gainesville, Tex., says: Near Leon, I. T., 30 miles from here, on Red river, the dead bodies of a man, woman and little babe were found in a drift, they having been drowned during the late overflow. The bodies have not been identified. William Lynn, a farmer, residing 30 miles north of here, on Hickory creek, was drowned in that stream while trying to ford it. The rise in the Red river is unprecedented. At Warran's and Sivil's bends, 20 miles northwest of here, the destruction is widespread. In these two bends there were 10,000 acres of corn, cotton and small grain cultivated by some fifty families. All these crops are destroyed, most of the houses swept away and large numbers of cattle, hogs and chickens drowned. At Yellow Banks ferry a Mr. Burdone was drowned while trying to reach the shore in an old ferryboat.

DAYTON, O., June 12. A cloud burst over the city came at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon flooding everything. The lightning struck in many parts of the city. One tenement house on Conovar street was blown down, but no casualties are reported. The Miami and Erie canal bank broke two miles south of town and is now flooding the garden lands along the river.

STARVING TO DEATH.

Great Suffering Among Immigrants in the Argentine Republic.

SOUTHAMPTON, June 13.—Over 800 families have arrived here by steamers from Buenos Ayres, having been forced to leave in consequence of the stoppage of work there and the lack of money. Nearly all are entirely destitute, and the Southampton authorities were obliged to provide them with food and other necessaries. There are many Irish families among them, who were in special need of relief. Some of them report a distressing state of affairs in the Argentine republic owing to the recent financial disturbances. The foreign population, large numbers of whom emigrated there on glowing promises of highly-paid labor, are said to be in some cases actually dying of starvation, as they are practically shut out from all work and can earn no money either to sustain themselves or to enable them to leave the country.

A Remarkable Landslide.

ATCHISON, Kan., June 12.—The landslide at Oak Mills, south of here, which has been playing havoc with traffic on the Missouri Pacific railroad, is a great deal more extensive than was at first supposed. A ten-acre tract of land has slid down hill. On the land there is a part of a wheat field, a farmhouse and several hundred trees. The ground seems to be underlaid with soapstone and springs. The Missouri Pacific has had 200 men at work there all week shoveling mud and sand.

One Killed, Two Wounded.

DES MOINES, Ia., June 15.—A gang of six young toughs went out to the camp-meeting ground on the outskirts of the city and at midnight got into a row regarding a woman. "Babe" Jones, aged 20, was shot and will not recover. Fred Kemp had his head nearly severed from his body by a big knife and Charles Derman was seriously cut across the face

Awarded $35,000 Damages.

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., June 12.—Mrs. Morgan, of this city, has just been awarded $35,000 damages from the Southern Pacific company. About a year and a half ago she and her 2-year-old child were accidentally thrown from a car. The child died and Mrs. Morgan injured her shoulder.

Sam Small Dropped.

DENVER, Col., June 13.—The Colorado conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, in session in this city voted yesterday to drop from membership in the church the ex-evangelist, Rev. Sam Small.

Nine-Hour Day for Printers.

BOSTON, June 15.—The Typographical union on Saturday adopted a resolution favoring a nine-hour day after October 1. The convention adjourned to meet in Philadelphia in June, 1892.

THE THRONE SHAKEN.

Indignation in England of the Middle Class Over the Baccarat Scandal.

LONDON, June 13.—The fate of Sir William Gordon Cumming is sealed, as far as the army is concerned, for the following paragraph is published in the Official Gazette:

"WAR OFFICE, June 12, 1891.—Scots Guards, Maj. and Lieut. Col. Sir William Gordon Cumming, baronet, is removed from the army, her majesty having no further occasion for his services.

"Dated June 10, 1891."

The storm rising round the prince of Wales is fast obtaining intensity, endangering his chances of succession to the throne, if not the existence of the English monarchy. No class appears to be stirred so deeply as the great middle class, the real strength of the country and hitherto a solid and stolid prop of the monarchy. Wherever the voice becomes audible its earnest denunciations of the prince of Wales are accompanied by regrets at his nearness to the throne. Representative gatherings of religious bodies—Congregational, Methodist, Baptist, Unitarian and Presbyterian—have already recorded their condemnations. Boards of guardians are going out of their accustomed paths to discuss motions branding the gambling propensities of the prince of Wales as a disgrace to the country. Several liberal societies have adopted protests against his continuance in the army. The agitation has every character of permanence. It has not yet touched more than a fringe of the political parties, but ere long the glowing fierceness of the popular heat must penetrate to the core of politics, causing party action within and without parliament.

OHIO PROHIBITIONISTS.

A State Ticket Named and a Platform Adopted at Springfield.

SPRINGFIELD, O., June 12.—The prohibition state convention adjourned Thursday night after making the following nominations: For governor, John J. Ashenhurst, of Canton; for lieutenant governor, W. J. Kirkendall, of Jackson; for supreme judge, H. L. Plake, of Sandusky; for auditor, Charles A. Reeser, of Springfield; for member of the board of public works, T. A. Rodifer, of Bellaire; for dairy and food commissioner, W. F. Brown, of Butler; for state school commissioner, Prof. E. R. Zellers, president of Hiram college.

The platform declares in favor of the prohibition of the liquor traffic, remedying class evils, opposes alien ownership of and further grants of land to corporations, favors government control of railroads and telegraphs, condemns speculation in margins and corners, favors gold, silver and paper for a circulating medium, woman suffrage, liberal pensions, better immigration laws; declares that the tariff should be assessed on the goods from such countries as tax American product and that the expenses of the government should be paid by an income tax and that all official fees should be covered into the public treasury and all officials paid salaries.

A DOLLAR SHORT.

Result of the Count of the Cash in the United States Treasury.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—The count of the cash in the vaults of the treasury consequent on the recent change in the office of treasurer has so far resulted in the discovery of a discrepancy of one dollar. This is missing from a bag of silver in a vault containing nearly $70,000,000. The bag broke open by its own weight and the decay of the canvas and its contents were scattered among the other bags in the vault. It contained 1,000 silver dollars, all but one of which were found and that one will probably turn up before the examination of the vault is concluded. Otherwise ex-Treasurer Huston will have to make it good.

Fatal Electrical Storm in New Jersey.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Tidings of a severe electrical storm along the New Jersey coast Friday afternoon are received here. At Cape May electric fluid struck the lighthouse tower, burning a small hole in the dome and passing down te the cottage connected with the tower, destroying a feather bed and painfully burning one foot of the son of the assistant keeper. At Hammondton Daniel Cross and two of his children were killed by the lightning. He leaves a wife and three children.

Honored by the Printers.

BOSTON, June 12.—W. B. Prescott, of Toronto, Can., was elected president of the International Typographical union at Thursday's convention. He had as his competitors Marcene Johnson, of Fort Worth, Tex., and S. L. Freeman, of Birmingham, Ala. Prescott won on the second ballot, receiving 94 out of 156 votes. Prescott is 27 years old, is employed on the Toronto News, and is president of the Printers' union of that city.

World's Fair Matters.

CHICAGO, June 13.—At a meeting in this city of the world's fair directors the treasurer's report showed that up to date the receipts were $1,644,224.61; disbursements, $422,868.63; cash on hand, $1,221,355.98. The eighteen foreign diplomats invited to come and see what preparations have been made for the fair arrived from Washington yesterday.

Found Dead in a Well.

WINNIPEG, Man., June 13.—Wednesday at Woodlands, Man., James Tadgell, a farmer, returned to his home in the evening and found his sister-in-law, who was keeping house for him, dead in the well. She had been outraged and then shot, presumably by a young lad of 17 who had been working for Tadgell and who is missing.

IN FAVOR OF BLAINE.

Important Political Conference at Indianapolis.

Republican Leaders Meet and Resolve to Make a Strong Effort to Secure the Nomination of the Man from Maine.

A BOOM FOR BLAINE.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 13.—A secret political conference of some significance was held in Indianapolis Thursday, and so well was it managed that not until Friday did the real character of the conference become known. The participants were men of prominence in politics, and they were brought together on a call issued about a month ago. Most of them are known as Gresham men. Among those who were present were: Gen. James McNulta, of Chicago, one of the strong adherents of Judge Gresham; Col. A. L. Conger, of Akron, O., a member of the national republican committee, and a Blaine man; Congressman Burrows, of Michigan, a follower of Alger; James O. Bradley, of Kentucky; three Detroit men, who are close to Alger and hard workers for him, but who managed to conceal their identity; Charles W. Fairbanks, of this city, who has all along been one of Judge Gresham's chief supporters; Judge Fields, the only Indiana delegate to the last national convention who refused to vote for Harrison; M. W. Simons, of Plymouth, the Indiana delegate to the same convention who voted first for Harrison and then went over to Gresham. There were also Addison C. Harris, of this city; C. B. Landis, of Delphi; G. W. Wilson, of Fort Wayne; A. A. Purman, of Fort Wayne; Charles A. Bookwalter, of Fort Wayne, and Austin Kumler, of Lafayette.

There was a settled agreement to make a strong fight against Harrison's renomination. The conference expressed a determination to oppose Harrison in the convention, but to stand by him if nominated. The conference was in the interest of the nomination of Blaine, the purpose being to at once inaugurate a movement in support of him. In an interview Col. Conger said that it was the desire of the participants to keep their move secret, if possible, but, since some information regarding it had leaked out, he was not disposed to conceal the facts. He said frankly that the purpose was to organize the republican friends of Mr. Blaine in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Wisconsin, Michigan and Kansas in support of his nomination for the presidency. It was also determined to hold another and fuller conference, but the time and place were kept a profound secret.

"It is simply our purpose," he said, "to do all that we can from now until the national convention is held to secure his nomination, and I am confident that we will succeed."

VICTIMS OF THE FLAMES.

Three Persons, Father, Mother and Son, Burned to Death in Their Home.

NEW YORK, June 15.—A whole family—father, mother and son—was swept out of existence Sunday morning by a fire which completely gutted the five-story brick apartment house at the northeast corner of Third avenue and Seventy-fourth street. The victims were Philip Brady, a laborer, aged 55 years; Catherine Brady, his wife, aged 40 years, and Joseph Brady, their son, aged 13 years. The fire started at half past 5 o'clock in the morning, when everybody in the building was asleep. That many other persons did not lose their lives is owing entirely to the active work and heroic conduct of the firemen.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am mine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent;
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill.

THE OLD HOMESTEAD.

My window's high between the eaves,
Its sash is set with tiny panes—
So quaintly flecked with summer rains!
Some, cracked across and "puttied in;"
One, mended by a strip of tin;
And, all day long, the rustling leaves
Dart shadows on its ancient face,
As cherry branches interlace.

The house is lowly, old and brown,
Long, sloping roof with chimneys vast,
(They made such, in old times, "to last.")
Green woodbine creeps up over it,
And on its apex pigeons sit.
No "gambrel" hath my roof, nor crown,
Where, in the softening evening light,
I rest and bid the world good-night.

Inside you'd stare, and deem it "poor,"
You, fresh from modern luxuries;
But, always, in my home-bred eyes,
The rooms seem royal—with a grace
Unwon from velvet, damask, lace.
Quaint latches fasten every door—
Unpaneled doors, which softly swing
To let the needy stranger in.

I would not change it all for gold
Nor part with one rush-seated chair;
Nor ancient linen, woven fair
And checkered with blue, long years ago;
Nor starry patchwork quilts a-row.
Perchance you think my praise too bold?
Ah! my rag carpets—striped gay,
Were made by hands moldered away.

The house runs o'er with relics small!
And oft it seemeth that the night
Restores lost faces to my sight.
My loneliness then disappears,
The sting is gone from saddening years,
A buoyant radiance rifts death's pall,
And freshly dear groweth each stone
Which lowly lifts my mountain home.

LARRY'S "OLD FOSSIL."

True to Her Promise She Adds Him to Her Collection.

There was so much talk about Prof. Chesney before he arrived, that Larry declared herself sick of the subject. Augusta, having spent several weeks in his company the previous summer, at the house of their mutual friend Mrs. Marteon, felt she had a prior right to him—"A primary mortgage on him," Larry said, in her girlish impertinence; Gertrude, who had met him several times, and who was considered very clever, called him "a congenial spirit;" Mrs. Austin, knowing his social standing and large income, declared him "a model man, one in a thousand;" Mr. Austin pronounced him "an up-and-down good fellow;" even Jim Annsley, their cousin and adopted brother, expressed approbation of him. Larry was the only one of the family who had not met him, and with her usual preversity made up her mind not to like him. He was learned in mathematics, which only scored against him, in her eyes.

"'The calculating power alone should seem to be the least human of qualities,'" she quoted, her small nose in the air. "There is something wrong about a man whom everybody likes. My prophetic soul tells me I shall not take to him."

"Your 'prophetic soul' makes mistakes sometimes," put in Jim wickedly. "I've no doubt you'll succumb to his charms before he has been here a week. But for sisterly affection's sake don't interfere; do give Augusta a chance."

"Don't alarm yourself!" cried Larry, loftily. "I'm not susceptible, and dried-up, fusty old professors don't appeal to me in the slightest. I shall be truly thankful when this wonderful 'admirable Crichton' has been and gone. I'm positively sick of the sound of his name."

"Prof. Chesney is certainly a wonderful man," began Jim, sententiously; but Larry pounced on him and he was ignominiously put to flight.

The Wednesday the professor was expected Larry went for a long walk; she met Ned Erksine and Harry Winthrop, two young artists with whom she was good friends, and enjoyed herself very much, getting in barely in time to dress for dinner. They were all assembled round the table when she slipped into her place, and there was a reproof in her mother's voice as she said: "My third daughter, Larinda, Prof. Chesney."

If there was anything that her "third daughter" hated, it was being addressed by her baptismal name. With a mutinous pout of her red underlip she bowed hastily, and it was not until she had disposed of her soup that she looked at her opposite neighbor. A tall, thin man, with brown hair and a short brown beard and mustache thickly streaked with gray, a large, dome-like forehead, and near-sighted gray eyes that looked kindly at her through his spectacles. He was a little surprised at the hostile expression in the brilliant brown eyes, which surprise deepened into astonishment when, in answer to a low-voiced remark from Jim, the young lady replied, also in a low tone, but so distinctly that he heard every word: "I think he is an old fossil." Notwithstanding this, several times during the meal his eyes strayed to the white-robed figure, the bent, shining, brown head, and once, in the midst of a remark from Augusta, he turned to listen to a peal of merry laughter from Larry.

Several of her friends came in during the evening, and she devoted herself to their entertainment, completely ignoring the professor. When she kept up this behavior for nearly a week, it attracted the attention of her family as well as that of the visitor; and when gentle hints were scorned, Larry was severely reprimanded.

"You are positively unladylike!" said Mrs. Austin; "and I insist on, at least, civility. He must think you an illmannered child."

"I daresay I do seem a child to his advanced years," saucily answered Larry.

"But what is your objection to him?" asked her mother. "To me he appears a most kindly, estimable gentleman—"

"Ugh!" cried her spoiled daughter, with a gesture of deep disgust. "If there is one thing that I despise more than another, it is that word 'estimable,' as applied to people. Call them good, bad, weak, strong, brave, cowardly—anything but 'estimable!'"

"You are exceedingly impertinent!" answered Mrs. Austin, who was now very angry. "I insist on your being polite to Prof. Chesney, and doing your share toward entertaining him, or I shall certainly complain of you to your father. Leave the room, miss."

A little ashamed, and wholly angry, Larry whisked out of the room, almost into the professor's arms, with such force as to rather stagger him. With a hasty "Excuse me," she sped along the corridor and up the stairs, while the "estimable gentleman" stood and looked after her.

"An old fossil!" he murmured, with a slight smile, stroking his beard.

Shortly after this, to the surprise of all, Larry suddenly changed her tactics, and at dinner one day addressed the professor. He answered courteously, and very readily joined in an argument between herself and Jim. Her remarks were bright and amusing, if somewhat crude, and the brown eyes and changeful face were very attractive. In the evening she played and sang for him, and was as sweet and bewitching as the heart of man could desire, much to the surprise of some, and the annoyance of others, of her family.

"She means mischief!" thought Jim, uneasily. "Are you beginning to succumb to the professor's charms?" he whispered. "You know I gave you a week."

"I am thinking of getting up a collection of fossils," she answered, with a mocking laugh, "and this is too fine a specimen to lose. Don't you dare interfere!"

"Poor wretch!" rejoined Jim. "He has my sympathy."

Unable to account for the change in Larry's manner, the professor nevertheless found her very agreeable; and, though never neglecting anyone else, it soon became evident that she was the attraction. The other two reluctantly gave way to her, and she it was who went with him to picture galleries and lectures and concerts, who was the life of the theater and opera parties, saucy, willful, charming.

With all his gravity and erudition, it was plain that he admired this ill-regulated young woman. He had never before been thrown closely into companionship with such a nature; he admired her beauty, her dainty costumes; even her girlish extravagance of speech and saucy disregard of his opinion pleased him better than Augusta's unvarying politeness, or Gertrude's cleverness. His eyes followed her every movement, a wistful light in them sometimes, that touched Jim.

"He's in for a severe attack, I'm afraid," he thought. "Bad disease to take late in life"—and went off whistling:

"Two bright eyes 'neath a scarlet hood,
One beguiling and one beguiled."

Larry was curled up in a deep window-sill overlooking the park, basking in the sun, for she was a veritable Persian in her love of sunlight, when Prof. Chesney came into the room. He leaned against the side of the window, looking at the picture she made in her quaint puffed and furbelowed gown, the sunlight falling on her brown head. Larry looked up, nodded with a smile that showed her small white teeth, and settled back into her original position, waiting for him to speak; and so he did, after awhile, but not as she expected.

"I am going away to-morrow, Miss Larry," he said. "My pleasant visit has come to an end."

"'To-morrow'?" echoed Larry, sitting up straight. "I'm very sorry you are going." And, much to her own surprise, she realized that the remark was perfectly sincere.

"I am glad to hear you say that," said the professor, trying to keep his voice steady. "It makes it a little easier to say something that is in my heart." Then he told his story in warm, eager words, very unlike his usual calm—words that stirred Larry strangely. There was a queer expression on her pale face as she stood before him.

"Prof. Chesney," she said, with quivering lips, "I'm not worth the love you have offered me. You'll realize that when I tell you that I've only been pleasant and civil to you all these weeks, not from any liking for you, but to—to plague the others." Thoroughly ashamed, she bent her head, unable to meet his eyes.

"You mean that you have deliberately played a part all these weeks? You, whom I thought so frank and true? How could you do it! Then you've not the slightest love for me in your heart—that, I suppose, is out of the question." There was a hurt, shocked tone in his voice that touched Larry keenly.

"I don't love you," she answered, "but I shall be very grateful, if, after what I have told you, you will let me be your friend." She put out her hands and moved a step nearer to him, but, to her mortification, her extended hands remained untouched.

"I did not ask for your friendship," he said, unsteadily, "and just at present I want only what I asked for. By and by I may be able to appreciate your offer; I shall try, but you've taught me a hard lesson, Larry, one I'm not likely to forget. Perhaps I ought to have known better, but," with a break in his voice, "I'm not used to women—I'm only 'an old fossil,' after all." And without another word he left her.

Up in her room Larry was still more surprised to find a fit of crying a necessity. She could not account for the dull, unhappy feeling that took entire possession of her as she reviewed the past weeks and realized that the kindly, pleasant companionship she had accepted so heedlessly was ended.

"I suppose he'll hate me now and forever," she thought, between her sobs. "But how could I say I loved him when I didn't?"

"Mistress Mary, quite contrary, quite contrary!" mocked a parrot in the next yard.

"He was so hurt, so grieved. I wonder if he'll ever forgive me?"

"Quite contrary, quite contrary," shrieked the parrot, with such force that it sounded positively personal to conscience-stricken Larry. "Fiendish bird!" she cried, "I wish some one would wring your neck!" Then she sobbed all the harder.

The professor left the next afternoon, while Larry was out. A box of white roses lay on the table, addressed to her, a card attached on which was written: "From your friend, Roger Chesney;" that was all, but she guessed dimly what an effort it cost to write it. With trembling fingers she divided the flowers into three parts and gave them to her mother and sisters. "I don't want them," she said, proudly, in answer to Mrs. Austin's remonstrance. "I was only civil to him to please you all." But Jim noticed that the brilliant eyes were full of tears, and that she took the card away with her.

"It must be a relief to you to have him gone," he said, with malice aforethought, as they stood a moment in the hall. "Associating with such a serious man must have been a trying experience for you."

He was unprepared for the way she flamed out at him: "Such an experience as makes me more willing to accept the statement that man is made after God's own image and possesses some Godlike attitudes. Now go!"

And he did, a lurking smile under his mustache and a most emphatic "By Jove!" on his lips.

One bright, sunny morning early in June Jim opened the door of Mrs. Austin's sitting-room. Larry was in there alone. She had an industrious fit on her, and with the sleeves of her blue morning dress turned back, displaying two prettily-rounded arms, feather duster in hand, she was whisking the dust off some rare pieces of old china.

"Larry, here is an old friend of yours," announced Jim. "Treat him well, for he sails for Egypt to-morrow, never to return. I'll be back in a minute."

He vanished; and there, inside the closed door, stood Prof. Chesney, a little thinner, a little grayer, but with the old kindly smile on his lips that she remembered so well. Startled out of her self-possession, Larry stood with her feather duster suspended over grandma's hundred-year-old teapot.

"I sail for Europe to-morrow," said the professor, taking a few steps into the room, "and I may never return. Won't you wish me godspeed, Larry?"

Ah! went grandma's priceless teapot into a dozen pieces on the polished floor, and the next thing Larry knew she was crying bitterly.

"Are you crying because I am going away?" asked the professor, eagerly—he was very near her now—"or because you have broken the teapot?"

"Both!" cried Larry, with a convulsive sob which was smothered in the folds of the professor's coat as the arms of that "estimable gentleman" closed round her.

"How about your 'prophetic soul,' Larry?" teased Jim, later on. "I thought you called him 'a fossil'?"

"So I did," answered the young lady, with a brilliant smile, quite unabashed. "But I also said I was 'getting up a collection of fossils,' and recognized the fact that he was 'too fine a specimen to lose.' Don't you remember?"—Barbara Yechton, in Demorest's Monthly.

THE NUTMEG TRADE.

Experts Say That the Liming Process Tends to Spoil the Nut.

"People may laugh as they please about the old-time Connecticut nutmeg joke," said a prominent spice importer, "but there are several interesting points about this somewhat maligned though thoroughly spicy little nut of which the majority of people are ignorant. Have you ever noticed that most nutmegs—for I suppose you have occasionally grated them yourself into a glass of punch or toddy, even if you have never seen them in your kitchen—are covered with a thin white coating, or, at least, that the numerous crevices are filled with a light-colored substance? Most people think that to be a natural condition of the nutmeg, but it is not. The substance is lime, and the reason for its being placed on the nutmeg is a rather curious one. Many years ago the practice of liming nutmegs originated among the Dutch colonial merchants of the East Indies. They broke the shells and then immersed the kernels or seed in the milk of lime, often keeping them there for a period of three months. The object of this treatment was to prevent the seed from sprouting out during transportation to the European markets, as you have often seen potatoes do late in the spring.

"This necessitated a second drying, and most experts now claim that liming spoils the nut from a hygienic and chemical point of view, and by degrees shippers are learning that the process is really unnecessary. In many sections of the world, though, the prejudice in favor of liming is so strong that the 'penang,' which is considered the best variety of nutmeg grown, will not command anything like the price it deserves unless the white lime coating is present. European merchants, however, have learned to take this variety of nutmeg in its natural brown condition. The Chinese also prefer them unlimed, while the American buyers usually like them in their old-fashioned way.

"Occasionally unscrupulous eastern shippers will adulterate good nuts with those quite as worthless as the proverbial wooden ones of colonial days in New England," continued the merchant. "I mean by mixing in with the good ones nutmegs from which the oil has been extracted, as there is a process by which a valuable volatile oil can be taken without destroying the nut. The flavor of the nut is in this oil; hence, without the latter the nut is almost worthless. These nuts may be detected by their lightness in weight when compared with the genuine article, and a close examination with a magnifying glass will show that the surface of the nut, robbed of its oil, is covered with minute holes."—Washington Post.

—Science Corroborated.—J. Newton Laplace—"When we say that the 'sun goes down' at nightfall, we are, of course, speaking inaccurately. It is really the earth that moves, and we ought to say 'the earth comes up.'" H. Drinkwine Rounder—"I've always thought it must be so! Only last night the earth came up and hit me."—Chicago Saturday Herald.

Rev. P. S. Henson, D.D.

The Eloquent Pastor of the First Baptist Church of Chicago, Does Suffering Humanity a Great Service by Telling His Experience with a Great Family Medicine. Read:

"An almost fatal attack of La Grippe last winter left me with nasal Catarrh and such susceptibility to bronchial irritation that the slightest exposure would develop it, and a very little effort in public speaking would result in a distressing hoarseness to that I had serious fears of permanent disability.

"Besides, I suffered with dyspeptic troubles—notably what is popularly known as 'heartburn,' from which I found it difficult to obtain relief. I was induced by a friend to try KING'S ROYAL GERMETUER, and it gives me great pleasure to say that its effect has been as magical as 'Koch's Lymph' is reputed to be, which is also a 'germ destroyer,' though taken in a different way.

"Catarrh, bronchial irritation, and dyspepsia have all disappeared before one bottle of the GERMETUER has been used.

"One of my sons, who has long been a sufferer from Catarrh, has received like signal relief from his old enemy. P. S. HENSON.

"Chicago, Dec. 10, 1890."

GERMETUER cures by killing the disease germ and thus removing the cause. It is a specific for Catarrh, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Lung, Blood, Liver, Kidney, and Bowel Trouble. IT IS WOMAN'S BEST FRIEND, regulating all irregularities. It builds up from the first dose. For sale by druggists, or will be sent anywhere C. O. D. for $1.00 per bottle (concentrated, which makes one gallon medicine).

E. S. Tate, of Tecumseh, came up Wednesday to attend his brother's funeral.

Miss Laura Haggart came home from Cambridge, Ill., last week for her summer vacation.

Chas. Thompson, John Machin and Ben Ellis spent a day or two at Sand Lake this week.

We hear that Eli McConnell, of West Toledo, is to be married Tuesday to a lady in Saginaw.

John Amspoker and three friends from Ohio spent two or three days at Sand Lake last week.

A large number from town attended the Baptist social at Justus Watson's, in Bridgewater, Tuesday.

Miss Carrie White is visiting at her brother's, Dr. J. E. White's. She expects to remain some time.

J. T. Clark now drives a handsome span of sorrel horses, which with his new canopy top make a fine turnout.

Howard Hause was home from Detroit over Sunday. He has a position as typewriter in the Detroit Radiating Co.

E. A. Wilson, Sec'y of County Board of School examiners, is expected to visit schools in this township the last of this week.

Geo. Codling was in Tecumseh last week, taking Newberry Satterthwaite's place in the Lake Shore depot during his absence.

Will Hall, who has been in Scotland for six weeks, sailed from Glasgow June 11th, and is expected here the first of next week.

The Catholic church received a general overhauling last week. Kalsomine, plaster, and soap and water have made a great improvement in the edifice.

Mrs. George Miller, of Chicago, arrived here Wednesday to remain a few days. She will attend the wedding of her brother, Eli McConnell, at Saginaw next week.

Children's day exercises were held at the M. E. church Sunday morning and at the Congregational in the evening. Both the churches were tastefully decorated and the exercises appropriate and pleasing.

Mrs. E. R. Smith's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Haywood, arrived here last Monday from Topeka, Ks. They will remain in Michigan most of the summer, visiting friends here, at Saline, and in the northern part of the State.

Dwight Tate died very suddenly at his home in Bridgewater last Monday afternoon. He had been cultivating corn and came to the house for a drink of water. After drinking quite freely he went to the barn and had just stepped inside the door when he fell dead. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon.

Rev. and Mrs. H. R. Williams were very agreeably surprised at the Congregational social held at Miss Katherine Smith's Wednesday by being made the recipients of a handsome new phaeton, harness and fly-net. Members of Mr. Williams' church took this way to show their appreciation of their pastor and his wife, and without doubt fully as much pleasure was taken in planning the surprise as Mr. and Mrs. Williams experienced in their reception of the gift.

If the committee on arrangements for the Farmers' Union Picnic had possessed the privilege of arranging the weather to suit themselves they could hardly have asked for a more perfect day than was last Saturday. Although the attendance was not as large as it has been in some years, yet there was a fair assembly and everyone seemed to enjoy the entertainment that had been provided. Sand Lake has been rapidly gaining in favor as a summer resort, and the improvements about the house and grounds at Putnam's Landing, that have been made this year, make it more than pleasant.

THE GREAT BENEFIT.

Which people in run down state of health derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla, conclusively proves that this medicine "makes the weak strong." It does not act like a stimulant, imparting fictitious strength, but Hood's Sarsaparilla builds up in a perfectly natural way all the weakened parts, purifies the blood, and assists to healthy action those important organs, the kidneys and liver.

MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

LANSING, Mich., June 8.—A new sensation was sprung in the senate on Saturday in the form of charges of bribery against Senator Friedlender, the senator who was given the seat of Benjamin C. Morse (rep.) during the absence of the republican minority of the senate attending the party state convention. Friedlender is accused of bribery and treachery to his constituents in accepting a bribe of $300 for his aid in carrying through the senate a house bill for consolidating the rival cities of Oscoda and Au Sable, in Iosco county.

LANSING, Mich., June 10.—The senate yesterday passed the house bill providing for the election of county commissioners of schools and the appointment of examining boards to assist them, and also concurred in the house amendments to the Benson free text-book bill. The house bill detaching territory from Manitou county and attaching the same to the county of Leelenaw was killed. The contempt proceedings against William C. Graves, the Detroit Tribune correspondent, for refusing to answer questions asked him by the special committee engaged in investigating the bribery charges brought against Representatives Doyle and Munthe, of the upper peninsula, were quashed.

LANSING, Mich., June 11.—The senate yesterday passed the house game bill, amending it so that deer can be shot in the upper peninsula only from October 15 to November 1. A bill was also passed placing all special charter railroads on the same footing as other roads in the matter of taxation, and another abolishing all specific railroad taxes and substituting local taxation instead.

LANSING, Mich., June 12.—The senate yesterday passed the Richardson house bill providing for bringing all railroads of the state under the general law for taxation purposes; also the senatorial apportionment bill, and the bill making ten hours a legal day's work and requiring that employes be given extra pay for extra work. The bill makes it a misdemeanor for employers to coerce employes into signing contracts waving the above provisions.

LANSING, Mich., June 13.—A bill passed the senate yesterday abolishing the entire specific tax system relating to mining property and placing it upon the same basis as all other property for purposes of taxation. Adjourned to Monday evening.

HOUSE.

LANSING, Mich., June 8.—The house held a short session on Saturday and adjourned until 9:15 p. m. Monday evening.

LANSING, Mich., June 10.—The house yesterday passed the senate bill for a consolidation of the penal institution boards of control after making a sweeping reduction in salaries. Those of the wardens of the prisons and of the superintendents of the criminal insane asylum and of the reform school were reduced from $2,500 to $1,500 with board; those of deputy wardens and clerks from $1,200 to $1,000, and all provisions for board and subordinate offices were struck out. Bills were also passed appropriating $2,600 for the support of the state weather service; repealing the charter of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railway and bringing it under the provisions of the general law; for a recompilation of "Michigan and its resources." The committee on public health has by adverse reports killed bills prohibiting the sale of tobacco in any form to minors under 17 years of age, and establishing a state homeopathic medical college at Detroit. The same committee reported without recommendation the bill abolishing the state board of health.

LANSING, Mich., June 11.—The bill appropriating $55,000 for the fish commission this year and next passed the house yesterday. Although Reporter Graves, who made sensational charges against Doyle and Munthie, escaped punishment for contempt, the house voted to expel him from the floor.

LANSING, Mich., June 12.—In the house yesterday the bill appropriating $30,000 for entertainment of the National G. A. R. at Detroit, which had passed both houses by a two-thirds vote, and was vetoed by the governor, came up for reconsideration and failed to pass over the veto. The bill providing for the payment of bounties to soldiers still remaining due after amending it so as to apply only to bounties promised soldiers who enlisted under the call of February, 1863, was passed.

LANSING, Mich., June 13.—The house yesterday passed the senate bill repealing all specific taxes on mines and providing that hereafter they shall be taxed locally the same as other property. The state last year realized about $75,000 from taxing the mines specifically, but the counties got little. The bill also repeals the law which exempted from state taxes 640 acres for each mining company. The conference committee reported a substitute for the congressional gerrymander. It makes changes from the bill which passed the house only in the proposed Second and Sixth districts. Adjourned to Monday evening.

WANT TO GO TO EUROPE.

President Harrison Asked to Choose Two Women for the Immigration Commission.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Mrs. Charlotte Smith, president of the Woman's National Industrial league of America, has written a letter to President Harrison earnestly urging the appointment of two women on the board of commissioners to investigate the immigration problem in Europe. The letter calls attention to the great immigration of women of all classes into the United States from Canada and Europe, many of whom it is asserted are brought over here for immoral purposes. Great numbers of them it is also alleged are imported to take the places of American women in mills and factories and clothing establishments at greatly reduced wages. The smuggling of Chinese into the United States and the displacement of American help by this cheap labor is spoken of. It is urged that female inspectors would be able to greatly aid the American working women in their struggle for a livelihood and do better duty than men.

DEVASTATED BY FIRE.

More Than 100 Miles of Territory in New Brunswick Swept by Flames.

ST. JOHN, N. B., June 12.—Forest fires are raging with unabated fury in the northern section of the province. Unless there is an immediate and heavy fall of rain much additional damage must follow. Over 100 miles of country have been made desolate, and among the poor settlers it is a case of ruin. The result will be severely felt by the lumber men, as many valuable timber areas have been swept away. Never in the history of the province has such damage been caused by fires in the forests, and a bad feature is that none of the settlements have any adequate means of quenching the flames.

Will Row at Detroit.

DETROIT, Mich., June 15.—The officers of the Northwestern Rowing association have received a dispatch from the Mississippi Valley Rowing association, accepting the proposition to hold its regatta on the Detroit river in conjunction with the Northwestern's regatta, August 10 to 12.

A Fatal Blow.

CANTON, O., June 15.—During an altercation Saturday night over a broken pane of glass Joseph Wise, a saloon keeper, almost instantly killed Charles Henderson (colored) by a blow of the fist.

E. L. Russell has for some time given his attention to the breeding of Shorthorns and he has a fine herd now on his farm. For the purpose of still further improving the same he has just purchased a young bull from the celebrated herd of Wm. Curtis and son of Wheatland, which is a splendid animal. His sire is the 38th Duke of Airdrie and his dam, 40th Duchess of Hillsdale. The young gent came down on the Mackinaw train yesterday and was at once installed in his new quarters.

THE MILWAUKEE

CHAIN POWER MOWER!

Takes the Lead!

And possesses all of the necessary requirements of a perfect Mower and stands first in the list of grass cutting machines.

It is entirely made of iron and steel, except the poll, neck-yoke, whiffletrees, swarth board and arm, which are of wood. It has no complicated nest gear with numerous bearings to wear out, only possessing five journal bearings in the entire machine.

The wheels are high and wide apart. We do not claim that our Mower wheels will completely clear the swath cut by our widest cutting apparatus; this would be absurd, as every casual observer understands that the farther the wheels are apart the greater will be the leverage of the axle upon the pole and that an extreme length of axle will therefore produce vibration and require a heavy pole.

Our Chain Power Mower is free from Vibration, Neck-Weight, Side Draft and we are enabled to use a Light Pole.

The weight of the cutting apparatus is carried upon the axle between the drive wheels, thus increasing the traction power of the Machine and making it a strong cutter.

Be sure and examine this Mower before purchasing. Call at my Rooms in the Usborne Block and see one.

Yours, for a Big Hay Crop,

The Toledo Blade was represented at the Convention and with its complete report of the program for the week, it printed portraits of a few of the progressive young members, among which Mr. Allen is placed, with the following brief sketch of his railroad life accompanying his likeness in the Blade: "Frank Allen, dispatcher of the C. J. & M. in this city, began railroading in February, 1884. on the Michigan & Ohio road (now the C. J. & M.) as operator. His efficiency gained for him steady promotion and in September, 1886, he was appointed agent at Tecumseh, Mich., one of the most important stations on the line. which he filled to the entire satisfaction of the company and the public. He was made train dispatcher in December, 1888, with headquarters at Toledo, and now holds that position with success beyond question."

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Laura M. Eddy McNeil was born in Pittsford, Monroe Co., N. Y., May 22, 1842. In early womanhood she became openly a follower of that Saviour whom she continued to trust in the shadow of the dark valley.

July 19th, 1865, she was united in marriage to our fellow townsman, Mr. Chas. A. McNeil. The exceptionally large gathering at her burial testified to the high degree of respect in which she and her husband are held by our community. The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. F. E. Arnold, assisted by the Rev. F. Adkins. Following the sermon at the church the ritual of the Woman's Relief Corps, and, at the grave, that of the Good Templar's, were read. Of both these societies she was an honored and helpful member. To her husband and sons we extend our heartfelt sympathy in their great loss. F. E. A.

A Young Man's Fancy

Large allowance is to be made for the sweeping assertion of the poet that "In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love." It certainly is not true of the malarial young man, whose fancy, if he has any, is of the dull and heavy variety. The malarial young man marches around as the captive of General Debility. The readiest and most obvious means of escape are afforded by S. S. S., which, without any flourish, routs General Debility and his malarial allies. What is true of the young man is true of the young lady, and the whole host of sufferers. S. S. S. is a specific for malaria.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Kimball have commenced keeping house in Thomas Curtis' tenant house in North Rome.

The North Rome P. of I. association held an extra meeting on Saturday evening of this week for special business.

The North Rome and Onsted church societies united in services of baptism last Saturday afternoon, at the east shore of Devil's Lake.

Another store will be started right away in the building just vacated by Culver, of Brooklyn. The firm name will be Love & Clark.

The bulletin board, which adorns the front of the drug store, informs all customers that after the first of July it will be only cash sales within.

Mrs. Gilbert, of Illinois, after visiting her sister, Mrs. O. L. Short, a few weeks, continues her visit with friends in York State before returning to her home.

The Patrons of Rome held their union meeting with the West Rome association on Saturday of last week, and considering the time of year and unsettled state of the weather a goodly number were present to listen to and help in carrying out a long and interesting program. Two business or secret meetings were held during the day, when considerable business pertaining to the order was done. Mr. John Moore, President of the County association, delivered an able address; also Mr. George Moore, an officer of the State association. The Clayton Band was in attendance and furnished some very choice music during the day.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 25, 1891.

"Tin and Taffy" will be Major McKinley's political war cry in Ohio this fall.

The plan of electing Presidents and U. S. Senators by direct vote of the people is gaining in public favor. The Michigan plan of choosing electors is the first step in that direction.

Mr. Blaine has got the W. C. T. U. after him and he may find the ladies more troublesome than the gout. They object to his reciprocity scheme of introducing American beer and whiskey into South America.

Pennington, the air-ship inventor, now says that he will make his first extended trip on the Fourth of July. He doesn't say whether he will travel by rail or boat, so that it is fair to assume that he actually expects to go in his air-ship.

Some Democratic U. S. Senators are opposed to Cleveland's re-nomination. But a very large majority of Democratic editors—the men who are in touch with the masses and know what public sentiment is—are most emphatically in favor of Cleveland. If the popular choice is respected, Cleveland is the coming man.

The Ohio Democrats are never quite so happy as when cutting each other's throats. They are engaged in that interesting pastime now, and seem determined to make a good job of it. They have to be licked out of their boots for about five or six successive elections before they learn to "get together" and turn their guns on the common enemy.

The Ohio Republicans have thrown down the gauntlet, as was expected, and have nominated Major McKinley for Governor. The Ohio Democracy never had a better chance to gain a sweeping victory, but do they know enough to improve it? The present indications are that they will throw Gov. Campbell overboard and thus insure McKinley's election.

These words of President Polk of the National Farmers' Alliance are at this time suggestive: "We are not making war on any political party, but simply teaching the people how to get relief as laid down in our platform" And for several months to come President Polk will take a hand personally in teaching the people. There are to be large mass meetings held in forty States this summer, besides a corps sf speakers are to kept constantly at work addressing small meetings in isolated communties. Whatever the outcome, this certainly looks like business.

Here is a message from Mr. Gladstone to young men: "Be sure that everyone of you has his place and vocation on this earth, and that it rests with you to find it. Do not believe those who too lightly say nothing succeeds like success. Effort, honest, manful, humble effort, succeeds by its reflected action, especially in youth, better than success; which, indeed, too easily won and too early gained, not seldom serves, like winning the first throw of the dice, to blind and stupefy. Be thorough in all you do. Work onward and work upward, and may the blessing of the Most High sooth your cares, clear your vision and crown your labors."

The Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, in a recent sermon delivered at Plymouth Church, gave this happy distinction between the old and new theologies: He characterized the old as the belief that God was outside of man, the new as the belief that God was in man. He denied that the Bible was either inerrant or infallible. It is a mixture of the human and divine and its glory is that it shows God and man to be of the same essential nature. He found no fault with the old theology and was sorry that some others did. It was a step to the temple. Still, while he honored the steps and was glad to have traversed them, he was unhesitating in his avowal that he would not turn back.

Go to the HERALD office for your job work. Reasonable prices charged.

NATIVE AND FOREIGN WOOL.

Why Ohio Wool is Lower in Price—What the Manufacturers Say—A Case of Tariff Failure.

It has puzzled our producers of wool that the price of fine native clothing wool is less now than it was last year, before McKinley increased the protective duty. The grades of Ohio and Michigan wools most used in making fine woolens are now from 1 to 2 cents lower than a year ago.

The causes of this are two, the increased production of wool in Australia and the unsatisfactory character of domestic wool.

It is said that the wool production of Australia is increasing so rapidly that if the entire production of the United States were wiped out Australia could supply an equal amount in five years, provided that its production continues to grow at the same rate as last year.

A gentleman who has just returned from Australia says that as the sheep graze there all the year round they require no winter feeding, and that they will probably continue to increase and the growers will find it profitable at even less than present prices. He estimated that the capacity of that continent to sustain sheep is equal to many times the present demands upon it. Australia is capable of producing the world's supply of clothing wools.

The quality of Australian wool is so even that a much larger per cent. of each fleece can be used in any one line of goods than is the case with American wools. Manufacturers aim to run their machinery all the time on the same grade of cloth, finding that the manufacture of different grades involves loss of time and is otherwise less satisfactory. Hence they buy a wool in which they find the largest possible percentage of the desired quality. They say that the American fleece is uneven, that an undue percentage of it must be laid aside as suitable only for a different grade of goods. The American Wool Reporter, a high authority on this question, says:

"The manufacturer prefers Australian wool even at the advanced cost. Why? Because it is put up better; it is cleaner; it shrinks less; there is less waste and there are fewer tags in it than in domestic fleece. It does not contain so many tarred ends, so many pounds of strings and so much burry stuff as Ohio and Michigan fleeces."

A manufacturer, writing in the same journal, says: "If Michigan or Ohio wools are purchased, and a strictly clear, fine sort is required, not more than half, and frequently a smaller percentage of such sort is obtained from a fleece, and the undesirable qualities accumulate from month to month, until, alarmed at the quantity, the manufacturer makes other grades of goods to consume this accumulation, and dispose of them at a loss."

For these reasons the price of Ohio and Michigan wools have declined. This, however, has not been the case with the wools produced in Texas, California and the territories, as manufacturers have recently discovered that these wools are very desirable for mixing with Australian wool for manufacturing cloth.

Thus the efforts of the Ohio political wool-growers to make higher profits by raising the wool duties have been doomed to disappointment. Their higher duties, however, are not harmless on that account; for all imported wools bear higher taxes, which the consumer necessarily pays.

THE WINDOW GLASS TRUST.

A New Child of the Tariff—Organization of the Trust and Advance of Prices—Shaking Down the McKinley Plums—An Industry That Lied.

Forty-three manufacturers of window glass have recently met in Chicago and signed their names to an agreement raising the price of glass fifteen or twenty per cent. They take care not to call their combination a trust, and even said that they had "had enough of trusts;" but, all the same, this combination serves all the purposes of a trust. It binds the signers together in a cast-iron compact to keep prices up to a certain figure. In the popular mind this is all that is necessary to constitute a trust.

This window glass trust is distinctly a child of the high tariff. The glass business has extended very rapidly during the past ten years, there being now about twice as many pots as in 1880. This great growth was promoted largely by the discovery of natural gas, which supplied a cheap fuel admirably suited to the purposes of the glass manufacturer.

The protectionists can thus point to the expansion of the glass industry; and they invariably claim this expansion as one of the bright and shining proofs of the "blessings of protection." But they cannot claim that their system has put down glass to the consumers at lower prices in all these thirty years of high duties.

The following table shows the price of different sizes of glass in 1860 and 1890:

Sizes.	Quality.	Price per ½ box of 50 feet.
		1860	1890.
8x10 inches	3d	$ 1.95	$ 1.90
8x10 "	6th	1 80	1 85
10x14 "	3d	2.40	2 04
10x14 "	3d	2.40	1.94
12x 8 "	1st	3.00	2.75
12x 8 "	3d	2 40	2.28
18x24 "	2d	3 60	3 13
22x28 "	2d	3 60	3 32
Total 8 boxes		$20.85	$19.12½

Here is a trifling reduction of 8 per cent. in thirty years of high protection; but the trust has now put up prices 15 to 20 per cent., and so there has been no reduction in thirty years. On the other hand, here is a table giving the prices of imported glass in 1867 and 1889:

Sizes	1867. Per lb	1889. Per lb.
	Cts.	Cts.
Not above 10x15	2.6	2.0
10x15 to 16x24	3.2	1.6
16x24 to 24x30	4.5	1 8
Average	4.125	1.9

Or a fall since 1867 of 54 per cent., showing clearly that instead of lowering the price of window glass the tariff has kept up the price here. The domestic manufacturers keep prices close up to the price of foreign glass with the duty added. For the last ten years less than one-third of our window glass has been imported, always enough, however, to keep the domestic manufacturers within bounds in the matter of prices.

Of the various domestic industries conspicuous at Washington when the tariff bill was under discussion, none showed up more prominently than the window glass manufacturers. Their particular trade was already protected by duties averaging above 100 per cent., but according to representations made on their behalf this was insufficient to secure them against foreign competition. McKinley lent them a ready ear and advanced duties in all sizes of glass. The senate, however, insisted upon retaining the old rates of duty, and this was done, except on the largest size where a higher duty was given.

The same effect as higher duties, however, was accomplished by adding a provision that all imported window glass should be shipped in boxes of 50 feet, instead of, as previously, boxes of 100 feet. Under the administrative tariff act, moreover, still further protection was given by assessing duties on coverings, on freights and insurance, and by allowing nothing whatever for broken glass. The organization of this trust, therefore, means a scramble for McKinley spoils.

How the committee was imposed upon by the window glass men was made clear some time ago, when a syndicate of British capitalists made overtures for the purchase of certain window glass factories. Before the ways and means committee, the window glass manufacturers told a pitiful tale of hard struggles for existence, or how they were compelled reluctantly to pay rates of wages much below their inclinations, and of how raising import duties to a pratically prohibitive height would be for the benefit of the workman. To the British, however, they made it clear that their factories were a property well worth having at a good price, as a steady ten per cent. profit might safely be counted upon.

Does It Reduce Imports?

The high tariff organs ought to try to get together and not pull in contrary directions. The New York Tribune, the leading protectionist journal of the country, has been pointing out how the McKinley law does not restrict trade, as imports are larger than ever; and therefore how false and wicked are all those who speak of that measure as a Chinese wall!

In a contrary way speaks the Manufacturer, the high tariff organ of the powerful Manufacturers' club of Philadelphia. This mouth-piece of Pennsylvania protection rejoices thus:

The manner in which the McKinley tariff, within a few months after its adoption, is fulfilling the purpose of its passage and the prediction of its friends is plainly indicated by the following facts: The imports of this country of foreign textiles for the month of January this year were about $6,000,000 less than for the same month last year. The imports of woolens and worsteds for February, 1891, were more than $2,000,000 less than for February, 1890. The exports of worsted stuffs from the Bradford district, England, fell from about $1,000,000 in February of last year to $360,000 in February of this year, a decline of 65 per cent. The exports of cutlery from Sheffield to the United States for the first quarter of the present year were just one-half those for the same quarter of last year.

In other words, McKinley's "American bill" prevents the American people from buying what they want.

Larger Imports of Sugar.

Importation of sugar in March and February are interesting to anyone who wishes to find out the effects of tariffs upon trade. In February our imports of dutiable sugar, molasses and sugar candy fell to $5,682,111, the free imports from the Hawaiian islands being $1,310,658 additional. On March 1 sugar began to be imported free in bond for refining, preparatory to the removal of the duty on the 1st of April. At once sugar began to be imported in greatly increased quantities, the four ports of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and San Francisco alone reporting $13,499,568 worth of sugar imported in March.

From July 1, 1890, to February 28, 1891, the importation of sugar was more than $10,000,000 less than in the same time the previous year. The imports for the single month of March, however, were nearly one-eighth of our usual importation for an entire year.

The decline in imports in February and months immediately preceding was due to the prospect of free sugar. It was a recognition that the tariff is a tax; and the enlarged importation since March 1 is an evidence that there is an enlarged demand and greater consumption for untaxed sugar. It means that the removal of a duty is a saving to the consumer.

The First Strikers.

The common notion is that strikers are laborers who quit work for higher pay; but ex-Gov. Morton, of Nebraska, has recently shown that the first strikers were not laborers, but capitalists. The following is his novel way of presenting the case:

Citizens of ordinary intelligence who have reflected upon the discontent of labor and the strikes which result from it see that this discontent and these strikes are directly traceable to the protective system, for when capital demanded a protective tariff to encourage certain branches of industry it struck for higher profits. The capitalists who demanded from congress the statutes excluding foreign competition were the first "strikers" in the United States. And so the laborer, seeing that the capitalists can strike for higher profits through the law making power of the government, naturally strikes for high wages. This is done sometimes by the old method of quitting work, and again, capital, an appeal is made to congress to make eight hours a day. Congress has just as much economic power to make forty minutes an hour. There never was a legislative body, national or state, wise enough to define a day's labor.

—McKinley raised the duty on raisins from 2 cents to 2½ cents per pound; and the price of raisins is a half-cent lower now than last year. Protection papers try to make use of this fact to show that McKinley's higher duties can cause lower prices. But there is a perfectly natural reason for the lower price of raisins this year. The fruit dealers are complaining that the use of raisins as a table fruit is passing out of fashion in the large cities, and that this is causing a more limited demand and consequently lower prices. The McKinley organs must "mend the instance."

DEAFNESS CAN'T BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the musous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Footprints of the World's History.

It is a relief to pick up a new book that is at once thrilling, romantic, wholesome, pure, and true. Such a work is "Footprints of the World's History," the latest and greatest work of the two celebrated historians, John Clark Ridpath and Wm. S. Bryan The se distinguished gentlemen, having won their laurels by independent writings have co-operated on this work, and produced a gem "of the purest ray serene." It is not a dry, uninteresting statement of the plain facts, but rather each of the most important events of history has been taken up and described by a master of language, who holds the reader entranced as he wends his way along the path of history, following carefully in the footprints of progress.

We are delighted with this superb volume. Perfect in thought, superb in style, and magnificent in execution. The bindings are sumptuous as are also the many illustrations and colored plates. The Publishers have rightly concluded that such a gem should have a rich setting.

It is a valuable addition to literature It is a book for the old as well as the young; the married as well as the single; the gay as well as the grave. Everybody will read it with equal eagerness and profit. It is sold only through agents, and the Publishers' advertisement appears in another column.

Makes the Weak Strong

The marked benefit which people in run down or weakened state of health derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla, conclusively proves the claim that this medicine "makes the weak strong." It does not act like a stimulant, imparting fictitious strength from which there must follow a reaction of greater weakness than before, but in the most natural way Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, purifies the blood, and, in short, gives great bodily, nerve, mental and digestive strength.

ALFRED JAMES,

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

GLADSTONE ON TAXATION.

Some very brief and obscure telegraphic dispatches, a couple of weeks ago, mention the fact that Mr. Provand, a liberal, had introduced in the house of commons a motion to increase the tax on land, in order to relieve industry from its present burdens, and that a lively impromptu debate had taken place, in which Mr. Gladstone had taken part. Nothing definite, however, could be learned from these dispatches as to what course the debate took. From British exchanges it appears that Mr. Provand opened the debate with a speech in which he showed that out of the £125,000,000 raised by taxation in Great Britain only £5,000,000 was raised from land. The rest fell on the mass of the people, the landless, in various ways. On food there was a tax of £5,500,000, and local taxation, which is borne mostly by the renters and occupiers of houses, amounted to £50,000,000.

Dr. Clark, another liberal, or radical member, pointed out that the great problem was how to get taxation shifted from industry, where it was placed by landlord parliaments for their own relief, back to its proper place, on land values. Those values, he said, are due to the natural expansion of the community, and should be taxed to relieve those who have to pay taxes out of hard-earned income.

The whole question was brought up; the exemption of idle lands from taxation and the encouragement of land speculation and its evil effects, the manner in which land values increased in consequence of the public improvements to which the landlords did not contribute.

Mr. Gladstone's speech was drawn out by a statement of the Troy minister of agriculture, Mr. Chaplin who claimed that rural landlords were already overburdened with taxes. In the course of his speech Mr. Gladstone said:

It appears to me, beyond all doubt, that under our present system ground rents enjoy undue exemption. The owner of property has long enjoyed, at the expense of the ratepayers, privileges which are really unjust.

He also denounced Mr. Goschen's plan of devoting part of the imperial revenues raised by indirect taxation, such as customs taxes, to relieving various localities from their local rates, as "in the long run a sheer, unmixed, undiluted gift to the landlords." Of course, Mr. Gladstone did not go to the extent of declaring for any radical policy of land taxation, for he himself is as nearly a conservative on the land question as it is possible for him to be; but his remarks are the more significant on that account, for he had to show that the Tory party was the landlord party, and, by implication, that the liberals were opposed to landlord legislation. One report stated that Mr. Gladstone took occasion to distinctively repudiate the ideas of Henry George in his speech on this occasion; but, notwithstanding this and the fact that he has practically announced that the Liberal party's platform this year will be confined to advocating home rule, "one man, one vote," the abolition of death duties, and the equalization of taxation—a very indefinite proposition—this debate shows that the Liberal party is being forced by its more radical members into advocating the taxation of land values.

Maine Farmers For Genuine Tax Reform.

Within the past year there has come to the front in Maine a political organization and issue which bids fair to do much for the single tax movement in that state. The active spirit of the so-called "tax reform movement" there is Mr. L. D. Bennett, a lawyer and farmer, now living at Deering, one of the founders of the state grange, the farmers' organization, and the farmers' protective union; the latter organization, in fact, was formed as a direct result of his efforts to arouse the farmers on the subject of taxation. The following extract from the publications of the Union will show its object:

Believing that agriculture is the foundation of the state and nation's wealth, and that the prosperity and happiness of the people, not only those who are directly engaged in tilling the soil, but every citizens of our country, are affected thereby; and

Whereas, We, the farmers of Maine here assembled, believe that the present depression in agriculture, the abandonment of so many New England farms, and so many of our young men leaving the paternal acres, the home of their boyhood, to seek other and more lucrative employment, is in large measure due to the unequal and unjust taxation to which the farmers are compelled to submit, by our present laws, which excess will amount to more than half a million dollars annually; therefore

Resolved, That we will give our influence, and earnestly support any legislative measure for the equalization of taxation, until such a measure shall become a statute law.

Mr. Dennett claims that there are $70,000,000 of property in Maine timber lands and railroads which now pay less than $150,000 into the treasury of the state, which ought to pay, and would pay, if fairly taxed at the rate of even 1½ per cent. (which, he says, is less than the average), $1,000,000 per annum. The timber lands in the unorganized townships of Maine comprise an area larger than the whole of Massachusetts and Connecticut combined. They pay less than $30,000 a year into the state treasury, being assessed at a valuation of only $1 an acre, and, of course, being in unorganized townships, they have no local taxes to pay. They should be assessed at fully $6 an acre, say the tax reformers, and in lieu of the heavy local taxes which all property in organized townships pay, the state tax on these "wild lands" should be raised from ¼ of 1 per cent to 1½ per cent. The movement, then, rests on the distinct purpose to assess speculative holdings so as to relieve industry, both agricultural and urban, from the burdens now resting on it.

As for the railroads, Mr. Dennett thinks they should pay in a fair assessment of the actual value of their tangible property, their real estate, rolling stock, etc.; but he and the tax reformers oppose any attempt to tax shares of stock or mortgage bonds; and they oppose the taxing of mortgages on real estate, which they say only increases the interest the farmer has to pay, advocating instead the taxation of mortgagee and owner as joint tenants.

The formation of a farmer's organization for the distinct purpose of tax reform is of itself an important movement; but that it should be devoting itself to securing a fair assessment of wild speculative holdings, and instead of directing wild and useless efforts to reach and tax personal property, should begin to exempt bonds, stocks and mortgages, thus going far towards narrowing the basis of taxation down to real estate, is most significant and must lead to a wide discussion of the single tax.

A St. Paul View of It.

The St. Paul (Minn.) Globe says that all the arguments against taxes on personal property and incomes reduce themselves to this: "Men will not pay taxes on any thing unless they have to, and will therefore lie and perjure themselves to be free from their burden." If it be admitted that the state's machinery is not adequate to overcome such an obstacle it declares that "we had better abolish the tax on every thing except real estate at once," because the present state of affairs in which "some people pay something on some of their property, and others nothing on any of it" is deplorable and not to be endured. The Globe reaches a sound conclusion through false reasoning. There are better reasons than it presents for "abolishing the tax on every thing except real estate;" but they go further and warrant the abolition of all of those taxes on real estate that fall on buildings or other improvements. There are plenty of sound arguments against the taxation of personal property, but the argument most likely to commend itself to the favor of our Minnesota contemporary is that taxes on the products of labor tend to restrict production, and the same argument applies to taxes on buildings, whereas a tax on land values can not diminish the area of land, and it does tend to bring a large proportion of the existing area into use.

Would a "Rose by Any Other Name"—?

Whenever or wherever a question comes up which bears on the single tax, there is always a flutter. Those who don't understand what it means are always badly scared when it is mentioned. Mr. Fippen, a member of the Indiana legislature, had a bill before the lower house which provided for the erection by cities of water works, electric lights, and artificial and natural gas plants. To raise the money necessary to erect these plants, the bill proposed that "land" alone be taxed. The bill had passed the house and had been sent to the senate; but meantime some one had got it through his head that "taxing land" was the single tax idea, whereupon he went around the assembly chamber shouting that the Fippen bill was a "Henry George" bill. He frightened enough of the members to get a vote through recalling the bill from the senate, and while the stampede was still on, a motion was put through to postpone action on it indefinitely. Meantime some of the frightened ones will find out what it was they were voting against.

How It Would Work.

W. A. Macleod has issued a leaflet showing the changes that would be brought about by the establishment of the single tax in Dorchester, one of the districts of the city of Boston. At present Boston's taxation is about $29.25 on the thousand dollars. Mr. Macleod takes this as a figure on which to base his calculations, though, of course, he points to the fact that if vacant land were properly assessed, the rate would be considerably less. He has ascertained the present taxes on given lots of land in the richer part of Dorchester, and finds that in many instances the single tax would be higher than the rate now paid, whereas he shows that almost invariably taxes would be lowered in a district occupied by a poorer class of people. In the business districts, however, taxes would be largely increased over those paid now, except in cases where the buildings are more valuable than the land. Of course, Mr. Macleod's figures only deal with local taxation, but even in this they demonstrate that the present system favors the rich and imposes undue burdens on the poor.

ROBINSON CRUSOE, as we all know, took Friday as his slave. Suppose, however, that instead of taking Friday as his slave, Robinson Crusoe had welcomed him as a man and brother; had read him a declaration of Independence, an emancipation proclamation and a fifteenth amendment, and informed him that he was a free and independent citizen, entitled to vote and hold office; but had at the same time also informed him that the particular island was his (Robinson Crusoe's) private and exclusive property. What would have been the difference? Since Friday could not fly up into the air nor swim off through the sea, since if he lived at all he must live on the island, he would have been in one case as much a slave as in the other. Crusoe's ownership of the island would be equivalent to his ownership of Friday.

TAX manufacturers, and the effect is to check manufacturing; tax improvements, and there is less in improvements; tax commerce, and the effect is to prevent exchange; tax capital, and the effect is to drive it away. But the whole tax system is to be taken in taxation, and the effect will be to stimulate industry, to open new opportunities to capital, and to increase the production of wealth. Progress and Poverty.

REVIEW OF THE QUARTER

LESSON XIII, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 28.

Period Covered, from the First Preaching of Hosea, About 785 B. C., to the Final Destruction of Jerusalem and the Judæan Monarchy, 588 B. C.

The lessons of the quarter now closing may be considered as but separate chapters of one awful and most impressive lesson—the decline and destruction of an unfaithful government and the punishment of a people who rebelled against God, their true King. Owing to the peculiar character of the series, it is deemed best to insert here a few historic notes, pointing out how the prophecies of punishment were soon made history.

Hosea, sometimes called the first of the minor prophets, entered on his mission about 785 B. C., and continued to exhort and threaten Israel (of which kingdom he was a resident) for over fifty years. His style is concise and sententious, and the form in which his prophecies are compiled makes them seem as one continued series, without divisions to indicate the period of their utterance or the specific subject of each prediction. This calls for unusual diligence on the part of the student in noting the internal evidences. The first verse declares that the prophecies were delivered "in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam, the son of Joash, king of Israel."

This gives us a key to the proper division, and we perceive that after repeated warnings to Israel, in which the patriot is seen as clearly as the prophet, he despairs of his own people, sees the evil at hand, and with an awful burden of sorrow turns to the other kingdom and implores Judah not to follow the evil example of her sister. The fact should be noted that he entered on his mission at a time when all was outwardly prosperous, for Jeroboam II had raised Israel to something like her former glory. But the people had become sinfully vain and were given up to idolatry, and the prophet, as if in agony—turning God's message into his own language, as is the Biblical rule—cries out, "How shall I give thee up, Ephraim? How shall I give thee up, Israel? How shall I make thee as Adam? How shall I set thee as Zeboim? My heart is turned within me, my repentings are kindled together" (xi, 8).

Israel's punishment came soon, for Shalmanezer took Samaria after a siege of three years, and dispersed the Israelites through the northeastern provinces of Samaria. A few escaped into Judah, and at intervals for many years after fragments of the Israelites joined their fellow countrymen, but the great mass was absorbed and lost among the heathen, a fate for which their idolatrous habits had already prepared them. Their place was filled by a heathen people called Kuthim or Cuthaens; but there is reason for believing that they became mixed to some extent with a remnant of the Israelites, for in time they adopted some part of the old customs of worship, mixing them strangely with their original idolatry, and Josephus tells us that when the Jews proper were in favor with their rulers these planted heathen claimed kindred with them.

Such was the origin of the people known later as Samaritans, and the intense hatred felt toward them by the Jews was the occasion of Christ's beautiful parable on the man that fell among thieves. The devout reader may well find cause for reflection in the fact that this hated name has by this parable become in all Christian nations a title for the charitable and tender hearted. It is also a fact of intense interest that a remnant of this people still exists and maintains a religious organization in Egypt, having for its Scripture only a mutilated copy of the Pentateuch. Their forefathers were taken there by Alexander the Great when he conquered the Persian empire. Is it not in accord with all we know of God's providence to believe that this fragment of a nation has been divinely preserved through all the mutations of 2,400 years as God's own witness to the truth of His prophets? See on this subject commentaries on Daniel's prophecy of the power that was to conquer Persia (Dan. viii, 5–21).

The subsequent history of the kingdom of Judah coincides closely with the predictions of the prophets. Josiah stands out with peculiar glory as the last of the great and reforming kings, and soon after Judah's cup of iniquity was filled. The kingdom proper was overthrown, but Zedekiah reigned some time as a tributary or vassal of Babylon. Against the imploring protest of Jeremiah, and equally against common sense and good faith, Zedekiah rebelled, being deceived by false prophets. The enraged Nebuchadnezzar came with a large army, and though the Jews with that stubborn bravery which they always manifested held out for a year and seven months the city was taken at last with every circumstance of horror.

Zedekiah's sons were slain in his sight; then his eyes were put out and he was taken to Babylon, to linger out a painful captivity with only the recollection of his sins and follies. In this and the next succeeding portions of Hebrew history are many affecting episodes, and in the literature of the time we find some of the most mournful poetry of ancient times. Out of the hearts of captives longing for their homes were wrought those sublime strains, those prayers and songs of hope or of resignation which charm even the skeptic by their sad sublimity.

In conclusion it may be well to note how strongly the era of decline was marked by the two vices which the student of history always looks to find in a degenerate people—drunkenness and oppression of the poor. "Woe to the crown of pride of the drunkards of Ephraim," is the way the prophet begins an invective against that degrading vice, and "Woe unto them that add field to field and house to house, etc.," is the exordium of another. The lesson is plain. The national spirit was destroyed. The rich oppressed the poor, and both rich and poor sought temporary pleasure or oblivion in the beastly vice.

A Street Car Conductor's Hard Lot.

There are some things in the life of a Boston car conductor that are, to say the least, a little curious. For instance, the street railway company establishes the inviolable rule that pennies shall not be turned into the treasurer's office by any conductor. But pennies are legal tender, and the conductors must accept them from passengers in payment of fares. But the pennies must all be converted into coin of larger denominations before the conductor can get a clean bill for his day's receipts. Another rule is that no smoking shall be permitted on a car, but there is no possible way by which a conductor can stop smoking on the platform. No officer will arrest a passenger, and he cannot be ejected by the conductor. But conductors are "laid off" every day because of passengers smoking on the cars.—Interview in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

TOLEDO, O., April 6, 1891.
I had a horse in my stables that had hoofs so brittle that it was impossible to keep a shoe on his feet. I have used one can of Marshall's Hoof Cure on his hoofs and the horse has been shod for four weeks and the shoes stay on all right. I consider it the best hoof cure I have ever used.

COMPANY F, 26th REG. MICH. INF.

Historical Sketch, Read by the Historian, Chas. W. Haynes, at the Britton Reunion.

In our report of the Co. F Reunion, published last week, we were compelled to omit the history, on account of the press of other matter, and we herewith reproduce the same in full.

MR. PRESIDENT, LADIES AND COMRADES:—On the 13th day of December 1862, the 26th Regiment of Michigan Volunteers left camp at Jackson, Michigan, for Washington, having on its muster rolls 903 officers and men. On arriving at Tecumseh the train was held one hour for Company F to bid farewell to loved ones that had come to see us off for the seat of war. We never shall forget that event. Some said good bye to loved ones for the last time. Soon the whistle blew and we went flying through the country as fast as steam could carry us, arriving at Toledo about 11 o'clock p. m. Here we waited a little while for cars to carry us farther on to Washington. After riding several hours we arrived at Elmira, N. Y. Here we had to wait two or three days for cars and when they came they were box cars to carry cattle in; but we were all willing to get in and off we went again. We had not gone far when Capt. A. L. Randall, then Sergeant, took comrade Geo. Beneway's gun and with one blow sent the window, glass, sash and all, flying. We all knew what this meant and in a very few moments Company F had a flat car to ride in instead of a box car. It was very pleasant through the day, but in the evening it began to get a little cool, so we took possession of a lumber yard and borrowed a keg of nails to build up again, so we could ride comfortably through the night. I am a little afraid we have never returned those nails nor paid for the lumber either, as we agreed to pay for them when we came back. By the way, we came back by another route, which is the reason we failed to stick to our agreement, as Company F never took anything that they couldn't get hold of.

The next morning, just as the sun began to shine, we arrived at Baltimore, Md., and in a few minutes we made a flat car of the one we had so nicely made the night before and turning the stove upside down left the car on fire. Col. Farrar inquired of Capt. Saviers what Company had destroyed the car, to which the Captain replied: "It wasn't Company F; they are too nice boys for that."

We marched to the old slave pen and a guard was placed at the door, but Company F. couldn't be kept in such a place as that, so we soon found a way over the back wall and in a short time we were taking a view of the City and bakeries, for which Company F was noted.

We remained here a short time and then went on to Washington, arriving there about 11 o'clock a. m. I think we remained in Washington a few days and had the privilege of visiting the Capitol and White House, and other Government places, which was greatly enjoyed by all.

Our first march was to Bull Run, and was finished in about four days. The last night of our march we had to sleep on the snow and camp in the woods. The Company was aroused some time in the night by a terrible yell. Some thought we were captured by the Rebs, sure, but it turned out to be Comrade Exelby's wild cry of fire, as the fire had consumed a part of his overcoat and was getting a little hot for him, but he was not seriously hurt.

The next day we finished our march and at once we began to prepare for winter; but in a few days we got orders to report at the Provost Office at Alexandria, Va. The old Dutch General said he felt very sorry to have us leave, as we were almost as good a regiment as the Garabaldi. Soon we had everything packed and on our way to the place ordered. The Rebel General Stewart had been trying to keep watch of us, so he sent out some of his men to see where we were encamped for the night, and about 11 p. m. Major O'Donnell came riding into camp as fast as his horse could carry him and gave the order "fall out!" to which the boys responded nicely, and in a few moments were ready for the Rebs, but our Michigan yell soon put them to flight. The Major ordered the ammunition wagon, which was driven by Comrade Exelby, to the rear, but he was anxious to see a little fighting so he didn't obey. The old Major swore at him and then the four-horse team was soon on its way to Washington but stopped by our cavalry and he was returned to the regiment. This was about all the fighting Company F did. We arrived at Alexandria safely and were soon placed on guard at the Commissary department. The Regiment remained here until the 20th of April, when it was ordered to Suffolk, Va., Company F being left to guard the U S. bakery and Commissary department, and remained here until the war ended. In May, 1862, the Company joined the Regiment near Bailey's Crossroads and on the 23d of May participated in the review of the Army of the Potomac in Washington, and remained at this point until June 4th, 1865, when it was mustered out of service and under command of Major Ives immediately started for Michigan. At Pittsburgh the ladies had prepared us a splendid dinner, for which we tendered them our sincere thanks; also at Cleveland they welcomed us with a splendid supper and waving of flags and shouting victory. We felt truly that we were once more in God's country. We remained here a short time and then we took the boat for Detroit.

When it was said to us that we could see old Michigan, which we had left in 1862, nearly three years before, we gave three cheers for the State of our choice. After a few hours' ride we came in sight of Detroit. That city we had longed to see. We took off our caps and with prolonged cheering we shouted until we were hoarse. In the windows and at every place could be seen ladies and children with flags and everything they could get hold of welcoming us back to our native home. Here we had one of the grandest suppers waiting for us and we all did our duty well, I assure you, if we never did before. We staid there all night and then took the train for Jackson over the Michigan Central R. R. The cities and villages all along the route were thronged with men, women and children, with flags and handkerchiefs, cheering us by the thousand.

We arrived at Jackson about 11 a. m. and at once marched to the city hall, where dinner had been prepared for us by the ladies, who had forgotten all about how the chickens and turkeys had to suffer while we were there in 1862. Our Honorable and most excellent ex-Gov. Blair was on hand to welcome us back to Michigan, not as soldiers but citizens, which we trust the most of Company F have tried to fill to the best of their judgment. On the 16th of June we were paid off and discharged with money that was then worth 50 cents on the dollar, making our wages $8 per month, but most of the time we received about $6.30 per month for saving one of the best governments and the wealthiest one on earth. How does this sound in your ears? I think we should ask our Congressmen to right this wrong.

We bade each other good-bye and soon we were at our homes enjoying the companionship of loved ones that we had longed to see. And after twenty-five long years, at the call of Comrade Jehiel Davidson, we meet once more, and forty-five answer to the roll call by Lieut. J. Davidson. We grasp each other by the hand and look each other in the face; we say a few more roll calls and Company F will be no more.

At this meeting Lieut. Davidson was elected President of the Society, Lieut. Britton Secretary, Comrade Norman H. Ackley Treasurer, and your unworthy servant historian. It was ordered that we meet every year on the 13th day of June and Britton was selected for 1891. A great deal more could be said, but time will not permit, so we close by giving you a little history of some of the living and those that are dead.

Captain L. S[illegible] promoted major May 15, 186[illegible] [illegible]onel March 30, 1864. He was [illegible] four different places, at Spott[illegible] May 12, 1864. He was made [illegible] Sept. 12, 1864, and discharged for disability Sept. 27, 1864. He was a good officer and usually liked by the boys. He is now in the banking business at St. Louis, Mich.

Lieut. John Britton entered service Aug. 12, 1862, as sergeant, promoted to 2nd lieutenant Nov. 22, 1864. 1st lieutenant June 9, 1865, came home and has lived here at what is now Britton station. Since the war he has held several town offices and is now the postmaster.

Lieut. Jehiel Davidson left Tecumseh with Company F in December 1862, as sergeant, and was made lieutenant June 9, 1865. At the close of the war he returned to his farm and remained there until the spring of 1877; then moved to his pleasant home in Tecumseh where we were so nicely entertained one year ago to-day. A great deal of credit should be paid to him and his noble wife for getting us together on the 13th day of June, 1890.

Geo. W. Schreder died in general hospital at Alexandria, Feb. 21, 1863. He was the first one called by death from the company. He was sent home and was buried with Masonic honors, he being a member of that order.

John Bancroft died in Fairfax St. hospital, March 12, 1863. He enlisted from Rome Center, Aug. 22, 1862.

Emory Waller was the next one called, dying in Mansion House hospital Sept. 3, 1863. He was thought a great deal of by all who knew him.

Lieut. Morris Roberts entered service Aug. 11, 1862, as sergeant. He was promoted to 2nd lieutenant Sept. 1st. 1862, and 1st lieutenant May 15, 1863. He died of disease Sept. 14, 1864. In his death the company lost one of its best officers. He was a gentleman and a good Christian and we believe he is in the paradise of God.

John Jackson, of Ridgeway, died in the hospital Sept. 2[illegible], 1864. He was a good soldier and died in the Christian faith. He was sent home and buried in Ridgeway cemetery.

Corporal James Sherman died in company hospital Oct. 10, 1864. He was well liked by all who knew him.

Since the war the following have died:—

Capt. A. L. Randall entered service Aug. 5, 1862, as orderly sergeant. Became 2nd lieutenant May 15, 1863, 1st lieutenant Sept. 14, 1864, Captain June 9, 1865. He was one of our best officers. We all loved him as a soldier. He came home in command of the company. He afterwards returned to Alexandria with comrade Robert Everett. After a few years they moved to Baltimore and went into business there. Capt. Randall died in Baltimore eight years ago. His partner is still in business in that city, meeting with us last year for the first time in 25 years.

Capt Edward Richardson entered service Sept. 1, 1862, as 1st lieutenant. He was made captain in 1863, and resigned April 28, 1865, returning to his home in Adrian. He has also been mustered out for the last time. He was a good military man and well liked by the boys.

Lieut. Henry Dunster entered service Aug. 13, 1862 as sergeant, became 2nd lieutenant Dec. 4, 1863, 1st lieutenant June 9, 1865. He has also been called since the war to give an account of his stewardship.

Lieut. William F. Howe entered service Aug. 7, 1862, 2nd lieutenant Sept. 15, 1864, 1st lieutenant June 9, 1865. Comrade Howe knew how to use the boys well and we all loved him as a soldier and an officer.

Sergeant A. W. Harding was one that lived his religion in the army and was generally respected by all for it. After the war he became a minister of the M. E. church, Detroit conference, and filled several important fields of labor until called to his reward.

Luther Hobert died at Whiteford Center in June 1889. Albert Miller was killed by the explosion of a boiler in 1873.

Oscar Nokes died at Whiteford Center March 4, 1888. He was much loved by his old comrades and the members of his church and neighbors.

Samue. F. Wright, John Coryell, Delvian Allen, their dates of death and where they died, except comrade Coryell who died at Ridgeway, Mich., are unknown. Let us who are still living try and do that which is right by each other and by all worthy soldiers and citizens. I now close by saying to you all I thank you for your kindness to me in the past, hoping that we may live long if it is the Master's will to meet each other on the 13th day of June as our annual gathering. I bid you now farewell.

Hello, Tecumseh! What's the matter with you Prohibs getting up a local Fourth of July celebration? Time enough yet. Besides that you have plenty of home talent, and can do it easier than any section in the county. With a celebration in Ogden and one at Tecumseh they would be far enough apart not to interfere, but at the same time furnish a nice place to spend the day and celebrate in a patriotic way, unawed by beer and unswayed by boodle. Come, friends, let's get a move on us. We have had a rest since last fall, and we didn't work so hard last fall, that so much rest is needed—Adrian Messenger.

A Tecumseh young man had a little peculiar experience Tuesday evening. He was driving home from Adrian by moonlight, accompanied by two young ladies, and when near the corner where the road turns west to the celery farms, one of the party saw something directly across the road a few feet ahead. The carriage was stopped and the young man alighting, found an axe, lying on a wire that was suspended between two trees. It was about high enough to be struck by a carriage top and directly over the traveled track. It was evidently placed there by some miscreant who intended mischief. The axe and a piece of the wire were brought home as trophies of the incident.

OHIO REPUBLICANS.

Maj. McKinley Nominated for Governor by Acclamation.

Synopsis of His Speech Before the Convention—Senator Sherman Makes an Address—Other Names on the Ticket.

GOT ALL THE VOTES.

COLUMBUS, O., June 18.—In the republican state convention yesterday ex-Gov. Foraker presented the name of William McKinley for governor. Col. Robert Harlan, of Cincinnati, seconded Maj. McKinley's nomination, and with one wild, hilarious cheer of affirmation, the convention declared Maj. McKinley nominated governor by acclamation, and a committee was appointed to apprise him of his nomination and escort him to the hall. His appearance was the signal for another outburst of applause.

A synopsis of Mr. McKinley's address is as follows:

"The election this year is of unusual importance, not only because it determines the political character of the administration of the state for the coming two years, but because it involves the choice of a legislature whose duty it will be to elect a United States senator who will continue for six years from March 4, 1893, and whose further duty it will be to district the state for representatives in congress under the new census and wipe from the statute books the crime against republican suffrage perpetrated by the present democratic legislature. Happily, we present a party in Ohio without a division in its ranks, without a break in its line.

"The platform which you have adopted meets my approval. It announces with clearness and courage the great cardinal doctrines of the republican party, while it proclaims the well-considered convictions of Ohio republicans touching the newer questions which now confront us.

Mr. McKinley then made an elaborate defense of high tariff.

Referring to the complaints among free-traders about increased duties under the new law, Maj. McKinley said 33⅓ per cent. of them are for the better protection of the American farmer; twenty-eight are upon wine and spirits, which will hardly burden the farmers; five are upon tobacco, an agricultural product. No like recognition of the agricultural industry can be found in any previous tariff legislation. While securing to the farmer the home market by increased protection the reciprocity clause is intended to extend his foreign market and upon terms more favorable than those accorded to competing agricultural countries. It is a significant fact that the articles which the farmer most frequently buys bear a less tariff than under the law of 1883, and the products which he sells bear a higher duty than ever before.

Turning to state issues, Maj. McKinley charged the democratic administration and legislature with depriving the legally elected republican lieutenant governor of his seat without legal contest, with making an unjust and partisan congressional gerrymander and with unparalleled extravagance in state expenditures.

Senator Sherman was then called on to address the convention. The applause was deafening as the veteran Ohio statesman advanced to the front of the platform and began his speech, which was in substance as follows:

He began by reviewing the history and achievements of the republican party, which, he declared, was the author of the sound financial system of the country and the protector of American industries. He eulogized President Harrison's administration. "The recent republican congress," he said, "has dealt with all leading questions of the time and with the most important questions with foreign nations. Everyone of these has either been settled or is in the way of settlement." The senator declared that the administration of Mr. Cleveland had devised nothing and accomplished nothing. Referring to the McKinley bill, he said it was a measure that extended its benefits to artisan and farmer alike. It would bear discussion and would improve on acquaintance. The free coinage of silver, he declared, was neither just nor equitable. It would demonetize gold and disarrange all business relations. The speaker reiterated the republican declarations as to liberal pensions and the federal elections bill, and closed with a prediction that Ohio would again lead the republican columns in November.

At the conclusion of Senator Sherman's speech an address from Secretary Foster, who was unable to be present, was read. A synopsis follows:

He analyzed the increased appropriations of the last congress, and insisted that they were justified by sound policy. Of the $170,000,000 of increase in appropriations nearly $23,000,000 was for the postal service, and this, he said, simply represented the growth of the country for two years. Nearly two-thirds of the entire increase was due to an increase of the pension list, and democrats, in opposing and criticising large appropriations, were directly attacking appropriations made for pensions. Answering the talk about a bankrupt treasury, Secretary Foster predicted that before the end of two years we will have money enough to meet all government expenses. The secretary opposed free and unlimited coinage of silver, but was emphatic in his remarks favoring bimetallism.

For lieutenant governor, Andrew L. Harris, of Preble county, was nominated on the first ballot; for state treasurer, W. T. Cope, of Cleveland, was nominated on the first ballot; for auditor of state, E. W. Poe, the present auditor, was renominated by acclamation; for attorney general, J. K. Richards, of Lawrence county, was nominated on the first ballot; for supreme judge, Marshall J. Williams, of Fayette county, was nominated by acclamation; for member board of public works, Charles E. Grace, of Pickaway county, was nominated.

The committee on resolutions submitted the platform. The features are a general plank commending the record and principles of the republican party, reaffirming the doctrines of protection and commending the McKinley bill; demanding protection for the wool industry equal to that accorded the most favored manufacturers of woolen goods; demanding a free ballot; demanding the enactment of laws to protect our country against the influx of the vicious and criminal classes of foreign nations and the importation of laborers to compete with our own citizens; favoring liberal pensions, economy in the administration of national and state affairs, ample educational facilities for the whole people, restraint of combinations of capital for unlawful purposes or purposes at variance with sound public policy, public lands for settlers, and restoring to the public domain all unearned railroad land grants; declaring in favor of gold and silver as the basis of currency; commending the Harrison administration and his foreign policy; commending the passage of the silver bill by the last congress; indorsing reciprocity; commending the course of Senator Sherman and other Ohio republican members in congress; recommending favorable legislation for farmers; condemning the Campbell administration and commending the administration of Gov. Foraker.

THEY WANT SILVER.

Meeting of the Free-Coinage Men in New York City.

NEW YORK, June 22.—The national executive silver committee held meetings in this city Friday and Saturday. The following members were present: Gen. A. J. Warner, of Ohio, chairman; Francis G. Newlands, of Nevada, vice chairman; Lee Crandall, of Washington, secretary, and L. M. Ramsay, of Missouri. Edwards Pierrepont was unable to be present. Senators Jones and Stewart, of Nevada, were in consultation with the committee during the sessions. Saturday evening the committee issued an address, in which it says:

"The national silver committee desires to call the attention of the country to the object lesson which is being exhibited in the desperate struggle of the great financial institutions on both sides of the Atlantic to increase the gold reserves to avoid bankruptcy and ruin, and to the fact that any increase by one necessarily diminishes the reserves of others. For eighteen years the basis of credit in gold-standard countries has been growing narrower as the single standard has been extended and the production of gold fallen off, while the structure of credit has been growing proportionately larger and more insecure, until the relation of credit to actual money, as disclosed in the Barings' failure, in gold standard England has alarmed the world and started anew the scramble for gold that threatens all business undertakings and stalks as a menace to every legitimate enterprise. The remedy is in the restoration of bimetalism. Place our money system again upon the broad basis of gold and silver as the money of ultimate redemption instead of gold alone. Support the credit system of the banks and the country by both the metals under free and unlimited coinage. A stable and not a fluctuating currency is required by legitimate business. Who can doubt that greater stability resides in money coined from the metals automatically regulated than in credit devices that to-day are and to-morrow may vanish?"

The committee says this is the paramount issue in this country and should be made such in the elections this year. All other issues are involved in this and cannot be separated from it.

A SECTION MISSING.

Important Error Found in the Illinois Ballot-Reform Bill.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 20.—When Gov. Fifer reached the ballot-reform bill Friday it was discovered that either by a clerical error or the loss of a sheet section 28 had been omitted or lost. Pending a search for the missing section the governor has postponed signing the bill. This section is the one which provides that no person shall approach a voter within 100 feet of the voting place, and provides a penalty for such an offense. It cannot now be told whether the fault lies with the enrolling and engrossing clerks or with the clerk of the house.

WIND AND FLOOD.

Lives Lost and Property Destroyed by Furious Storms.

Cloudbursts in Parts of Illinois Wash Away Railroads and Bridges—People Fly for Their Lives—Floods Elsewhere.

A DELUGE.

PEORIA, Ill., June 19.—The storm of a few days ago, which did such extensive damage in East Peoria, was nothing compared with the one of Thursday night. This was a terror which will never be forgotten by people living between here and Farmdale. The early part of the night was full of electricity, which played fantastic freaks up to about 11:30 o'clock, when the rain began. It did not seem to be rain but a succession of cloudbursts accompanied by the most fearful thunder and sharpest lightning. At Hilton, just across the river, in a few minutes the first stories of the buildings were full of water and the people were compelled to flee to the heights, where many of them passed the night, some escaping only in their night clothes. There was not time in some instances to release horses from stables and many were drowned. Numbers of cattle and hogs shared a similar fate. Five bridges were carried away in the immediate vicinity of Hilton.

The scene along the track of the Toledo, Peoria & Western is one of desolation. The water Thursday evening stood 7 feet deep in the corn and wheat fields and last night it is said it was 16 feet deep. Buildings and barns are ruined. The bodies of domestic animals can be seen in all directions.

The water in houses at Farmdale, 7 miles east, rose to a depth of 5 feet, and the people narrowly escaped drowning. Herds of cattle, horses, hogs and chickens were swept away, and the crops of farmers over a large tract of land in the valley were utterly ruined. The only fatality reported was in the Copperas creek valley, just across the line in Fulton county. A family named Gray had a cabin in the valley, and when the flood left the banks of Copperas creek and rushed down the valley the inmates grew alarmed. The father took his three boys and started to the hills, while the mother refused to leave the house. When half way across the valley a floating log struck Gray and stunned him. The rushing water drowned the boys (aged 12, 8 and 5) and he narrowly escaped by clinging to the log. His wife got on the roof of the house and was rescued during the afternoon. The damage to bridges, railroad tracks and crops will reach thousands of dollars.

TILDEN, Neb., June 19.—Three children living in Emerick township, about 15 miles southeast of here, were drowned Wednesday night during the storm while trying to reach the house from school. A ravine which the children were accustomed to cross suddenly filled with the flood, washing them away.

FORT SCOTT, Kan., June 20.—Rain flooded the streets of this city yesterday and Buck run, a ravine which traverses the city from south to north, was transformed into a raging torrent. Several persons were drowned.

NAPANEE, Ind., June 20.—A windstorm here yesterday did great damage to the crops and fruit trees, blew down barns and outhouses, and blew houses from their foundations, some of which were totally wrecked.

ALTOONA, Pa., June 20.—A rainstorm in this city yesterday flooded the streets, and Mrs. Barbara Reichl, aged 85 years, and Katie Brady, aged 8 years, were killed by lightning. Small bridges throughout the county were swept away by the overflowed streams.

CAIRO, Ill., June 22.—A cyclone here on Saturday did considerable damage, unroofing a great many houses, tearing up trees by the roots and blowing cars off the railroad tracks.

EFFINGHAM, Ill., June 22.—A destructive cyclone passed 10 miles southeast of here Saturday, carrying houses, barns, fences and growing crops before it.

TOPEKA, Kan., June 22.—The southeastern corner of Kansas was visited by terrible storms Saturday, causing some loss of life, much damage to property and enormous damage to growing crops.

NOKOMIS, Ill., June 22.—A cyclone passed over this place Saturday, unroofing houses and barns and damaging orchards. Crops were seriously injured.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 22.—In this state a tornado at Lewisport destroyed several houses and the Methodist church and killed George Ray. At Boaz several small houses were blown away. At Bevier seven houses were wrecked and four persons injured, one, a Mrs. Miller, fatally. At Campbellsburg several houses were destroyed.

Four Children Drowned.

QUEBEC, Can., June 20.—Five children, belonging to a family named LaChance, were playing in a boat on the St. Lawrence river near Port Neuf, a few miles from Quebec, when waves from a passing steamer caused the boat to fill, and four of the children were drowned.

A Year for Most.

NEW YORK, June 20.—John Most, the anarchist, appeared in court for resentence, his appeal to the courts for a new trial having been denied. Judge Cowing sentenced him to one year's imprisonment. He took his sentence stoically.

A Diamond Thief Sentenced.

FRANKFORT, Ky., June 20.—Charles Johnson, who stole diamonds valued at $81,000 from Mrs. Chapman Coleman, wife of the secretary of the United States legation at Berlin, has been sentenced to four years in the penitentiary.

Short $100,000.

THE LITTLE FOOT-PAGE.

The little page, Ralph, lay under a tree,
Gazing up into the sky.
A very blithe little foot-page was he;
His hair was yellow as it could be,
And blue was his sparkling eye.

His little round cap was red as a rose;
His doublet was bottle-green,
Silken and soft were his crimson hose;
His queer little shoes turned up at the toes;
And his cloak had a velvet sheen.

He mused as he lay there: "My lord, the king,
I heard the herald proclaim,
Has lost the stone from his signet-ring;
And whosoever the stone will bring,
Whatever his state or name,

"Shall have, henceforth, at his command
Jewels and raiment fine.
His name shall be honored in all the land;
His home, a palace superbly grand.
These splendors shall all be mine.

"The other foot-page is so dull, and so slow—
Oh, Rodna's a dreadful dunce!—
He never will find the stone, I know;
Bless me! he doesn't know where to go.
I'll hie me away at once.

"I'll go where the king sat yesternight
To hear the minstrel sing;
For the ground is strewn with violets white,
And he clapped his hands with all his might;
And there I shall find the ring.

"Then the herald will lead me away by the hand,
And cry in his loudest voice;
'Here is the brightest foot-page in the land!
His the treasure and palace grand!
In him doth the king rejoice.'

"My life will be joyous and free from care,
For of course I shall find the stone;
And far away in the future fair,
Perhaps I shall wed the Princess Claire—
And even come to the throne."

So musing and planning the page lay there,
Gazing up into the sky;
Building such wonderful castles in air,
They far exceeded the palace fair—
And the midday hour drew nigh.

Then gayly the little foot page uprose,
And took his way to the town;
Skipping along on his queer little toes
And saying: "Perhaps before night—who knows!—
In my palace I'll lay me down."

But alas! and alas! for the day dreams bright!
Alas! for the palace fair.
As he entered the town, with a footstep light,
He beheld a most bewildering sight:
The beautiful Princess Claire

Was leading a little foot page by the hand;
While the herald, with loudest voice,
Cried: "Here is the brightest foot-page in the land!
His are the treasure and palace grand!
In him doth the king rejoice.

"And the king, my master, doth bid me say
To each and everyone:
'Go clothe yourself in your best array,
For the finest feast will be given to-day,
That ever was under the sun.'"

Then the other foot-page went home alone—
Sadder and wiser he—
And donned his holiday dress with a groan.
For Rodna had sought, and found the stone,
While Ralph lay under the tree.

A TALE OF TWO TRUNKS.

Romantic Outcome of a Most Embarrassing Situation.

"What a very peculiar trunk!" said Mr. Marrowbone, looking through his eye-glasses at a large and handsome one which the civil salesman had just dragged from its retreat in the corner to the center of the room.

"Peculiar? Yes, sir," said the young man, lifting the lid and exhibiting the interior. "This trunk, sir, was made to order for a very wealthy gentleman. In fact we made him two just alike. He never wanted them, and we are disposing of them at a sacrifice."

"Why didn't he want them?" asked Mr. Marrowbone, who had a streak of curiosity—doubtless inherited from his mother—in his composition. "Curious, not to want what you have ordered."

"Yes, sir," replied the salesman. "Very curious. But in this case, there was a complication that rendered the gentleman quite excusable. He committed suicide."

"Ah! Very wrong!" said Mr. Marrowbone. "Very wrong of him!"

"Quite so, sir," replied the salesman. "You observe the elegant receptacle for neckties; this place for your collar-box; here lies the shirts, if you please. On the whole, I doubt if you can find anything like it in the city."

"I doubt if I can," said Mr. Marrowbone. "Just my initials on it, 'M. M.,' Milton Marrowbone; and send it at once."

"Very well, sir; and I think you will never regret the purchase," said the salesman.

Hardly had he bowed his customer out of the door, when a lady tripped up the steps and entered. She was rather good-looking, her age might have been thirty, and her appearance was that which may be described by the expression, "Just turned out of a bandbox."

"I want a trunk," she began; "and—there—that is exactly what I like." And she pointed to Mr. Marrowbone's recent purchase.

"Sorry, ma'am, but we have just sold that," said the polite salesman, conjuring up an expression of regret which was quite touching. "But,"—here he allowed a gleam of hope to sparkle in his eye—"but, madam, we have another, outwardly similar, differing only in the interior; one, in fact, more suitable for a lady."

"Let me see it," said the customer. Another trunk was trundled from the shadows in the far corner of the shop and whisked open. The lady peeped into it.

"I'll take it," she said, after hearing the price. "I'll take it. I'm in a desperate hurry. Put my initials on it, and send it home at once."

The polite clerk made a bow so profound that it very nearly became an acrobatic performance, and the lady vanished. She had left her card—

MARIA MUTTON.

"Two 'M. M.'s' on these trunks, Joshua," said the clerk to the factotum who appeared at the touch of the electric bell. "And quick about it."

Shortly, these trunks were sent home, and very soon after, they were, curiously enough, standing side by side in a large express-wagon bound for the Grand Central depot, and, still more coincidently, found themselves piled one on the other in the baggage car on its way to New Haven, while their respective owners, Miss Maria Mutton and Mr. Milton Marrowbone, sat side by side. A curious combination of facts; but "fact," as we are told in every edition of every daily paper, is "stranger than fiction."

Mr. Marrowbone had lived forty years without giving his heart entirely away to any woman. Miss Mutton, at thirty-five, was still a dear little lambkin, as far as her tenderest affections went. But as they sat together in the flying car, the same cinders trying to get into their eyes, the same steam-whistle shrieking in their ears, the same boy continually offering them newspapers, peppermint candy and chewing-gum, the same lank and sad-eyed youth begrudging them refreshing draughts of the water which it was his duty to carry through the car, something happened. Bachelor and spinster alike felt a softness of heart quite unwonted.

"What a nice man he looks like!" said Miss Mutton to herself.

"What a charming woman!" thought Mr. Marrowbone.

When he shut the window for her, she felt there were moments when—But no matter. However, on their arrival at the New Haven depot, they separated, as travelers usually do, and saw no more of each other, Miss Mutton at once taking a conveyance for the —— hotel; Mr. Marrowbone having what he spoke of as "a little bit of something" before he proceeded to the same hostelry. Again coincidence followed them. Mr. Marrowbone was consigned to room No. 5 on the right corridor; Miss Mutton to room No. 5 on the left.

Both slumbered peacefully. Both were aroused by a fearful noise—shouts, cries, shrieks of murder, yells of fire.

Bewildered and terrified, Miss Mutton, in white robe de nuit and one of the last remaining night-caps in the world, rushed out into the hall, and found herself in utter darkness amidst a crowd of ladies as much alarmed as herself; and in the right corridor Mr. Marrowbone appeared, or would have appeared had there been any light to see him by, in a night-robe, with a peaked cap, with a tassel on its top, upon his head.

"What? Where? How?" howled the guests, as they clustered together.

Suddenly a glare of light flashed upon the scene. The forces of the hotel appeared with lamps of all sorts. A voice was heard to explain that it was only "something the matter with the electric lights. Wire disconnected; young man knocked down; coming to, all right." The hardier spirits remained to get the news, regardless of costume; less experienced travelers retired to their rooms.

Miss Maria Mutton, who had never slumbered in a hotel before, fled before the approach of the lights and found shelter under a stairway. Mr. Marrowbone, who felt that a night-robe and cap did not compose a dignified costume, turned suddenly into a little cross-hall near which he happened to be standing, and there awaited the retirement of the other guests to their rooms. Afterward he knew that when he emerged from his retreat he must have turned to the left instead of the right. However, after much wandering about, and as much chilliness of body as heat of temper, he came upon the magic number "5" shining upon a silver plate upon his door, entered and closed it with a bang.

"All right," he said, as he struck a match. "There is my trunk; there is is not another like it in the city. And there is 'M. M.' on the side." Then he blew out the match and popped into bed.

Almost at the same moment, Maria Mutton with a palpitating heart caught sight of the magic number "5," opened her door, saw her peculiar trunk, noted the initials of her name upon it by the light of the lamp opposite her door, said: "Thank Heaven!" burst into tears, and drew the drapery of her couch about her.

"What a fearful adventure!" was her last thought before she sank into the arms of slumber. Ah, had she but known it, fearful adventures were only just begun for her.

Mr. Marrowbone awakened early. He had business which demanded prompt attention. He sat up in bed, took off his nightcap and looked about him. He looked in vain. Those garments which he desired to assume were not visible. In their place hung, over a chair back, a woman's dress; on the bureau, where he had surely left his hat, lay a bonnet and gloves; in place of his manly boots there stood at the foot of the bed a pair of button gaiters, No. 3½ at the utmost.

"Have I gone out of my senses?" cried Mr. Marrowbone.

How did these garments come to be in his room? Where were his own? He gazed about him and flew to his trunk.

"It's mine, certainly," he said. "Here are my initials, but I never tied a bit of blue ribbon to the handle."

He dashed back the lid. Within he beheld silk, lace, linen articles contrived for ladies' wear—nothing that had ever belonged to any masculine being. A horrible thought, engendered by certain works of fiction that he had recently perused, rushed to his mind.

Was this a case of transformation—double identity—whatever it was called? he asked himself.

He rushed to the mirror expecting to see a female face there, but his own florid countenance, garnished with red side whiskers and crowned by a bald forehead, welcomed him. He breathed a great sigh of relief and sat down to recover from the shock. As he stared at the dress upon the chair a memory came to him.

She—the lively lady who shared his seat in the car the day before—had worn one like it. Yes, her traveling-costume was made of that material.

"Please, ma'am," said a voice, at the door, "the electric gentleman wants to come in to fix the wires before any more boarders kill themselves."

"Good Heaven!" cried Mr. Marrowbone; "I say, will you send a waiter to me—a man—a boy?"

"There ain't only lady-waiters in this house, miss," replied the girl, from without.

"Why does she call me 'miss?'" asked Mr. Marrowbone of himself.

"Then, if the landlord wouldn't mind, or the clerk—any man; send a man to me," said Mr. Marrowbone.

"I can't miss, missis is a widder and don't hire only lady clerks. There ain't no men employed," responded the girl, with suspicion in her voice. "Please, the electric gentleman is in a hurry."

"I can't see any woman in this dress," said Mr. Marrowbone. "I must put on some gowns and strings in order to explain my position to the landlady." Accordingly he proceeded to attire himself in a gray dress which deserted him above the ankles, a knitted worsted shawl, which had deficiencies as to the meeting of hooks and eyes, and, having assumed the aspect of a bearded lady who had outgrown her wardrobe, put the bonnet on backward, tied a gray veil over it and opened the door.

"If I am not arrested before I find the landlady, I may get matters arranged as they should be," he said, with a gasp, remembering his pocket-book and watch, and with a fleeting vision of a diamond pin in the missing cravat.

Meantime, Miss Mutton, aroused by a tap upon the door, had received the same information concerning the "electric gentleman," and sprang to the floor in terror. She looked about for her basque and beheld a coat; she sought her skirt in vain; in its place lay a pair of inexpressibles; where the bonnet had been was a man's hat. She lifted the trunk lid and saw only masculine garments.

"I must have been in a wrong room all night," she cried, jumping at the truth more quickly than Mr. Marrowbone, had done. A way of deliverance also occurred to her more speedily. And as she was in more terror of the vague dangers of electric wires, her wish to escape was greater. Gazing into the depths of the trunk, a linen duster caught her eye. She donned it. Its ends trailed on the ground. She pulled the derby over her ears and opened the door. A queer-looking female with a dress too short for her and with nothing but striped stockings on her feet was passing.

"Are you the landlady?" she began; then, with a squeal, seized her. "Whatever you are, you've got my frock on," she cried.

"And you," said the strange object, "whatever you are, I think you are wearing my hat and duster."

"Don't touch me," gasped Miss Mutton; "I'm a lady. I put these on because I—I hadn't anything else—I must have got into another person's room. My trunk has the same initials, and it is a very peculiar trunk—oh, dear, dear!"

"I, madam," replied the being attired in her garments—"I am a gentleman. We have evidently exchanged rooms in the tumult occasioned by last night's alarm. I will shortly send you a parcel. Regrets." And he vanished.

Our readers know that he was Mr. Marrowbone. He had recognized Miss Mutton.

In ten minutes more the suspicious chambermaid delivered a parcel to the lady, "From No. 5, left corridor," and conveyed another to its destination; and Miss Mutton and Mr. Marrowbone became themselves again.

They met at the table d'hote. He bowed. She blushed, but afterward acknowledged the salutation.

There are always people to be found to introduce those who wish to know each other, and the marriage notices of a popular society journal shortly contained an account of the wedding of "Mr. Milton Marrowbone and Miss Maria Mutton, daughter of Mortimer Mutton, of Sheepshead farm."

Their peculiar trunks now travel together, and the keys jingle lovingly upon one ring.—M. Cady, in N. Y. Ledger.

INDEPENDENCE OF MIND.

Customs of People Which Are Termed Eccentricities.

It is easy to sneer at people's eccentricities. We may smile at the man who persists in wearing a queer style of hat, or at the woman who clings to an old fashion in hair dressing. But in adhering to a custom both agreeable and comfortable do they not show some independence of mind, a decision that helps to leaven the lump of general flabbiness?

Once a lady whose eyes were weak was obliged always to carry a sunshade to protect them from the glare of the sun. Even in winter, and when she wore furs, the sunshade was a necessity. She declared, laughingly, that no one would believe, unless she tried it, how much attention such a simple matter evoked. Sometimes she was followed a block or two by boys commenting on her odd appearance. They wondered if she was crazy, and while they wondered seemed to think she was also deaf. Older people, whom one would think might know better, gazed at her curiously, and even questioned her as to the reason of her peculiar conduct.

Most persons under such persecution would have given up the fight, staid in the house, or decided to bear the pain and run the danger. Being a woman of resolute temper, she did nothing of the kind. She carried her muff and her parasol all winter. Indeed, after a while she seemed to take a wicked pleasure in flaunting these articles before the faces of bewildered passers, who would often turn and look back with an expectation of seeing strange developments from so great a phenomenon.

Probably not many women would have stuck to the singularity as she did, or have gotten so much amusement out of it. Yet if it is considered in another light, and we reflect how much interest she excited and how many gazers she supplied with subject for conversation, we might call her a public benefactor. —Harper's Bazar.

—She Had a Reason for Her Thoughts.—Holden Chappelle, '91 (in love, but bashful)—"Yes, I am in the theatricals. But what character do you think I am best fitted to impersonate?" Miss Brattle (who believes that procrastination is the thief of time)—"All things considered, I should say a waiter."—Harvard Lampoon.

The Eloquent Pastor of the First Baptist Church of Chicago, Does Suffering Humanity a Great Service by Telling His Experience with a Great Family Medicine. Read:

"An almost fatal attack of La Grippe last winter left me with nasal Catarrh and such susceptibility to bronchial irritation that the slightest exposure would develop it, and a very little effort in public speaking would result in a distressing hoarseness to that I had serious fears of permanent disability.

"Besides, I suffered with dyspeptic troubles—notably what is popularly known as 'heartburn,' from which I found it difficult to obtain relief, was induced by a friend to try KING'S ROYAL GERMETUER, and it gives me great pleasure to say that its effect has been as magical as 'Koch's Lymph' is reputed to be, which is also a 'germ destroyer,' though taken in a different way.

"Catarrh, bronchial irritation, and dyspepsia have all disappeared before one bottle of the GERMETUER has been used.

"One of my sons, who has long been a sufferer from Catarrh, has received like signal relief from the old enemy. P. S. HENSON.

"Chicago, Dec. 10, 1890."

GERMETUER cures by killing the disease germ and thus removing the cause. It is a specific for Catarrh, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Lung, Blood, Liver, Kidney, and Bowel Trouble. IT IS WOMAN'S BEST FRIEND, regulating all irregularities. It builds up from the first dose. For sale by druggists, or will be sent anywhere C. O. YOU TAKE NO RISK

In buying Hood's Sarsaparilla, for it is everywhere recognized as the standard building-up medicine and blood purifier. It has won its way to the front by its own intrinsic merit, and has the largest sale of any preparation of its kind. Any honest druggist will confirm this statement. If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, do not be induced to buy anything else instead. Be sure to get Hood's.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

SAVED MANY LIVES.

Calamity in a Mine Prevented by an Engineer's Heroism.

Robert Scheid's pluck and coolness saved a score of men from death at the Cleveland mine in Ispheming. Scheid is engineer and was alone at his engine. A "skip" with a heavy load of timber was going down when suddenly the large pinion of the hoisting engine burst into three pieces. One fragment struck Scheid a blow on the head and shoulder, laying open his scalp and breaking his arm. A score of men were at the bottom of the shaft and most of them would have been crushed to death had the heavy skip run down upon them. But Scheid, despite his wounds, clung to the powerful brake with his uninjured hand until men elsewhere were attracted by the stoppage of the machinery and came to his relief. He was sent to the hospital and will probably recover.

TEMPERANCE WOMEN.

The W. C. T. U. Willing to Make Terms with Any Party.

At the recent session in Grand Rapids of the Michigan Woman's Christian Temperance union resolutions were adopted repledging its influence to that political party which shall by its platform demand the abolition of the liquor traffic, urging vigorous efforts in pushing the woman franchise question, exhorting women to closely follow legislative proceedings and the statutes relating to schools and to avail themselves of every opportunity to vote at school elections, asking for the appointment of women physicians, matrons and managers of prisons and reformatories where women are confined, protesting against nudity in theatrical posters and on the stage, and finally petitioning the world's fair managers against Sunday opening and intoxicants.

Work of Forest Fires.

It is estimated that at least 500,000,000 feet of timber in the Menominee river district has been damaged by forest fires during the past six or eight weeks, involving a loss to the owners of at least $2,000,000. The fires have extended over an immense tract of country from the tier of towns numbering thirty-eight northward, many miles north of Iron river. All of the large lumber companies have lost heavily. Nearly all of the burned timber must be cut during the summer, winter and fall or it will never be worth cutting at all, as the pine worm will play havoc with it.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by fifty-four observers in different parts of the state for the week ended June 13 indicated that cholera infantum, dysentery, scarlet fever, whooping cough increased, and inflammation of the brain, typho-malarial fever and dyphtheria decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at nineteen places, scarlet fever at thirty-one, typhoid fever at twelve and measles at thirty-five places.

Twelve Cars Wrecked.

A freight train on the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railroad ran away on a steep hill near L'Anse and crashed through the depot building. Engineer Harrington stuck to his engine and was seriously hurt. Twelve cars were demolished in the wreck. One was loaded with horses, and the shrieks of the injured animals added to the horror of the scene.

Wreck of a Brilliant Mind.

Ex-Chief Justice Sherwood, whose breaking down caused sorrow throughout the state a few weeks ago, is a total wreck mentally. L. M. Gates has been appointed guardian for him by the probate court. Judge Sherwood's was a great legal mind and his case is a sad one.

Short but Newsy Items.

It cost Samuel S. Carson, of Chesaning, $430 to rob a poor woman of her pension.

John W. Barry, a prominent citizen of Jackson, dropped dead of heart disease in the post office at his home.

Quay & Son's sawmill at Cheboygan was burned, causing a loss of $5,000, on which there was no insurance.

Walter Richards, who set the spring gun that caused John Osttle's death at Grant, Huron county, was acquitted of murder. His son, who was indicted with him, was also cleared.

Mrs. Diantha Jones, aged 99 years, died at her home in Coldwater.

Michael Piccpitino, a young Italian, married only three months, was instantly killed in the Centennial mine at Houghton.

Charles La Trave, of Michigan, was given a dose of carbolic acid by mistake for sirup of figs at Salt Lake City and died after a few hours of agony.

Frank Tennis was drowned while bathing at Grand Rapids.

The north bank of the Grand Trunk tunnel at Port Huron caved in, completely filling the cut.

A body was found opposite Wyandotte which was identified as that of a Mr. Crawford, who disappeared from Sarnia several days ago.

Sixty million tons of iron ore are in sight around Iron Mountain—more than can be mined in twenty years.

A joint meeting of the three state asylum boards was held in Kalamazoo and the price of board reduced from $3.43 to $3.36.

Cornelius Shea, an employe in the stamp mill of the Peninsula mine, at Houghton, fell off a beam and dashed out his brains on the floor 25 feet below. He was 19 years old.

A coroner's jury has returned a verdict of murder in the case of Mrs. Adeline P. Hawver, of Climax, who was found dead in her house May 22. No arrests had been made.

Chauncey Pattison, a Big Rapids dentist, fell dead of heart disease while operating on the teeth of a woman patient. She fainted, but finally managed to give an alarm. Pattison was 50 years old and leaves a widow and two children.

MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

LANSING, Mich., June 17.—The senate yesterday in committee of the whole agreed to a new congressional apportionment bill and passed the general game bill after amending it so as to provide that deer may be shot in the upper peninsula only between September 15 and October 15.

LANSING, Mich., June 18.—The senate yesterday defeated the bill providing for the local taxation of railroad property by a vote of 17 to 13. It passed the Richardson bill for increasing the specific tax upon railroad earnings, after amending, making the tax 2 per cent. up to $2,000 per mile; 2½ per cent. up to $4,000; 3 per cent. up to $6,000, 3½ per cent. up to $8,000, and 4 per cent. for amounts in excess or that sum. Other bills were passed providing for the Woman's Auxiliary association of the university of Michigan and to exempt from taxation the property of said association; limiting fishing in all inland lakes to hook and line.

LANSING, Mich. June 19.—The house bill appropriating $125,000 for the Michigan world's fair exhibit was favorably reported to the senate yesterday. The congressional gerrymander bill was defeated.

LANSING, Mich., June 20.—The senate yesterday passed the bill rearranging the state in congressional districts. By this apportionment the democrats will have a majority of the congressmen from the state. The bill making new senatorial districts was also passed. The house bill consolidating the management of three state institutions, including the Coldwater school for dependent children, by placing them in charge of one central board of control was passed. The conference report on the game bill was agreed to.

HOUSE.

LANSING, Mich., June 17.—The house yesterday defeated on third reading the Richardson telegraph bill for a minimum rate of twenty cents for a ten-word telegraphic message to any point in Michigan. A resolution was introduced fixing the date of final adjournment at June 29, and it was laid over one day under the rule.

LANSING, Mich., June 18.—In the house yesterday the bill limiting fishing in all inland lakes to hook and line was passed. Gov. Winans sent in a veto of the uniform text book bill, which committed the state to publishing its own text books.

LANSING, Mich., June 19.—The house yesterday agreed to the following rate of specific tax upon railroad earnings under the Richardson bill: Upon the first $2,000, 2 per cent.; $4,000, 2½ per cent.; $6,000, 3 per cent., and 4 per cent. for sums in excess of that. The bill incorporating the Woman's Auxiliary Association of the University and exempting its property from taxation was passed.

LANSING, Mich., June 20.—The house yesterday agreed to the conference committee's decision on the game bill. The deer shooting season is fixed at from November 5 to November 25 in the lower portion of the state and from September 5 to September 25 in the upper peninsula. Partridges may be shot from November 1 to December 15 in lower Michigan and from October 1 to January 1 above the straits. Quail may be shot during the six weeks between November 1 and December 15.

SHOT HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Brutal Crime of an Enraged Father at Franklin, Ill.—John Duty Is Denied the Custody of His Child by His Wife's Mother and Murders Her on the Highroad.

BENTON, Ill., June 18.—John Duty, living about 6 miles north of here, committed a brutal murder Tuesday afternoon on the public highway, killing his mother-in-law, Mrs. Allen. Duty was married and had one child, but had been separated from his wife. She and her child were staying with her mother, and Duty, after being away for some time, called Tuesday afternoon to get his child, which was at Mrs. Allen's, but she forbade him the house. He then came to town and sought legal advice as to his rights about the possession of his child. Returning home in the afternoon he met his wife, child and mother-in-law on the road and they had a quarrel and scuffle over the child. Finally Duty shot his mother-in-law in the face three times with a 38-caliber revolver, killing her almost instantly. He then tried to kill his wife, but the revolver would not discharge. Coroner Palmer held an inquest and a verdict was rendered by the jury in accordance with the above facts. Duty is still at large, but a posse is in pursuit of him.

CORTE'S REPORT.

What the Late Consul at New Orleans Says of the Recent Lynching.

ROME, June 19.—The Fanfulla states that Sig. Corte, late Italian consul at New Orleans, at the request of Premier Rudini has prepared a report on the New Orleans affair. Sig. Corte affirms that the victims belonged to no particular society, but were murdered simply because they were Italians and were competing in the labor market against natives; that immediately after the murder of the Italian prisoners his American servants ran away and that he himself and his secretary barricaded the consulate and armed themselves with revolvers, the lynchers having threatened to attack the consulate, and being prevented only by influential citizens intervening.

IN DANGER OF FAMINE.

Germans Demand a Suspension of Excessive Corn Duties.

LONDON, June 18.—Advices from Berlin say that the price of corn continues to rise and that in some of the more densely populated localities the scarcity almost amounts to famine for the poor. A socialist meeting at Dortmund Tuesday night almost broke out into a riot, the people demanding the suspension of the corn duties so earnestly as to provoke the attention of the police. It is said that vast quantities of corn are stored at various places on the Russian frontier awaiting the lifting of the duties in order to enter the German market. Caprivi fears that this Russian corn would come in such quantities as not only to supply present needs but also to destroy the future trade in German corn.

Three Girls Asphyxiated.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Three girls—Jennie Grossman, Katie Keefe, and Agnes Sears—occupying the same room on the top floor of a boarding-house in East Eighty-sixth street, were found Saturday overcome by escaping gas. The last two were dead, and Miss Grossman, though still breathing, died before a doctor could be called.

Found the Soldiers Not Guilty.

WALLA WALLA, Wash., June 22.—The jury in the case of the six soldiers on trial for the lynching of A. J. Hunt April 24 returned a verdict of not guilty Saturday afternoon.

THE MILWAUKEE

CHAIN POWER MOWER!

Takes the Lead!

And possesses all of the necessary requirements of a perfect Mower and stands first in the list of grass cutting machines.

It is entirely made of iron and steel, except the poll, neck-yoke, whiffletrees, swarth board and arm, which are of wood. It has no complicated nest gear with numerous bearings to wear out, only possessing five journal bearings in the entire machine.

The wheels are high and wide apart. We do not claim that our Mower wheels will completely clear the swath cut by our widest cutting apparatus; this would be absurd, as every casual observer understands that the farther the wheels are apart the greater will be the leverage of the axle upon the pole and that an extreme length of axle will therefore produce vibration and require a heavy pole.

Our Chain Power Mower is free from Vibration, Neck-Weight, Side Draft and we are enabled to use a Light Pole.

The weight of the cutting apparatus is carried upon the axle between the drive wheels, thus increasing the traction power of the Machine and making it a strong cutter.

Be sure and examine this Mower before purchasing. Call at my Rooms in the Usborne Block and see one.

Yours, for a Big Hay Crop,

GEO. C. POCKLINGTON,

DUM VIVIMUS VIVAMUS.

The Commencement and Alumni Exercises at Raisin Valley Seminary on Friday Last.

It has passed into a proverb that it never rains on the day of the Raisin Valley Commencement. Certain it is that the weather is almost invariably pleasant on that occasion. Heat and dust can always be expected the last week in June, but the location is such that no trouble is ever felt from these. The grove and lawn never presented a more inviting appearance than on Friday last and the class that received their diplomas will rank in ability with the best that ever passed through a course of study and graduated from that institution. An innovation was introduced this year which was appreciated by all in attendance. Instead of crowding the audience into the hall which was limited in capacity, the exercises were held on the lawn beneath the shade of the massive oaks. A good platform was constructed, and benches and camp chairs provided to accomodate a large gathering. Although the day would have been warm enough in the hay field, it was cool and delightful in the grove. A fine breeze from the north fanned the foliage of the trees and carried the voices of the speakers to the outermost confines of the audience.

The platform was placed beneath a large oak in the north part of the grove, a few feet from the highway and facing south. Over the top were suspended three bells and a horse shoe made of evergreens. Upon the latter in large white letters appeared the class motto, "Dum Vivimus Vivamus." The front of the rostrum was nicely decorated with evergreens, ferns, and mosses, and the table thereon was loaded with beautiful bouquets. The whole arrangement made a Commencement Hall, extemporized for the occasion, that could not be surpassed.

The opening of the program was delayed somewhat for a piano, expected from Adrian. But after waiting a while the Seminary organ was carried out to the platform, the graduating class took their places and the exercises were duly opened with an invocation by Rev. Edwin Mott.

The graduating class numbered eight members, three gentlemen and five ladies. The essays presented were all of superior literary merit and were spoken in a manner that evinced thorough elocutionary training.

The program was announced by Prof. Kelly as follows:

Our Dumb Servants—Laura F. Sheffield, of Adrian.
Our Moneyed Aristocracy—Fred G. Westgate, of Sutton.
Vocal Duet—Mrs. Burr and Mrs. Segur, of Adrian, with Miss Simpson at the organ.
Women as Home Keepers—Jennie Righter, of Seneca.
Leprosy—Mabel Tooker, of Adrian.
Influence of the Scientist—Chancey A. Graves, of Lenawee Junction.
Luck and Pluck—Stella M. Westgate, of Raisin Center.
Vocal Solo by Mrs. Burr.
A Tendency towards International Centralization—Alonzo C. Miller, of Sutton.
Dum Vivimus Vivamus—Alice Rockwell, of Lenawee Junction.
Vocal Duet by Mrs. Burr and Mrs. Segur.
Address to the class by Prof. T. W. White of the Seminary.
Presentation of Diplomas by Prof. Robt. L. Kelly.
Bendiction.

The program was about two hours in length and held the entire crowd to the close.

At its conclusion, some left for their homes, but the larger portion scattered about the grounds and building and partook of a picnic lunch, preparatory to the afternoon's exercises.

After the liberal supply of refreshments had been properly disposed of, the company was again called to order at 2:30 o'clock. In absence of the President, Arthur Green was chosen President for the day and Mary A. Cornelius acted as Secretary. The following program was then presented.

Quartette by Rollin Club, led by E. M. Rawson.
Prayer by Prof. T. W. White.
Recitation by Alice Luther.

Vice President—T. I. Sutton.
Treasurer—T. I. Sutton.

The next year's program was thus arranged:

Paper by Eva Wheeler.
Contributors—Ralph Webb, Marianna Brown, Ruth Spray, Tennie Kerr.
Declamation by Warren Shepard.

The Alumni Society proper held its business meeting and program of exercises in the evening. The meeting was called together by Vice-President Bert Chase and the following program was presented.

Song.
Prayer by Rev. Mott.
Recitation—Mattie Jones.
Recitation—Libbie Stanley.
Oration—Marion Hathaway.
Song.

The officers for the ensuing year were then chosen and the program adopted for the next year's reunion.

President—Chancey Graves.
Vice President—May Kellogg.
Sec'y—May Middleton.
Cor. Sec'y—Marion Hathaway.
Marshal—Bert Chase.
Treasurer—Arthur Green.
Orator—May Kellogg.
Poet—Esther Binns.
Essayist—Arthur Salter.

Resolutions of respect were drawn up and forwarded to the family of the late Prof. White.

Then came the banquet to which all did ample justice.

And thus closed the most varied program of exercises and the most enjoyable Commencement Day the Seminary ever witnessed.

Last Saturday the graduating class, Superintendent Hill and family and several of the scholars spent the day at Sand Lake. They report a very enjoyable time. The school bus was trimmed with evergreens and designs very appropriately for the occasion.

Prof. T. W. White received a telegram Thursday morning announcing the death of his brother-in-law, W. W. White, of Louisville, Ind. All were much surprised by hearing of his death. One more case of the la grippe's fatal work. He was a man that no one knew but loved and admired him and his advice and counsel will long remain in many hearts.

A NATURAL CONCLUSION.

It is natural that those who have been deceived by the various nostrums that are constantly offered to the public should demand a more substantial testimonial than the simple declaration of those who are interested in the sale of a medicine. Recognizing the justice of this demand, the Swift Specific (S. S. S.) Company, of Atlanta, have embodied in pamphlet form a few of the more noteworthy testimonials that have come to them unsolicited. This pamphlet, together with other interesting matter, they will take pleasure in sending to any address. Write to the (S. S. S.) Company, Drawer 3, Atlanta, Georgia

BRITTON BUDGET.

Farmers are busy with their hay.

Britton is getting ready for the glorious Fourth.

The carpenters are now through with Walter Exelby's barn.

Come and see the base ball game here on Saturday, July 4th.

Don't forget the school exhibition on Friday night. Admission free.

Mr. Strong seems to have given up the idea of going west this summer.

The Britton Gun Club will have a shooting match on Saturday, July 4th.

W. Beasley and Mrs. Eliza Holtz took in the excursion to the lake last Sunday.

When at Britton the 4th of July don't forget to get a good square meal at the Exelby House.

For the past few days a wagon load of good and poor carpenters have left Britton early in the morning and gone west.

Earl W. Lenardson has a new No. 4 Gendron Safety, and also has the agency for the same. Anyone wishing a wheel will do well to see him before purchasing.

John Exelby gave our villagers a lesson in breaking mustangs last Saturday morning and afforded a good deal of amusement and instruction to the spectators.

An exhibition will be given by the scholars of the Britton school at the Exelby Opera House on Friday evening, July 3rd. All turn out and help fill the Hall. Admission free.

A deputy sheriff and his assistant were in our village last week, going from here to Milan, Whittaker and Willis after their prisoner, and returning to Britton in the evening empty-handed.

Mr. Haines, representing O. Hunt's music store, Adrian, was again in our village the early part of the week. He seems to be wedded to Britton, and his giraffe, which is now boarding at the feed barn, is warranted to eat more than any ten horses in our village and still keep poor.

Our butcher man seems sometimes to suffer from absence of mind. A few days ago he went to kill a steer which he had been pasturing in W. Underwood's woods, and instead of killing his own steer, which was in prime condition, he shot one of Mr. Underwood's. He says of course it was done by mistake, not through poor shooting, but we think his shooting was good enough, for the poor creature killed was nothing but skin and bone, and it would have been almost an impossibility to have seen it at a distance of 15 or 20 rods. Therefore he should not be condemned, but rather commended for his marksmanship.

Ridgeway has always been considered one of the most peaceful towns in the county and a fight would have been the last thing Brittonites would have expected to see in that village. Last Wednesday, early in the morning, Geo. Exelby and Geo. Getty had occasion to pass through Ridgeway on their way to Adrian. When near the east part of the village they came across two neighbors lying in the ditch, fighting and scratching and swearing. One of the gentlemen seemed to have a decided advantage over his opponent, for he lay across his chest and was giving him "Hail Columbia" about the head when Mr. Exelby and his companion arrived on the battle ground and saved the defeated party from a violent death and the victor from a life sentence in Jackson. Much useless blood was shed over a little dispute about pasturing a cow on the public road.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 2, 1891.

It looks now as though Senator John Sherman, of Ohio, was going to be Ingall-ized this fall.

The silence of the Republican organs of Philadelphia about the corruption of Tammany Hall is becoming positively oppressive.

It is an easy matter to quibble on words or to pettifog on figures, but the startling fact remains that the Treasury surplus is gone.

Philadelphia has always been reckoned as rather slow, but in the matter of wrecking banks the staid old Quaker city seems to be leading the whole nation at present.

The Democratic State Convention of Ohio will meet in Cleveland July 14th. This selection is regarded as favorable to the selection of Gov. Campbell and is a good omen.

The Adrian Press dubs Blaine's Reciprocity as "homœopathic free trade," which is a very apt definition of it. If free trade is worth having at all, let us have it in allopathic doses.

James G. Blaine says that the McKinley bill will not open a market for another bushel of wheat or another barrel of pork. What will the Ohio farmers say on that subject this fall?

The Connecticut muddle still continues. Meanwhile the man whom the people did not want, whom they did not vote for, and who was not even a candidate, hangs on to the office of governor.

The average farmer may not be very well posted on the principles of political economy as laid down in the text books, but he is finding out the fact that the tariff plunders him to build up a few eastern millionaires.

When Boss Reed returns from his European tour it would be well for the Custom House officers to give his trunks a careful examination. He could easily import enough new clothing, duty free, to last him for the next three or four years.

It is not Gov. Campbell who is on trial, but the integrity of the Ohio Democracy. Shall a faithful public servant be thrown overboard at the dictation of the Cincinnati slums? That is the way the issue presents itself to an outsider.

The New York World considers it "a new illustration of monumental cheek" that the Ohio leaders representing the billion-dollar congress dared rebuke the democratic legislature for "unparalleled extravagances." The monumental cheek was there, but we fail to find anything new in it.

There will be a lively contest for the location of the next Democratic National Convention. In addition to the largest cities, where such conventions have been held hitherto, Boston, Detroit, Denver and San Francisco are bidding for it, and possibly some of them may win the day.

The New York Sun, anent the late extreme heat, discusses the question, "Shall we finally be burned up?" Really, a frank expression of opinion on the subject might seem a breach of journalistic courtesy, and Editor Dana is respectfully referred to the Presbyterian synod for an answer.

An exchange, which appreciates the logic of the protective theory, says:

The promise that a tariff would advance wool prices began in 1867, and the political sheepsters have not got the schedules arranged right yet. The real protective idea should not be curtailed longer. A direct bounty is what the wool grower deserves. There would be, of course, great debate over the amount of it, but just divide the available cash in the treasury. Nobody would fuss over that sum being given to Delano, Converse & Co.

Go to the HERALD office for your job work. Reasonable prices charged.

CUTLERS WITH CHEEK.

A Little Tale of the Protection Banquet—Knives Furnished By "Cutlers to the American People"—Table Knife Duties and How They Were Gotten—"Export Discounts" and Senator Carlisle's Exposure.

At the recent protection banquet in New York there was one little matter which deserves to be mentioned as an illustration of high tarriff cheek. At this "thoroughly American dinner" it was a kind of school-boy fad to have everything American, "the product of American labor, from American material, made in American shops, obtained from American fields, streams and forests, and from American vineyards."

The table knives used at this feast of the protective lords of industry were made by a firm of Connecticut Yankees. The story of these table knives is thus told in the New York Press, Robert P. Porter's high tariff paper:

A neat conceit was exhibited upon the table knives, manufactured by Landers, Frary & Clark, of New Britain, Conn. Upon the polished steel blades appeared the name of the firm and the thoroughly sincere sentence, "Cutlers to the American people." Under the beneficent McKinley tariff law these five words mean a great deal more to the people of this country than the empty words, "Cutlers to Her Majesty," which is stamped upon the cutlery which has heretofore been so largely used here. The former words are full of patriotism, the latter but an empty honor.

Now, while these enterprising Yankees are using the protection banquet to advertise their knives, some people may recall the fact that this firm was heard of last year in the senate tariff debate in a way which does no great credit to their character as "cutlers to the American people."

In the list of banqueters at this feast of the high tariff lords appears the name of "Charles S. Landers, New Britain, Conn.," he being the senior member of the cutlery firm of Landers, Frary & Clark. Last summer when the hardware sections of the McKinley bill were under discussion this Mr. Landers was used by Senator Carlisle as an example for exposing the falsity of the claims often made before the ways and means committee by men who pretend to be on the verge of ruin and yet sell their wares to foreigners at greatly reduced rates. Mr. Carlisle stated that Mr. Charles S. Landers had come before the ways and means committee to ask for increased duties; and the senator read extracts from the testimony of this manufacturer showing what gloomy talk he then indulged in.

Before the committee Mr. Landers had said: "I am a manufacturer of table cutlery at New Britain, Conn., and represent before this committee what is left of that industry in the United States." Another morsel from the testimony of Mr. Landers was this: "As stated here last night by Col. Bradley, in this Solingen district the Germans manufacture very cheaply, and unless we are protected they will drive us out." To which he added: "We have got to have this protection. I have given the facts and do not propose to argue the question."

The protective duty on table knives under the old law was 35 per cent. on all sizes and qualities, and McKinley raised it to a point averaging from 50 to 55 per cent.

Notwithstanding the existing high protection Mr. Landers had nothing but tales of ruin to tell before McKinley's committee about the table knife industry in this country. One company had been "sold at auction and realized to the creditors 20 cents on the dollar." "In regard to the concerns which have existed he went on," there is not one single case where any concern, even supported by auxiliary business, has paid an average of 6 per cent. on the capital. The average interest paid probably does not exceed 3 per cent."

And then Mr. Landers rang the charges on the old story of ruinous competition with foreign labor; yet he had to confess that wages were higher in free trade England than in protected Germany. The extent of this ruinous competition may be seen from the fact that our imports of all kinds of table knives for the year 1889, the figures of which were used in framing the tariff bill were only $680,000. The duties collected on this amounted to $238,000. Mr. Landers stated that there were about 2,000 men engaged as laborers in the table cutlery business. If these figures are correct, the people of the country pay a tax of $119 to protect each one of their laborers—reckoning the tax only on imported knives, and taking no account whatever of the increased cost of domestic made knives by reason of the tariff.

During the senate debate last August Senator Carlisle took up the testimony of Mr. Landers and let in some light upon the [illegible] of this "cutler to the American people," which showed clearly that he was using extra inducements to become a cutler to foreign people. The senator read a news paragraph from the Hardware, a trade journal, as follows: "Landers, Frary & Co. are now kept very busy supplying their western consumers with their superb cutlery. They were compelled during the spring to employ about two hundred new hands to be able to keep up with the demand for their well famed goods." And it was just this man who said he would have to go out of business unless he got higher protection!

But Senator Carlisle added a still more crushing blow to the foregoing. Holding up a sheet of paper he said: "I hold in my hand a bill, and I call the attention of the senator from Rhode Island (Mr. Aldrich) to this sentence, conspicuously printed in red ink upon the face of it. This is a bill of goods sold by these same parties. 'For immediate cash, with an agreement on the part of the purchaser that the goods shall not be sold in the United States. Custom house certificate to be furnished if required.'

"So that they sell these goods for exportation," Mr. Carlisle continued, "at a lower price than they sell them to American citizens for home consumption, and compel their purchaser to enter into a stipulation, spread out conspicuously upon the face of the receipt which he gets for the money paid for the goods, that he will not sell them in the United States, and if these manufacturers require it that he shall produce to them the certificate of the custom house to show that he has exported them for sale abroad."

In the latest export edition of the New York Engineering and Mining Journal is a list of American manufactures with the special discount trade to foreign buyers. This list covers forty-two columns of closely printed matter, and gives the discount on table cutlery for export at 25 per cent. In the Reform club's pamphlet on export discounts, issued last year, the following statement is made:

On knives, forks, spoons and other flat ware listed at $10, the price to the dealer in the "home market" is $4.36; but a buyer for export, regardless of the quantity he may take, pays only $3.73 for the same articles. The largest manufacturers of these goods have consolidated their interests, and in this way control prices as well as though a trust had been formed. That the public generally may not become aware of this, the goods are sold with the stamps of the old companies, as though no change had taken place.

And such are the protected "cutlers to the American people!"

WOOL DUTIES COMPARED.

The Tariff on Wool and Woolens in Europe—The McKinley Duties Compared With These—Even Turkey's Tariff Far Lower Than Ours.

A table has been prepared by the French tariff commission showing the duties on wool and woolens in the various nations of Europe. In the following list nearly all European countries are given, Russia being omitted owing to the changing and shifting character of its customs laws. The duties are for weights of 100 kilos (220 pounds) in the equivalent of American money:

Great Britain—Free, both raw wool and manufactures of.

Germany—Raw wool, free; combed wool, 50 cents per 100 kilos; yarns, divided in 8 classes, from 75 cents to $6 per 100 kilos; tissues, divided in 12 classes, from $6 to $115.40.

Austria—Raw wool, free; yarns, divided in 12 classes, from 75 cents to $10; tissues, $6 to $100.

Belgium—Raw wool, free; yarns, $4 to $6; tissues 5 to 10 per cent. ad valorem.

Denmark—Raw wool, free; yarns, $4.80 to $16; tissues, $36.20 to $37.40.

Spain—Raw wool, 20 cents per 100 kilos; grease wool, $2.40; washed wool, $4.80; combed, $6.60; yarn, $20 to $72; tissues, $150 to $170.

Greece—Raw wool, free; dyed yarn, $84.20; tissues, divided in 18 classes, $6.20 to $187.20.

Italy—Raw wool, free; yarns, 15 classes, $2 to $15; tissues, 12 classes, $6 to $150.

Norway—Raw wool, free; yarn, $5.60; tissues, $7.60 to $69.20.

Netherlands—Raw wool, free; yarn, 3 per cent. ad valorem; tissues, 5 per cent. ad valorem.

Portugal—Raw wool, 2 per cent.; yarn, $57 to $237.20; tissues, $32 to $242.

Roumania—Raw wool free; yarn, $18 to $30; tissues, 15 classes, $15 to $120.

Servia—Raw wool, free; wool, dyed, $12; yarn, $4 to $32; tissues, $8 to $72.

Sweden—Raw wool, free; yarn, $4.10 to $8.18; tissues, $5.60 to $65.20.

Switzerland—Raw wool, 6 to 12 cents per 100 kilos; yarn 17½ cents to $6; tissues, 80 cents to $20.

Turkey—Eight per cent. ad valorem.

France—Raw wool, free; dyed and combed wool, $5; yarns, 88 classes, $3.70 $41.60; tissues, 50 classes, $15 to $130. Extra duty is added to this when goods are not directly imported, which is known as surtaxe d'entrepot, to which raw wool is also subject.

A comparison of our own duties on wool and woolens with those of European countries will show what a radical difference exists in tariff matters on the two sides of the Atlantic. While all the principal nations of Europe admit wool free, we charge rates ranging in ad valorem equivalents from 26 to 120 per cent. To make the comparison more effective our wool and woolen duties must be stated, as European duties are, at so much per 100 kilos, or 220 pounds. Our duty of 32 per cent. ad valorem on carpet wools is equal to about 3½ cents per pound on the importations of last year; and 3½ cents per pound is equal to $7.70 per 100 kilos. The McKinley duty on clothing wool is 11 cents per pound, and this is equal to $24.20 per 100 kilos. Our duty on washed wool is 22 cents, equal to $48.40 per 100 kilos, and on scoured wool the duty is 33 cents, equal to $72.60 per 100 kilos. With these enormous duties compare the highest wool duty in Europe, that of Spain, on washed wool $4.80 per 100 kilos.

The contrast between our duties on woolen yarns and cloths and those of Europe is also very striking. On the grade of woolen yarns valued at 30 cents a pound the McKinley duty (27½ cents a pound and 35 per cent.) is equal to $83.60 per 100 kilos. Compare with this the highest duty on yarn in Germany, $6 per 100 kilos, in Austria $10, in France $41.60, in Spain $72. The highest McKinley duty on yarns (on the grade worth above 80 cents a pound) is more than $155 per 100 kilos.

Woolen cloth is taxed by McKinley from $99 to $184 per kilos. The highest duties levied by leading nations of Europe are those of France, $130 per 100 kilos; Italy, $150; Austria, $100, and Germany, $115. The lowest duties on woolen cloth show us in a much less favorable light. While the lowest McKinley duty is $99, the lowest duty in Germany, Austria and Italy is $6, and in France $15. Only such unprogressive countries as Portugal and Greece have duties higher than ours. Even half-barbarous Turkey is content with only 8 per cent. ad valorem, while some of McKinley's duties on woolen goods range above 150 per cent.

In the important matter of taxation upon the clothing of the people McKinley places us in a most unenviable light among the civilized nations of the world.

—A meeting of the Bright Wire Goods association or wire trust was recently held in New York. It is said that "a distinct understanding was reached" and prices were advanced. The association is reported to be on a firm basis and prices, it is said, will be maintained.

The Ohio Campaign.

Mr. McKinley, by character, ability, and public service, is a candidate whose personality will aid his party. His name is identified with its chief policy and its most important recent public measure. He will advocate it upon the stump with knowledge and skill, and his arguments will carry with it a not ineffective appeal to the pride of Republican Ohio. But for him still more than his election as Governor of Ohio is involved in the campaign. Should he be elected, and the tariff consequently become certainly the national issue of next year, he must become necessarily an important figure in the speculations for the Presidential nomination. He would be quite as available as President Harrison. It cannot be said that his constant public appearance since the result of last year's elections has injured his personal prestige. It has rather increased it, and it has introduced him personally to a larger circle of the country. For all these reasons the course of politics in Ohio will be followed attentively. The Democrats will not evade the issue which the nomination of Mr. McKinley presents. The campaign will be one of education, and fortunately the character of both candidates, assuming the the Democratic nomination of Governor Campbell, will prevent a diversion of interest to personal and official accusations. It ought to be a campaign of education for the country as well as for Ohio.—Harper's Weekly.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years it was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

Makes the Weak Strong

The marked benefit which people in run down or weakened state of health derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla, conclusively proves the claim that this medicine "makes the weak strong." It does not act like a stimulant, imparting fictitious strength from which there must follow a reaction of greater weakness than before, but in the most natural way Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, purifies the blood, and, in short, gives great bodily, nerve, mental and digestive strength.

Fagged Out

"Last spring I was completely fagged out. My strength left me and I felt sick and miserable all the time, so that I could hardly attend to my business. I took one bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it cured me. There is nothing like it." R. C. BEGOLE, Editor Enterprise, Belleville, Mich.

"I derived very much benefit from Hood's Sarsaparilla, which I took for general debility. It built me right up, and gave me an excellent appetite." ED. JENKINS, Mt. Savage, Md.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

LOCAL OPTION IN TAXATION.

The Boston Herald, in commenting on a bill which proposes to authorize the city of Boston to determine in what class of property its taxes for municipal expenses shall be assessed, declares itself strongly and positively in favor of two great reforms—first, local option in taxation; second, the abolition of taxes on personal property.

Taxation, the Herald thinks, should be regulated so as to encourage the growth and improvement of the locality, and the locality is the best judge of what method to employ; and if the citizens of Boston, whose obvious interest it is to "offer inducements for the successful prosecution of business of all kinds" in their city, can obtain from the legislature the privilege of regulating their own local taxation, the Herald is prepared to show them how they can benefit by the change. It says:

It is well known that the city of Philadelphia has been made one of the largest manufacturing centers in the world—indeed, it is claimed by some that it is the largest—by a method of local taxation which practically exempts from imposts everything but real estate. It is of great advantage for manufacturers to locate their plants in a city that offers these financial inducements, and, consequently, Philadelphia has prospered greatly—to a much larger degree than most persons have any idea of—at the expense of Boston.

This is the policy that the Herald advocates for Boston, and it believes the people will see the obvious advantages of such a change. But the rest of the state might object to the omission of all the personal property and movable capital of Boston from the tax lists, as in that case Boston would not pay its proper share of state taxes; the Herald proposes, therefore, that all state revenues shall be raised from taxes on legacies in succession and collateral inheritances, as then it would not matter to any one locality or part of the state what property any other locality chose to put on the tax lists, for the assessments would be only for local purposes. A bill to raise state revenues in this manner has also been introduced in the Massachusetts legislature, so that the Herald programme is before the people in practical shape.

It is hardly necessary to point out the fact that if the exemption from taxation of personal property and movable capital so-called has been such a benefit to Philadelphia and would be such a benefit to Boston, the exemption of capital in the shape of improvements and buildings would be but the necessary and logical sequence of such a policy. It is obvious that to fine a man for putting up a building is as certain a method of discouraging improvement and preventing "the successful prosecution of business" as taxing his stock in trade or his personal property. The Herald might easily have shown, therefore, how Boston could far outstrip Philadelphia in prosperity by simply carrying out this principle to its logical extreme. In Massachusetts, indeed, it is especially easy to show exactly the extent to which the taxing of improvements is a fine on industry, for that state already has a law in force compelling the assessors to separate the value of the land from the value of the buildings in assessing real estate.

Single tax men, however, could hardly expect more from any leading paper than such outspoken advocacy of the reforms which the Herald proposes. Local option in taxation, such as the bill introduced in the New York legislature provides for, or such as this Massachusetts bill will effect, is a reform that will lead to the single tax quicker than any other possible reform in state laws.

Taxation in Turkey.

Few people will wonder at the degradation and poverty of the Turkish people, and the provinces under Turkish rule, when they understand the manner in which the government and the sultan derive their revenues. In an article entitled, "The Druse War," in the Evening Post of February 18, which described the revolt of a people in Palestine, known by the name of Druse, against the attempted Turkish domination, the writer gives a description of the fiscal policy of the sultan's government, that is worth reading. The Druse, who have so far managed to prevent the Turks from subjecting them to their oppressions, are certainly to be congratulated. The writer says:

So far as I know, everything in Turkey is taxed as much as it will bear, and most things have been taxed out of existence. The land tax on public land is 50 per cent. of the crops raised, on land held under private title 10 per cent., and, I believe, in certain cases or certain regions 20 per cent. There is a tax on every sheep, goat, camel, and, I believe, on every domestic animal. So high are these taxes that I have known the price paid for a sheep's wool in some regions to be less than the annual tax chargeable on each sheep. There is a tax on each palm tree, and, I believe, on other productive trees. There is a heavy tax on each fish caught. There is a duty on all goods brought into any city. There is a duty of 8 per cent. on all goods carried by water from one city in the Turkish empire to another. There is a uniform export duty on all goods of any sort sent out of the country, increased at some if not all ports by arbitrary over-valuation, against which there is no redress. There is a uniform import duty of 8 per cent. on all goods. There is a heavy road tax in the form of toll on all of the few miserable roads existing in the empire, and in many cities a further tax on each beast of burden arriving at that city. Boats, houses, almost all objects of any commercial value, also pay taxes. Mining, including salt fields, has been taxed and bought into the hands of the privy purse and the government. Tobacco is a monopoly, paying a large revenue to the government, for which the people receive very poor and dear cigarettes and cigarette tobacco. Speaking generally, it may be said that in Turkey you must for all things and all occasions pay taxes or give backsheesh, and generally you must do both.

Effect of the Present System.

While in all of our cities the value of land, which increases not merely with their growth, but with the expectation of growth, thus operates to check building and improvement, its effect is manifested through the country in a somewhat different way. Instead of unduly crowding people together it unduly separates them. The expectation of profit from the rise in the value of land leads those who take up new land, not to content themselves with what they may most profitably use, but to get all the land they can, even though they must let a great part of it lie idle; and large tracts are seized upon by those who make no pretense of using any part of it, but merely calculate to make a profit out of others who in time will be driven to use it. Thus population is scattered, not only to loss of all the comforts, refinements, pleasures and stimulations that come from neighborhood, but to the great loss of productive power. The extra cost of constructing and maintaining roads and railways, the greater distances over which produce and goods must be transported, the difficulties which separation interposes to that commerce between men which is necessary even to the ruder forms of modern production, all retard and lessen production. While just as the high value of land in and about a great city makes more difficult the erection of buildings, so does the increase in the value of agricultural land make improvement difficult. The higher the value of land the more capital does the farmer require if he buys outright; or, if he buys on installments, or rents, the more of his earnings must he give up every year. Men who would eagerly improve and cultivate land could it be had for the using are thus turned away—to wander long distances and waste their means in looking for better opportunities; to swell the ranks of those seeking for employment as wage workers; to go back to the cities or manufacturing villages in the endeavor to make a living; or to remain idle, frequently for long periods, and sometimes until they become utterly demoralized and worse than useless tramps.—Social Problems.

And Yet "Britons Never Shall be Slaves."

This is clear—that in Great Britain to-day the right of the people as a whole to the soil of their native country is much less fully acknowledged than it was in feudal times. A much smaller proportion of the people own the soil, and their ownership is much more absolute. The commons, once so extensive and so largely contributing to the independence and support of the lower classes, have, all but a small remnant of yet worthless land, been appropriated to individual ownership and enclosed; the great estates of the church, which were essentially common property devoted to public purpose, have been diverted from that trust to enrich individuals; the dues of the military tenants have been shaken off, and the cost of maintaining the military establishment and paying the interest upon an immense debt accumulated by wars has been saddled upon the whole people, in taxes upon the necessaries and comforts of life. The crown lands have mostly passed into private possession, and for the support of the royal family and all the petty princelings who marry into it, the British workman must pay in the price of his mug of beer and pipe of tobacco. The English yeoman—the sturdy breed who won Crecy, and Poictiers, and Agincourt—is as extinct as the mastodon. The Scottish clansman, whose right to the soil of his native hills was then as undisputed as that of his chieftain, has been driven out to make room for the sheep ranges and deer parks of that chieftain's descendant; the tribal right of the Irishman has been turned into a tenancy-at-will. Thirty thousand men have legal power to expel the whole population from five-sixths of the British Islands, and the vast majority of the British people have no right whatever to their native land save to walk the streets or trudge the roads. To them may be fittingly applied the words of a Tribune of the Roman People: "Men of Rome," said Tiberius Gracchus—"men of Rome, you are called the lords of the world, yet have no right to a square foot of its soil! The wild beasts have their dens, but the soldiers of Italy have only water and air!"

Canadian Single Taxers Going Into Politics.

Kingston single taxers may put a Henry George candidate in the field at the next Dominion election. They have called a meeting to consider the propriety of doing so.

The single tax may be robbery or confiscation or anything else its opponents may call it, but the question has come to stay and public educators can no longer afford to ignore it. Not only so, they will have to study it, and that is just what the majority of its detractors has not done. The man who presumes to publicly discuss the question without first reading "Progress and Poverty" will not add to his reputation for wisdom.—Hamilton, Ont., Times.

THERE is but one way to remove an evil—and that is, to remove its cause. Poverty deepens as wealth increases, and wages are forced down while productive power grows, because land, which is the source of all wealth and the field of all labor, is monopolized. To extirpate poverty, to make wages what justice commands they should be, the full earnings of the labor, we must therefore substitute for the individual ownership of land a common ownership. Nothing else will go to the cause of the evil—in nothing else is there the slightest hope.

This, then, is the remedy for the unjust and unequal distribution of wealth apparent in modern civilization, and for all the evils which flow from it:

We must make land common property.—Progress and Poverty.

THE WORD MADE FLESH.

LESSON I, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JULY 5.

Text of the Lesson, John i, 1-18—Commit Verses, 11-13—Golden Text, John i, 14—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

We now enter upon the simplest, and yet the highest and deepest of all the gospels.

1. "In the beginning was the Word."

We are here introduced to the Son of God as "The Word," the telling out of the Father's heart by whom we are to know the Father. By people's words, if they are honest, we know their hearts, so by the Son as the Word of God we shall know our Heavenly Father's heart toward us.

"And the Word was with God, and the Word was God."

Can we for a moment wonder at His oneness with the Father before He ever came as a man?

2. "The same was in the beginning with God."

The words "in the beginning" in this verse and the last take us to Gen. i, 1, but who can tell when "the beginning" was?

3 "All things were made by Him; and without Him was not anything made that was made."

See how full the statement in Col. i, 16, 17, which closes with these words, "All things were created by Him and for Him; and He is before all things, and by Him all things consist."

4. "In Him was Life, and the Life was the Light of men."

Apart from Him no one, however good morally or even religiously, has what the Scriptures call Life.

5. "And the Light shineth in darkness, and the darkness comprehended it not."

Weak eyes cannot bear natural light, neither can sinners bear the light of God, unless they are willing to be healed, and then Christ, the Light of God, will first be their healer and then their life (Jer. xxxiii, 6; John x, 10). And they will soon learn to sing "Behold, God is my salvation" (or health) (Isa. xii, 2).

6. "There was a man sent from God, whose name was John."

We now turn for a few moments from the Light to the herald of the Light. Jesus testified of him that "Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist" (Matt. xi, 11).

7. "The same came for a witness to bear witness of the Light, that all men through Him might believe."

The Spirit said through Malachi, "Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me" (Mal. iii, 1). This is now the business of every believer, to bear witness to the Light by letting the Light fill them and shine through them.

8. "He was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of that Light."

He bore witness by the Spirit in him, by whom he was filled from his birth (Luke i, 15), and we can only be witnesses by the same Spirit (Acts i, 8).

9. "That was the true Light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world."

See His own oft repeated, "I am the Light of the world" (John viii, 12; ix, 5; xii, 46), and give good heed to the fact that there is no need to walk in darkness.

10. "He was in the world, and the world was made by Him, and the world knew Him not."

Having created all things for His pleasure and glory, He created man in His own image as the head of all things and to have dominion over all things (Gen. i, 27, 28); but man having by sin defaced the image and lost the dominion, the Creator came in human form as a man to restore the image and the dominion. Yet He was treated as a stranger in the world which He had made. Seek, by in some faint measure putting yourself in His place, to realize somewhat the state of things here described.

11. "He came unto His own, and His own received Him not."

"A stranger to His brethren and an alien unto His mother's children" (Ps. lxix, 8). Even Job's experience when brethren were far from him, acquaintances estranged, kinsfolk failed, familiar friends forgot, a stranger in his own house, wife, children, servants, all against him (Job xix, 13-19)—even this was not equal to the experience of God manifest in the flesh.

12. "But as many as received Him, to them gave He power (or the right or privilege) to become the sons of God, even to them that believe in His name."

While the nation rejected Him a few believed on Him, and this was their privilege. Each hearer has it in his or her power to keep Him out or let Him in, and thus continue in darkness and death, or pass from death to life.

13. "Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."

The Jews thought that because they were of the blood of Abraham, descended from him, that therefore they were safe (viii, 33). They were full of the works of the flesh, their own doings, and that was their righteousness in which they trusted.

14. "And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us (and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father), full of grace and truth."

As the glory of God was concealed from the people in the Holy of Holies, within the veil, in the tabernacle and in the temple, so in the body of the Lord Jesus, as within a veil (Heb. x, 20) the glory was concealed from natural eyes while He was here in humiliation. But on the Mount of Transfiguration it shone forth.

15. "John bare witness of Him, and cried, saying, This was He of whom I spake, He that cometh after me is preferred before me, for He was before me."

Not as a man born of woman was Jesus, Son of Mary, before John, son of Elizabeth, but as John's creator and the creator of all men.

16. "And of His fullness have all we received, and grace for grace."

"It pleased the Father that in Him should all fullness dwell." "In Him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily" (Col. i, 19; ii, 9). And we are filled full in Him. Receiving Him (verse 12) we must have all that He has and is.

17. "For the law was given by Moses, but Grace and Truth came by Jesus Christ."

The law showed what man ought to be, but never could give life nor make man what he ought to be, because of his sinful nature, which cannot keep God's holy law.

18. "No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son which is in the bosom of the Father, He hath declared Him."

See the first clause of the verse repeated in I John iv, 12. Jesus said to Philip, "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father" (John xiv, 9). Wherever, in all Scripture, you read of any manifestation of God, see there the only begotten Son, "whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting" (Mic. v, 2), and your Bible will take on a new meaning and shine with a new light.

TOLEDO, O., April 6, 1891.

I had a horse in my stables that had hoofs so brittle that it was impossible to keep a shoe on his feet. I have used one can of Marshall's Hoof Cure on his hoofs and the horse has been shod for four weeks and the shoes stay on all right. I consider it the best hoof cure I have ever used.

Seek a Certain End.

TWENTY-FOURTH ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT OF THE TECUMSEH HIGH SCHOOL.

A Brilliant Program Presented Last Thursday Evening—Fifteen Graduates Receive their Diplomas.

The Opera House was crowded, as usual, on Thursday evening of last week to listen to the commencement exercises of the High School graduating class. Although not as large as some of its predecessors, the class will compare favorably in point of ability and scholarship with any former one. The program presented was certainly of a high order of literary merit, and the essays were delivered in an easy, attractive manner, which held the undivided attention of the large audience. All did so well that it would be invidious to make comparisons. There was not an inferior production in the entire list. The program too was of reasonable length, being exactly two hours long, from the first overture to the benediction.

The stage setting was not so elaborate as on some previous occasions but was exceedingly tasty. The class motto: "Seek a Certain End," appeared in large white letters on a red background at the bottom of the drop curtain. The front of the stage was decorated with evergreens and mosses. Fifteen small tables were arranged at each end of the stage on the main floor to receive the gifts to the class members. These were unusually numerous and beautiful, comprising not only floral mementoes of varied character, but also books, jewelry and other articles of value. The tables were literally loaded down with these elegant and useful gifts, presenting an elaborate display.

The audience was called to order promptly at eight o'clock by Prof. Kellogg, and the program was opened with an overture by the full Tecumseh Orchestra. "Solitude" was the title of the selection and it was finely rendered. A brief invocation followed by Rev. W. H. Babbitt, and then an instrumental solo, "Kermesse (Faust) Uno Gounod, Saint Saens," by Miss Helen E. Anderson, which was beautifully executed and elicited a round of applause.

Then followed the Salutatory, by Albertine Brewer. "All the world's a stage and all the men and women merely actors. They have their exits and their entrances and one man in his time plays many parts." This evening we are completing the second act as related by the poet, that of school life. In acting our parts and making our entrances and exits this evening we bid you all welcome. School life is indeed very important, and the way we act this part must have an influence upon our subsequent lives. It was doubtless this idea which led our forefathers to establish schools. In one of the early colonial statutes it was enacted that every town of fifty householders should teach every child how to read and write, and every town of a hundred should establish a grammar school. Thus the public schools were founded and have grown to their present flourishing condition. The common school however should be common in nothing but the fact that it is open to all. A desire for culture and refinement should be awakened at school. If music, painting, drawing, and floriculture were added to the curriculum, how many lives might be brightened and sweetened thereby. Goethe says, "Encourage the beautiful and the useful will take care of itself." In loyalty to our small Latin class I must make a plea for the more general study of Latin. So many English words are derived from the Latin language that by its study we can far better comprehend our own. But whatever may be taught in the schools, their success depends greatly upon how the scholars act their part.

The Class History was then given by Bessie M. Avery. We do not come before you to-night as the largest class that has ever been graduated from the Tecumseh High School, nor as the most brilliant. We come simply as the fifteen faithful remaining out of the thirty-five who began High School work together. Looking back over the last ten years, I can recollect four of us, Ida Pilbeam, Julia Wright, Agnes Woodward and myself who were together in the first room of the East Branch. But the majority of the class came together in the fourth grade. At that time Harry McClure, Anna Harding, Ernest Albaugh, Gertrude Fisher, Raynor Anderson and Bertine Brewer joined us. The next year Grace Heesen came over from the North Branch. Minnie Pomeroy joined the class in the eighth grade and Katie Tallman began High School work with us. Fern Temple and Addie Vandercook entered the class last year. Eight members of the class were born in Tecumseh and four others call Michigan their native state. The remaining three come from New York. Our average age is 17. Our oldest member is 20, and our youngest 16. Five of us have blue eyes, five have brown, four have gray, and one young man, with delightful frankness, confesses that his eyes are green. As a class we have hair of very sober hue, ranging from black to flaxen, including all the intervening shades of brown. In recording the exception to this rule I must relate a little incident that happened in the Natural Philosophy class a few weeks ago, while our President was passing a ray of light through a piece of red glass. On being asked what made the transmitted light of that brilliant hue, one pupil wickedly replied that it was our President's hair! Several of the girls have decided upon teaching as a profession, three are undecided, one wishes to clerk in a book-store, and another intends to have fun. One of our young men intends to be a builder, of what he does not say; the second will devote himself strictly to business, and the third hopes to gain renown in the field of athletics. Our aspirations are all worthy, and we hope, not too high for our abilities.

"School Examinations" was the subject chosen by Gertrude M. Fisher. The prolonged discussion in both England and America on the subject of school examinations, has resulted in the verdict that, as now conducted, they are a nuisance. The pupil in the humblest grade is estimated entirely according to his capacity to undergo the cramming process, and the pupil with a gutta-percha skull stands the best chance of winning the prize. It is argued that the examination enables the child to express his thoughts more clearly on paper than he otherwise would do, but it more frequently happens that he is unable to express them at all. These examinations create low desires in the pupil, for he strives merely to have his mark above that of his fellow student. The thing he is striving for is the mark. Instead of learning at school as they should, the examination drives them home for their parents to teach them. The school room is simply the place where the children parade the work done at home. The written examination drives many pupils from school before they have finished their course. In one city in one year, between January and June, 1600 children left school to escape the examination. The long and short of the matter is that the learned world has become so accustomed to running in the old channels, that it can not well reform. Again, pupils are apt to look to the preparation for examination as the main object of study, and lose sight of its essential purpose. One of the ablest educators says that a teacher's knowledge of a pupil's daily work should determine the pupil's fitness to pass from one grade to another. The greatest fool can ask more questions than the wisest man can answer.

"The Shibboleth of Liberty" was the title of Fern Temple's production. The most common and popular conception of liberty is, that it is the power to do what one likes with one's own. John Stewart Mill says, it is allowing each individual to pursue his own good in his own way, always providing that he does not interfere with others in the pursuit of their own good in their own way. In public as in private life, we find that the most popular conception of the state is that it is a machine for protecting person and property. Liberty is held to be best attained under a democratic form of government. Some conceive liberty to be an absolute freedom from all legal restrant of any kind. But this is an extremely false view. Liberty does not reside in lawliness, but in law. Law is not the opposite of liberty, but it is its first principle. "Nothing is that errs from law." This is true, in both the political, the physical, and the moral world. Take the physical sciences, for example. The deeper we go into the mysteries of nature, the more we are convinced that governing all her changes, law reigns supreme. The one aim of the scientist is to demonstrate the stability of natural law. Natural law is God speaking through nature: an expression of the divine will by means of natural symbols. In the physical world, therefore, liberty does not consist in doing what one likes. As little does it in the moral world. Here also true liberty is only found in strict obedience to law. It is only when the best good of the people is secured by the best means, that true liberty is realized.

Miss Agnes Woodward sang a vocal solo, entitled "Der Vogel Fanger," adding new laurels to her reputation as a vocalist. Miss Jennie Root accompanied on the piano.

Addie E. Vandercook came next with an essay entitled "The Modern Novel." In the earliest times man expressed himself in poetry, which appeals to the feelings. Homer, the greatest of poets, lived in the pre-historic age. Shakespear's Othello is not a man, but jealousy embodied in the form of a man. Hamlet is merely the passion of revenge. Of all his characters Portia approaches nearest the intellectual development of the modern novel. When intelligence predominates over the emotions man begins to express himself in prose. The simplest form of prose was description and narrative. With the advance of intelligence, history and narrative give place to the modern novel, which has come to be the most important branch of literature. The modern novelist begins where the scientist and philosopher leave off. It is the element of life which gives the novel a grasp upon the attention of the reader. Some novels are read because they are associated with great names, others because they are the latest sensation in the circle to which the reader belongs. With a few exceptions the value of a novel consists in its power to interest. The merely exciting novel may be in vogue by those who crave excitement, but its place is soon filled by another. It is asserted that people now days go to the novel for their sentiments, morals and religion. This may be carried to excess, although good morals and religion may be taught in a novel of high character. The modern novel of the highest type is well worthy of our study. It fills a place that no other branch of literature can supply.

The subject of Katie E. Taliman's production was "The Outlook for Women." In other words: What will be the result of the two great questions now before the public mind, the rights and wrongs of women, and the advantages and disadvantages of a higher education. In all ages and in all countries, the higher the degree of civilization, the more freedom given to women. Thus we learn from history that civilization and the elevation of women have gone hand in hand. Is it right to allow ignorant immigrants to have a voice in our government and to debar our native educated women from the same privilege? As this touches the woman suffrage question I leave it to older heads than mine. The advantages of a higher education for women are so many that I can consider only a few. Women cannot make a decided success in man's work, but she must create new lines of work for herself, and her degree of success will be in proportion as it differs from man's work. An education helps a girl socially: it helps her in the household. It is a college education and the daily association with others of the same age which develop character. It gives her a position, that whatever fortune may befall her, she is not dependent upon the charity of the world. Women are now free to take up almost any work, for nearly all professions and trades are open to her. The prejudice against a woman earning money has in a measure passed away and will soon pass away entirely. Her record in the past prophesies a brilliant future for her.

The "Fairies of Science" was the subject of the next essay, by Ida L. Pilbeam. When the noted astronomer, Sir Wm. Herschell, began t study that science he perused all the books within his reach and then sighed for more. Books were scarcer in those days than now. So he turned his attention to the skies, the fountain head of the science. When his naked eye could no longer view the distant planets, his inventive genius made improvements in the telescope, which enabled him to extend his celestial journeys far beyond any thing known before. Sir William's experience must be that of all who would know nature as it is. Books cannot show it to us. Let us look at the home of the fairy sunbeams. It is a fiery ball ninety one millions of miles from the earth. Every form of life owes its existence to these fairy sunbeams. In the study of Botany we learn more about these fairies. All forms of plant growth receive their daily food from the sunbeams. Even the bumble bee, which so many people disdain, performs a great part in the work of the world. What fairy sculptor made the beautiful coral groves in the warm waters of the ocean? The water fairies are never idle and great changes are wrought by them. But their most wonderful work is seen in the formation of the coal beds. Flowers and insects act without thought or knowledge, live their little lives as nature guides them. The fairies of science perform their miracles in a mystic way. We know their results but the impelling force is a mystery to both sage and philosopher.

The "Future of Warfare" was the subject chosen by Raynor Anderson. From the time that warfare began, which is hidden in the obscurity of history, every century has witnessed some improvement in the art of war. Before the invention of gunpowder these changes took place gradually; since then they have been more marked from time to time. The present century has exceeded all others in the number and value of these improvements. Implements of warfare are now so destructive that many think war will soon be impossible. But modern inventions are also decreasing the losses in war. The railroads are being reduced into a war system. Thus large bodies of troops can be massed at the most important points in a few days, and decisive battles may be brought on quickly. A few battles in a few months will decide a conflict, when many years would have been necessary in former times. Again the soldier of to-day is better able to stand the hardships of campaigning. The health of the soldier is much better taken care of. Hence he can endure more hardships. The improvements in surgery will save the lives of large numbers who are wounded. There is a tendency now among the most civilized nations to settle minor quarrels by arbitration. This prevents many wars. But great conflicts of principle sometimes arise that cannot be settled by arbitration. We have had at least two such wars, one against "taxation without representation," and the other against "slavery." War therefore seems to be a necessity, and without doubt will continue to be as long as men are subject to their present passions and conditions.

Prof. C. H. Palmer, of Ypsilanti, executed a Mandoline solo in a manner which called forth merited applause.

Anna M. Harding was the next speaker who had chosen for her subject, "A Purpose in Life." Purpose is stamped on all nature's varying forms and phases. The birds of the air, the beasts of the field, the fishes of the sea, insects, plants, minerals, each in its own sphere has its part to perform. The sun casts its warm rays upon earth-born objects, giving them heat and life. If this fact be true of the inanimate, how much more is it true of man? The fact that every power of human nature is strengthened by proper labor is proof that no man was intended to lead an idle life. A man who does nothing for himself or others is universally despised. The aims of different persons are as diverse as the persons themselves differ in character, but all should have some purpose. That desired purpose cannot be attained without work, self-denial, and perseverance. Our failures can be used as stepping stones to success, and by triumphing over obstacles we are strengthened and equipped for future struggles. Note the perseverance of Thomas Carlisle in writing the first volume of the French Revolution, and the persistency of Prof. Morse in getting the small sum from Congress to build his first telegraph line. This is the history of all eminent lives: Obstacles, toil, perseverance, success. Many lives are made failures because their purpose is in the plural instead of the singular number. The broad-minded man has one definite purpose or object in life. He has one certain end in view and is ever seeking to attain that goal. Let us improve our chances and let no time be spent in idleness.

"What is Genius?" was the question propounded and answered by Minnie Pomeroy. Just when the word Genius was first defined is uncertain, but modern dictionaries have placed a definition upon the word which the world at large is willing to accept. By some genius is supposed to be a kind of inspiration which accomplishes its object without previous training and apparently with little effort. No culture is needed: no special education. Shakespeare, they say, gave his wisdom by intuition, and the songs of Burns were the outpourings of an untaught genius. Genius may have been the foundation on which they built, but we believe that to this was added a close study of books and a critical observation of human nature. The great German poet Goethe says: "How little are we by ourselves, and how little can we call our own! We must all accept and learn from those who have gone before us and those that live with us." Again, many think that genius is an acquired power, by which education and effort inspire the mind and hand. Energy and patience are the substitute for natural talent, and the desired goal can be attained by all who struggle to the end. The two extremes, natural endowment and acquired education, seem to have a mutual relation, which many of us have overlooked. We may have expected too much of the one or disregarded the value of the other. Is it not possible that education, acting upon a healthy mind, may produce that rare type of mental strength which we call genius? Genius of the highest type may be defined as a "special aptitude developed by a special culture."

The next speaker was Ernest H. Albaugh, who discoursed on the "Nicaragua Canal." Since the year 1513, when Balboa looked from the summit of a mountain down on the great South Sea, navigators and engineers have planned routes across this isthmus, which has thus far been a barrier between the two oceans in the main track of commerce. Modern science has overcome many obstacles in the way of transit, but still the canal across the isthmus is yet an achievement of the future. The work is now being conducted by the maritime canal company, with a chartered capital of two hundred millions. By the terms of its concessions there remain ten years yet in which to complete the work, and the amount already expended by the company exceeds three millions. The canal when completed will be 169 miles long. Of this distance 27 miles will be entirely artificial, while 142 miles will be free navigation through lake Nicaragua and connecting rivers. Six locks will be required, which will be built upon a scale now in use at lake Superior, and will lift the ships 152 feet above the sea level. The advantages of a shorter water route between the Atlantic and the Pacific in these days of rapid transit are many. It would reduce the distance between New York and San Francisco about ten thousand miles, and between New Orleans and San Francisco over eleven thousand miles. It would do much to build up our coasting trade. All past experience teaches us that the greater the facilities for trade, the more rapidly the wealth of a country increases. Surely no other enterprise can surpass this in importance.

Mr. Chas. Joslyn sang a vocal solo, entitled "Friends," which proved him to be one of our very best home singers. Miss Evelyn Joslyn accompanied on the piano.

"Public Opinion" was the title of Julia E. Wright's essay. The customs and industries of our country are mainly controlled by the influence of public opinion. Public opinion may be defined as the accord of individual opinion upon a matter of general interest. One of the chief exponents of public opinion is the newspaper. Men consult it for its views on politics, women for domestic affairs and young people for manners. What are we to say to this world wide fact? Are we to regard it as a good or as an evil? Public opinion should be the expression of the national conscience, but is it? It is oftener a conflicting tumult of individual interests and classes constantly striving to overcome one another. It is thought by many to be hostile to individuality, for in every age it has been the penalty of greatness. Galileo was compelled by public opinion to retract, but he arose from taking the oath with these words, "It does move for all that." No greater men are now than ever were. A singular equality may be observed between the great men of old and of to-day. The great men of any age die and their experience dies with them. It must be confessed that the masses of men are swayed more by passion than by principle. Wisely does Emerson say: "What one must do is all that concerns him, not what people think." It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he, who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.

"The Use and Abuse of a Dollar," was the title of Grace Heesen's production. Great men have talked about it; philosophers lectured upon it; fools ignored it; and professors written books upon called political economy. But there is another view of this subject on which even a school girl graduate may be allowed to speak, and that is the use and abuse of a dollar as an individual matter. It is not the mere possession of money that can make a person happy, but the power it gives one to procure those things which tend to our happiness. The miser hoards his money and seems to think that he enjoys it, but what good does it yield to either himself or his fellow men? Although money is said to be the root of all evil, most men are willing to take all they can get. The good book tells us that money answereth all things and is the means of defence, but it does not tell us to steal our defence. At an examination for the baccalaureate degree the professor of physics asked a candidate: "What is the best insulator known"? The reply was "Poverty." At first thought this answer may seem strange, but when we consider how widely the poor are separated from the rich and how, by poverty, the poor are deprived of the common comforts of life, one cannot say that the answer is far from right. Let us remember what Habburton said; "No man is rich whose expenditures exceed his means, and no one is poor whose incomings exceed his outgoings". Let us not, like Aaron, collect our money to make the golden calf, but let us employ it wisely, to improve ourselves and those around us.

The Valedictory was then given by Harry H. McClure. Kind Friends, we thank you for your large attendance and good attention this evening. By your presence you have encouraged us to begin our life's work hopefully. To-night the school life of some of us ends, and it is with deep feelings of regret that we meet to bid farewell to the friends here gathered. To the members of the school board we owe our thanks for assistance rendered. If we use the education here obtained to increase our education hereafter, then their efforts for our welfare will not have been in vain. School life here may be compared to a ladder, the top of which we have gained step by step. We meet to-night for possibly the last time. We are here to take leave of the old familiar scenes of school, of school-mates, teachers and friends. We now go out upon life's arena and our success or failure there will depend largely upon ourselves. Our motto is: "Seek a certain end." What shall this end be? Merely to graduate? Rather to obtain all the education possible hereafter. What we have received here is only to fit us for what is to come. Let us not presume too much on our present acquirements. Let us not be of the number who consider their education finished when they leave school. Class-mates, we are at the point where some of us will bid a last farewell to school. Life is before us. And the great question which now presses upon us is this: How shall we succeed in after life?

Dr. George Howell, President of the Board, then presented the diplomas, in a few brief but well chosen remarks, concluding with a little personal advice to the members of the class.

The class song was sung, the benediction pronounced and the commencement of '91 was over.

Last Monday was J. S. Strongs 71st., birth day. Mrs. Morley invited the Presbyterian choir down to her house to spend the afternoon, and while there a surprise was perpetrated upon Mr. Strong in the shape of a gift of a gold headed cane. The afternoon was passed very pleasantly by all and especially so by Mr. Strong. His long and efficient service as leader of that choir has no parrallel in this section of the state, and it seems most proper that he should receive some reminder occasionally to show that his services are fully appreciated.

It is interesting to note the growth of the manufacturing interests throughout our own State. Our attention was brought forcibly to this to-day by receiving from the Lansing Iron and Engine Works, of Lansing, Mich., an advertisement calling attention to their celebrated traction engine and other machinery they manufacture. A little less than eight years ago this firm started business in two small buildings, and through careful and prudent management, they have steadily increased their plant until to-day they stand at the head of all similar institutions in the State, their buildings covering an area of 13 acres of ground, and employing 150 men with a pay roll of $7,000 a month. About two years ago they began the manufacturing of the now famous double-acting force and spray pumps, and their success in this branch of the business has been phenominal, having manufactured and sold up to the present time over 9,000 pumps, and are nearly 2,000 behind on their orders. A number of the spray pumps have been sold in this vicinity to the farmers desiring to spray their fruit trees and shrubbery.

Lebanon, Mo., Rustic of recent date says: The entertainment given here last night under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. Church and assisted by Major R. H. Hendershot the original drummer boy of the Rappahannock, his son and some of our best local talent, proved to be a grand success in every respect. Although the weather was bad the large Court House Hall was filled with the best citizens of Marshfield. Major Hendershot was introduced to the audience by the Hon. R W. Fyan. The Major then stepped forward and proceeded to entertain his audience as they had never been before. The entertainment lasted nearly o hours and when Judge Fyan thanked the audience they seemed to want more drumming but the Major thanked the people and said he was too tired to play any more. Everybody went home pleased and with the words, come again Major, on the end of their tongues.

SWEPT BY STORMS.

Wind and Rain Play Havoc in Iowa Towns.

Seventy-Five Houses Destroyed at Cherokee—Sutherland Badly Damaged—Railway Bridges and Tracks Washed Away.

LEFT RUIN IN ITS PATH.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., June 26.—The flood in the Floyd river did great damage in the country. It reached here early Thursday morning and the river rose about 12 feet. One hundred and fifty houses in the valley are partially submerged and the families have moved out to the hills. The large stove works, a shoe factory, flour mill and foundry in the suburb of the town are closed. There was no loss of life here. A man in from Moville, 18 miles east of here, reports that the whole town was swept away and only one house was untouched.

Further reports here place the loss at Sutherland by storm at $75,000 to buildings alone. No estimate can be made of the loss in crops through the Little Sioux and Floyd valleys. Seventy miles of Illinois Central track was submerged by water, and the loss will reach $100,000 and take many days to repair. It is impossible to estimate the loss to the Chicago & Northwestern. It will be fully as great as that of the Central.

LE MARS, Ia., June 27.—The flood of Wednesday came down Willow creek from the direction of Sutherland. The opening under the Illinois Central track 1 mile east of Le Mars would not carry off the water and the flood accumulated until it formed a lake and burst down the railroad grade. The water rushed through a break half a mile wide and 20 feet deep, only the tops of the telegraph poles showing above the cataract.

No lives were lost and no damage was done to Le Mars, as it is situated on high ground back from the river. A hundred thousand dollars would not pay for the damage done in this county to crops, bridges and highways, to say nothing of the railroad loss.

Great damage was done at Terril, Hinton, James and Leeds. The valley of the Floyd was swept by the flood for over 30 miles, spreading out in places a mile and a half wide. The track between here and Sioux City has been repaired, but the Illinois Central, between here and Cherokee has lost 4 to 6 miles of roadbed and will not be in operation for several days.

CHEROKEE, Ia., June 29.—The following appeal for assistance has been sent out by the mayor of Cherokee:

"TO THE AMERICAN PUBLIC, WHOSE HEARTS AND POCKETBOOKS ARE OPEN SIMULTANEOUSLY TO EVERY APPEAL TO THOSE IN NEED: The enterprising, progressive and always prosperous little town of Cherokee is in sore distress. Floods have rendered 500 people homeless and dependent upon public charity. Many of these have lost everything they possessed, barely escaping with their lives. The damage done will reach $250,000. Every bridge in the city is gone and nearly every bridge in the county, so that outside of caring for those who have been rendered homeless our people feel the burden will be heavy. We feel that we cannot meet the immediate wants of all the people in distress and ask the outside world for assistance. Our people have always responded liberally to every appeal for aid, and much as we regret the necessity for asking it, we feel that it is only necessary to notify the American people and our appeal will be responded to. Contributions may be sent to D. H. Bloom, mayor, and our executive committee will see that every dollar is properly expended.

"DAVID H. BLOOM, Mayor."

HOLSTEIN, Ia., June 29.—Lightning and hail in abundance have done irreparable damage in this section to crops and cattle. The district stricken by hail is 3 miles west of here and is 3 miles wide and 10 miles long. Barley is almost totally destroyed; wheat and oats are damaged. At Cushing and Correctionville the houses were flooded and two children were drowned at Correctionville. Lightning struck and killed Chris Kinne. Two miles from this town the barn of R. Leonard was struck and two horses were killed.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., June 29.—Reports from the flooded country indicate that the flood was even more disastrous than has been supposed. Cherokee, Ida, Plymouth, Woodbury, O'Brien and Osceola counties have suffered worst. Monona county, though not in the storm region, is flooded by the water from the Little Sioux and Maple rivers. The west part of the county is low, and here the waters spread out and ruined crops for many miles.

THE DELUGE IN NEBRASKA.

OMAHA, Neb., June 27.—The storm that has raged throughout Nebraska did great damage to crops and railroad property. The entire length of the Platte river basin was swept. Much damage was done to the wheat in the flats in many places. The corn crop cannot be cultivated owing to the great amount of water, and the gravest of fears are entertained as to the result. All the railroads in the state suffered heavily. One thousand feet of the Elkhorn line was washed out at West Point.

IN KANSAS.

EMPORIA, Kan., June 29.—Word is just received in this city of the great damage caused by the heavy rains of Thursday in this and adjacent counties. Many farms have been entirely flooded, and barns, implements and entire crops washed away. On the farm of John Stotler, on Jacob's creek, a large orchard was destroyed and hedges of ten years' growth were washed away. The storm also did great damage to buildings.

At Soden's mill, just below Emporia, the Cottonwood river is out of its banks and spread over the country for miles. In the flood, as it passes, may be seen all kinds of wreckage, barns, parts of all kinds of farm machinery; wheat in abundance, and here and there a wagon bed or a dead animal. The flood is now subsiding.

IN COLORADO.

DENVER, Col., June 29.—News has just been received of a destructive cyclone which passed over this country 25 miles east of this city Thursday night. Houses were blown away, trees uprooted and carried away and the crops for many miles are completely ruined. A dozen persons were injured but none seriously. C. S. Clark was in from his ranch, 3 miles west of Deer Trail, and reports that the hail fell for twenty minutes and killed about 250 sheep and the eyes of many were put out.

HEAVY STORMS IN GERMANY.

BERLIN, June 29.—The storm in western Germany lasted three days. The downpour of rain was incessant and was increased by fearful cloudbursts and furious waterspouts, spreading destruction far and wide. Floods have suddenly covered sections of Westphalia, Hanover and the Rhine provinces, enormous in extent, the like of which has not been recorded in history. The valley of the Eider looks like an open sea. Cassel and Wildungen were submerged by waterspouts. A million marks will not cover the damage in these districts. Seventeen persons have been killed and twenty injured by lightning, and no estimate can yet be formed of the number drowned.

MICHIGAN.

The House Passes the Senate Congressional Reapportionment Bill.

LANSING, Mich., June 27.—The house on Friday passed the congressional reapportionment bill just as it passed the senate. The arrangement of the new districts is as follows:

First district—The First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Thirteenth and Fifteenth wards of the city of Detroit.

Second—Lenawee, Monroe, Jackson and Washtenaw counties and part of Wayne county.

Third—Hillsdale, Branch, Calhoun, Kalamazoo and Eaton counties.

Fourth—St. Joseph, Cass, Berrien, Van Buren, Allegan and Barry counties.

Fifth—Ottawa, Kent and Ionia counties.

FIVE PERSONS DROWNED.

A Boating Party at Cincinnati Run Into by a Barge.

CINCINNATI, June 26.—Thomas Thurman, a member of the Banner Tobacco Company of this city, aged 54; Mr. Joe Zins, bookkeeper of the same firm, aged 22; Miss Edith Zins, his sister, aged 20; Mrs. Catherine Cox, a niece of Mrs. Riverside, aged 23, and Miss Kate Riddle, of Burlington, Ky., aged 18, a cousin of the Zins Brother and sister, were drowned in the river here Thursday night. They had been up the river and were floating down on its waves when they met the towbont Frank Gilmore coming upstream with a large tow of empty barges. They steered clear of the steamer, but were run down by its barges. People on the shore heard screams, divined the cause and put out to the rescue. The empty yawl, a man's hat, a girl's hat and a couple of handkerchiefs were all they found. Miss Zins was stenographer and typewriter for Richard Smith, and a short time before left the Commercial-Gazette office full of life and gayety.

LUMBER ABLAZE.

Ten Million Feet Destroyed by Fire in the Nelson Yards at Cloquet.

DULUTH, Minn., June 27.—Fire started about 6 o'clock Friday afternoon in one of the big lumber yards of the C. N. Nelson Lumber Company at Cloquet, and at last accounts was still burning, but was supposed to be under control. The mill escaped, and it was thought that the lumber in the other yards would also be saved. The lumber was all of the highest grade. It is estimated that at least 10,000,000 feet were burned, causing a loss of $150,000. The insurance is about $100,000. The fire is supposed to have started from a spark from the mill.

Great Destruction by Fire.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 29.—The old ferry rolling mill was destroyed by fire Sunday evening and some adjoining property damaged. A space nearly 1,000 feet long by from 100 to 300 feet wide, occupied by the Diamond State Iron Company and containing buildings devoted to the manufacture of bar and horseshoe iron, spikes, bolts and railway iron was completely burned over. The loss is estimated at $500,000, and is about half covered by insurance.

THE SILVER DOLLAR.

The Cabinet Decides Against Its Continued Coinage.

A Constant Demand for Small Coins, Principally Dimes—Secretary Foster's Plans—Some Interesting Statistics.

SILVER COINAGE.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Silver speculators are not pleased with Friday's cabinet meeting. They had counted on a decision to continue the coinage of silver dollars after July 1, and this they believed would send the white metal upward. But Secretary Foster found that additonal circulation could be secured for a while at least in a better way, and this way will be followed. The act of March 3, 1891, requires that the secretary of the treasury shall, as soon as practicable, coin the trade dollar bars into silver dollars. Secretary Foster also finds that $150,000 has been appropriated for the recoinage of the subsidiary silver coin into such denominations as will best serve to give it circulation. There is constant demand for small coins, principally dimes, which the mints have not been able to supply. The secretary has decided that his first duty in this matter is to obey the direction of congress. Coinage of trade dollar bars will transform into standard dollars $5,148,281. It will require perhaps four months to perform the work of coining trade dollar bars and recoining the subsidiary silver.

Therefore the question of the continued coinage of silver dollars is not deemed a practical one at present. The cabinet was helped to this decision by the figures prepared by Director Leach, which showed that the act of July, 1890, was practically taking care of the whole silver product of the United States and was adding steadily to the circulation. By the time the trade dollars and the subsidiary coins are recoined the meeting of congress will be close at hand, and with the possibility of legislation ahead the treasury department is apt to continue the coinage of silver dollars unless directed by the law-making power. So this proposition may be looked upon as settled adversely.

The demand for dimes continues unabated and most of the recoinage for the present will be of that denomination, although twenty-five-cent pieces may also be coined at San Francisco. The coinage of dimes during the last three years has been $3,176,471, or 31,764,710 pieces, the principal part of which was executed at the Philadelphia mint, taxing that mint with its cramped space to its utmost capacity. It is proposed to distribute this coinage between the mints at San Francisco, Philadelphia and New Orleans.

By law the coinage of minor coin—one-cent and five-cent pieces—is confined to the mint at Philadelphia. This coinage has been very heavy for several years past. During the last three years the coinage of five-cent pieces amounted to $2,093,161, and the coinage of one-cent pieces to $1,395,364, making a total coinage of 175,487,430 pieces. This has all been absorbed by the public, and there is every indication that the demand for these coins will continue large for months to come, and add considerably to the work of the Philadelphia mint. The coinage at the mints at San Francisco and Carson City after July 1 will be confined to gold pieces and such re-coinage of subsidiary silver coins as may be required on the Pacific coast.

He started west in the 20's, but stopped in New York state, not reaching his home in Hillsdale county until 1843. His wife died in 1869 and since then he had lived with his children.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by sixty-two observers in different parts of the state for the week ended June 20 indicated that cholera morbus, whooping cough, inflammation of the bowels, typho-malarial fever and dyphtheria increased, and scarlet fever, cerebro-spinal meningitis and typhoid fever decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at thirty places, scarlet fever at thirty-four, typhoid fever at eleven and measles at forty-three places.

Murder of an Old Woman.

Jack Kehoe, a saloon keeper at Manistee, murdered his mother-in-law, Mrs. Ann McCormick, aged 55 years, by pounding her to death with a beer bottle. He attempted to kill his wife, but failed. She received serious internal injuries, besides a fracture of the skull and nose, but would recover. The family quarreled over property matters. Kehoe gave himself up.

Is Probably Insane.

Albert Smith, of the firm of Chapman & Smith, cigar manufacturers, Grand Ledge, skipped, leaving his partner. He also left a wife and five children, and from Chicago wrote a letter that he was off for California and did not want to see anyone in Grand Ledge again unless it was his baby. Grand Ledge people were divided as to Smith's sanity.

Mr. and Mrs. Morningstar will be at home after July 15th, at Pueblo, Cal.

Tom Biggins has come to the front again, after a short period of comparative respectability since his sojourn at the work-house. While under the influence of liquor last Monday night he made an unprovoked assault upon Charles Sturm, in front of his residence, and probably fearing the strong arm of the law was about to descend upon him again he fled and has not been seen since. The officers are ready for him, however, and will have a warm reception ready for him when he returns.

The program given by the Alumni of Clinton High School Friday evening was subjected to a few changes on account of several who had promised to appear failing to materialize at the last minute. Those who did perform, however, took their parts to the entire satisfaction of the audience, judging by the hearty applause that greeted them. The oration by James Eagan and poem by Minnie Hess were especially well received and deservedly so. After the program the members of the Alumni who were present, Revs. Wastell, Williams, Stone and their wives, Rev. Reeves, Mr. and Mrs. John Hause, Mrs. Stalker and a few other invited guests proceeded to the residence of W. D. VanTuyle where a banquet was held. After partaking of the refreshments a few impromptu toasts were responded to. The election of officers was next in order and resulted in the election of Mrs. J. R. Blanchard for president. At the suggestion of Will Eagan it was voted to make a decided change in next year's reunion, namely, to give a program to be followed by a banquet and hop at the Hall, to which those outside the Alumni might be invited. The change was thought to be an acceptable one and will be carried out accordingly. The guests then dispersed voting it one of the most pleasant reunions ever held.

The Commencement exercises of the class of '91, last Thursday evening, passed off very successfully in spite of the extreme heat. The audience seemed one sea of waving fans. The stage was very tastefully decorated with growing flowers, paintings, etc., and just above and in front of the stage was suspended the class motto, "Out of school life into life's school." The exercises were opened by prayer, followed by an instrumental trio by Mrs. Kimball, Mrs. Freese and Dwight Hause, nicely executed. The following program was then carried out, each one performing his part with credit to himself and instructors.

Director W. D. VanTuyle, in a few well-chosen words, presented the class with their diplomas, and then, to the surprise of the audience and, to judge by his appearance, to Prof. Daniels himself, in the name of the pupils of the high school, he presented him with an elegant album as a token of the great regard and kindly feeling in which they hold their Superintendent. Mr. Daniels thanked his pupils very gracefully and the evening's entertainment closed with the vocal solo "Orange Blossoms," by Minnie Humphrey.

DETROIT THE BATTLE GROUND.

RARE SPORT AHEAD FOR PATRONS OF THE TROTTING TURF.

The Cracks of the East and West Will Meet for the First Time this Year at Hamtramck—The Great $10,000 Stake—Nelson, King of the Turf, to Trot—Program of the Blue Ribbon Meeting, July 20-25.

Indications are that Michigan people will this year be treated to a carnival of turf sport the like of which has not been seen in the history of harness racing. Preparations extraordinary are being made by the Detroit Driving Club for bringing together all the crack horses of the country, from Nelson of Maine, whose record of 2:10¼ is the fastest ever made by a trotting stallion, to the superb little Cricket, 2:10, that trainer George Starr will bring all the way from California to try conclusions with the Tennessee champion, Hal Pointer, 2:09¾, in the free-for-all class for pacers.

By reason of a combination of lucky circumstances the outlook now is that the Blue Ribbon Meeting of July 20-25, will prove by all odds the most sensational of the year. Fortunately its dates are so arranged as to make Detroit the first great battle ground of the season in the struggle for supremacy between the crack trotters of the East and the West. From the opening meeting of the Grand Circuit, a week earlier, at Pittsburg, the noted Eastern drivers, Turner, Golden, Quinton and others, will ship the pick of their stables to Detroit, there to meet in battle royal the flower of the Western turf driven by Budd Doble, McHenry, Starr and Stewart. As this is the first meeting of the season at which the Eastern and Western stables come together, and the prizes contended for being richer than at any other meeting of the Grand Circuit, sensations, surprises and shattered records are certain to follow in rapid succession.

The program is indeed a brilliant one. "Blue Ribbon Day," as the opening day is termed, is made a genuine holiday for all who enjoy racing, the grounds being generously thrown open to the public, free of any admission. On that day the 2:27 class trot for a purse $2,000; then follows a race between pacers of the 2:24 class for a purse of like amount; the day's sport concluding with a dash of a single mile for 2:30 trotters, which is likely to prove a very fast and exciting contest. Tuesday's card is a fine one. The opening race is a $2,000 purse for the 2:17 class, trotting, and this is followed by the event of the week, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Stake. Thirteen of the fastest young trotters on the turf will start for the grand prize, $10,000, and a contest may be looked for equaling the memorable one of last year, won by the good horse Walter E. from a field of eleven after seven exciting heats. The 2:16 class, pacing, finishes Tuesday's program. Wednesday the drawing card will be the race for double teams of the 2:20 class, in which some of the famous trotting pairs from New York City are expected to take part. Other events on this day are the dash of one mile for 2:14 pacers, and the purse of $2,000 for trotters of the 2:21 class. Thursday should be termed "Red Letter Day," its program including free-for-all races for both trotters and pacers, in addition to a rich purse for the 2:30 class trotting. Friday sees the conclusion of the trotting program, with purses of $2,000 for the 2:19 classes trotting and pacing, and a mile dash between 2:25 trotters. On Saturday, the last day of the meeting, running will be the order, there being flat races at three-quarters, seven furlongs, one mile, and one mile and a sixteenth, and a hurdle race at one mile and a quarter.

The Detroit Driving Club is made up of gentlemen whose aim is steadily and continuously progressive, and on its grounds racing is seen at its cleanest and best. Many features of the Blue Ribbon program for 1891, which space will not permit of present mention, will be found detailed in a handsome souvenir that is soon to be issued by the Club and mailed free to all who request it.

RHEUMATISM CAN BE CURED.

Rheumatism has baffled the skill of our best physicians, and to-day more men, women and children are suffering from this terrible disease than ever before. The opinion seems universal that it is incurable, but this is a mistaken idea. Rheumatism can be permanently cured by the use of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup and Plasters. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE.

LANSING, Mich., June 24.—The senate yesterday killed the bill repealing the local option law and agreed on the sum of $57,600 for the mining school appropriation, $26,000 for the Traverse City insane asylum and $17,600 for the Kalamazoo asylum. The senate refused to reduce the appropriation for the world's fair from $125,000 to $100,000.

LANSING, Mich., June 25.—The senate yesterday for the second time defeated the bill providing for the local taxation of railroad property by a vote of 10 to 16. It also refused to concur in the conference committee's report on the Richardson bill increasing the specific tax upon railroad earnings $180,000 by a vote of 11 to 17. Bills were passed appropriating $45,000 for the new buildings at the Houghton mining school and $45,895 for the running expenses of the agricultural college.

LANSING, Mich., June 26.—The senate yesterday reduced the world's fair appropriation bill from $125,000 to $100,000, amended the bill to have the commissioners consist of four men and two women, they to elect a president of the board from the number, the compensation to be $3 per day and $3 for subsistence, and passed it by a vote of 22 to 5. The senate was informed by the governor that a sum in excess of $100,000 would be vetoed, hence the reduction. A bill was passed calling for a vote of the people upon the question of calling a convention for a general revision of the state constitution. A resolution was adopted providing for final adjournment next Tuesday.

LANSING, Mich., June 27.—The senate yesterday passed bills appropriating $90,000 for the erection of shops at Marquette prison and providing for the township unit system for schools in the upper peninsula. A new conference committee on the Richardson specific tax railroad bill agreed to an increase in the amount of tax upon the gross earnings of the roads of about $100,000, to which the roads give tacit assent. Adjourned to Monday.

LANSING, Mich., June 25.—The house yesterday refused to adopt a substitute tax bill reported by the judiciary committee for a bill abolishing the auditor general system of collecting delinquent taxes, and providing for the California system of taxing mortgages, and the latter bill went upon the general order. Bills were passed authorizing the incorporation of the order of the Sons of St. George and for the incorporation of Woman's Equal Suffrage associations of Michigan.

LANSING, Mich., June 26.—The house yesterday passed the bill combining the management of the three state insane asylums under one central board of control. At a caucus of the democratic members it was decided to agree to the congressional redistricting bill just as it came from the senate. The senate resolution for final adjournment next Tuesday was rejected.

LANSING, Mich., June 27.—The house yesterday passed the bill fixing the salary of the clerk of the supreme court at $2,000 and an allowance of $600 for clerk hire; agreed to the report of a conference committee on the bill increasing the specific taxes paid by the railroads, which increases the amount to $100,000, and passed the congressionel reapportionment bill. FATAL RUNAWAY.

Frightful Accident at a Southern Masonic Celebration Caused by Fireworks.

NEW ORLEANS, June 26.—The masons of the city celebrated St. John's day Wednesday at West End, the Coney Island of New Orleans, and among the means of entertainment was a lot of fireworks. The platform of the pyrotechnics held thousands of people. Into these there dashed at the explosion of the first bomb a team of horses and a carriage, which had been standing in the roadway. Mrs. A. F. Michel was kocked down by the maddened horses, her skull fractured and her body cruelly torn by their hoofs. Her two children were slightly injured. Mrs. John G. Fleming, wife of the past grand master, was badly hurt. Harry Russell, a bookkeeper, was the only person killed. He boldly attempted to stop the team, but was thrown beneath their feet, where his life was literally stamped out of him. Henry Johnson, the colored driver of the carriage, has been arrested charged with manslaughter.

STEEPLE CLIMBER KILLED.

Ferguson Falls Forty-Five Feet and Is Taken Up Dead.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 27.—James Ferguson, the famous steeple climber, known all over the country for his daring ascents, was killed at the penitentiary in this city Thursday afternoon. He was at work painting one of the towers, hanging in his little boatswain's chair, 45 feet above the ground. It became necessary to change his position and he clambered up to rearrange his gearing. When he dropped back into his chair the bricks at the top of the tower, to which his grappling hooks were attached, gave way and he was thrown to the ground. When picked up he was dead.

Samoa Storm Victims Buried.

VALLEJO, Cal., June 29.—The bodies of nineteen sailors who were drowned in the great storm at Samoa were buried at Mare island Saturday with imposing ceremonies. Their remains were taken to the cemetery, seven in one hearse and twelve on a caisson constructed of gun carriages.

Minnesota Millers Fail.

RED WING, Minn., June 29.—The milling firm of R. Gregg & Co., at Cannon Falls, has made an assignment for the benefit of creditors. The assets amount to $68,162, and the liabilities foot up nearly $150,000.

A Birthday Surprise.

As the summer months drew near, Mr. and Mrs. Hoxie's nearest relatives, remembering that it would soon be their 25th anniversary, decided to give them a surprise, so using the customary caution, a number of their friends were invited. According to agreement the guests met at Ed Hoxie's, on June 24th, formed a procession and drove over to Mr. Hoxie's, and taking absolute possession of their surroundings, began pouring into the house as by storm. They found Joe in the cornfield cultivating, and Anna in the kitchen preparing the midday meal, little dreaming that she would have so many to feed. The guests were chiefly from Franklin. Shortly after their arrival they began to unpack some mysterious-looking baskets and the tables were soon groaning under the heavy load of good viands which our Franklin wives know how to prepare so well. It was soon noticed that the tables were giving way under their great load and more props had to be used. After the tables were set and everything was in readiness four of the men got together and, school-boy fashion, made a chair by crossing their hands and carried Joe and Anne around the tables, where among numerous other good things, they saw that someone had been thoughtful enough to place on one cake "Our Best Wishes," and on another "Joe and Anne, June 24, 1866, June 24, 1891." They also saw that their guests were not few, as the tables were set for nearly seventy-five. After carrying them around the tables they seated them at the head and a little to one side of the tables, when, according to previous arrangement, Mr. T. M. Camburn stepped up and presented to them some gifts, which told the high esteem that the givers held for them. The presents were chiefly furniture, which we feel in duty bound to say were purchased at McCowen's, Tecumseh. This was followed by a song and then the guests turned their attention to the tables. After satisfying a good appetite the tide was then turned to conversation, and all seemed to enjoy themselves, for whenever it began to lull there was someone ready to entertain them with music. Among the players were two little Gray girls, who added much to the enjoyment. When the sun began to get low the tables were again uncovered, though not groaning as much as before; still there was plenty. They all enjoyed the lemonade, cigars and peanuts. By this time it began to grow late and as they began to talk of going Mr. O. Whelan, at Mr. Hoxie's request, thanked the guests for the presents and also for giving them a very pleasant day. They then departed for their homes, wishing the worthy couple many happy returns of the day, and all feeling that they had spent a very pleasant day, as all who were over there agree are always spent at their home.

THE MILWAUKEE

CHAIN POWER MOWER!

✦ ✦ Takes the Lead! ✦ ✦

And possesses all of the necessary requirements of a perfect Mower and stands first in the list of grass cutting machines.

It is entirely made of iron and steel, except the poll, neck-yoke, whiffletrees, swarth board and arm, which are of wood. It has no complicated nest gear with numerous bearings to wear out, only possessing five journal bearings in the entire machine.

The wheels are high and wide apart. We do not claim that our Mower wheels will completely clear the swath cut by our widest cutting apparatus; this would be absurd, as every casual observer understands that the farther the wheels are apart the greater will be the leverage of the axle upon the pole and that an extreme length of axle will therefore produce vibration and require a heavy pole.

Our Chain Power Mower is free from Vibration, Neck-Weight, Side Draft and we are enabled to use a Light Pole.

The weight of the cutting apparatus is carried upon the axle between the drive wheels, thus increasing the traction power of the Machine and making it a strong cutter.

Be sure and examine this Mower before purchasing. Call at my Rooms in the Usborne Block and see one.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Will Taylor, of Detroit, spent the 4th in Britton.

Edgar Exelby has bought a Champion Reaper machine.

Cherry picking seems to be the order of the day just at present.

Henry Taylor has moved into George Exelby's house, east of the railroad.

Don't hear any more talk about an elevator. When are we going to have one?

Dr. Hendershot has moved his office from the Hotel to the rooms above Mr. Babcock's drug store.

The HERALD reporter was here on the 4th and we leave to him the task of writing up the celebration.

A large number of the young folks of Britton attended the excursion to Devil's Lake last Sunday. They report a good time.

A large number of our villagers were taken violently sick last Monday night through eating cherries. No deaths are reported yet.

Mike Gillen and his family, from Ann Arbor, spent the 4th here with Britton friends. Mike will come here again to reside very shortly.

Dr. Thomas Smith was called to attend a horse of Hugh Hanna's last Monday, and sewed up a deep cut seven inches long in the horse's side.

Charlie Dubois seems to be meeting with good success as agent for the Champion reapers and binders, but who can wonder at it? Charlie can do anything.

The parties who took a silk umbrella from one of the bedrooms of the hotel last Saturday are requested to return it at once and thus save further trouble, as they are well known.

Mr. Beasley has still some very fine furniture left for sale cheap, and anyone in want of furniture will find it greatly to their interest to patronize him before going elsewhere.

The entertainment given by the scholars last Friday evening was quite largely attended and everybody was more than pleased with it. Our teacher deserves great credit in giving the scholars such good training.

A young man went to sleep standing on the sidewalk near the butcher shop last Sunday morning and when he awoke found to his dismay that he had been taken for a hitching post and a team of horses was fastened to his legs.

Our Britton Band furnished some very nice music the 4th, and our villagers and storekeepers ought to give the Band all the encouragement and financial help possible, for it has been a source of enjoyment in the past and should be kept up to its old standing in the future.

ONSTED ODDS.

Nice rains here.

Mamie Simpson is getting to be quite an equestrian.

The drug store was nicely decorated during the 4th.

On June 26th William Al drich passed his 88th birthday.

Calvin Pulver, of Hillsdale Co., has been calling on relatives here lately.

Our citizens were spread around the country on the 4th like butter on a hot day.

One dollar buys 30 pounds of sugar here now, so who need go without the sweets of life?

Haying in this locality is about all finished up and this week the golden grain will be slain by the binder.

We have been informed that Gran. Lyman was somewhat injured by falling from a load of hay the other day.

We don't want to live at Springville if they have snow at this time of year, although we had a two-minute hail storm Friday last; but that's nothing, you know.

Ed Hubbard, of Springville, came over here last Friday afternoon and took home a new Esterly binder, which he got through the agency of Frank Darling. Mr. W. H. Smith sells the Walter A. Wood here.

The school here closed June 26th and the scholars surprised the teacher, Warren Shepherd, by getting up a dinner at the church parlors, across the way, and inviting him over to partake thereof, and also presented him with a toilet set, for which he was very thankful. The following scholars received promotion cards: Byron Sheeler, Henry Ketchum, Frank Aldrich, Winnie Peters, Bernice Shugar, Algie Sheeler, Gracie Shugar, Beulah Desermia and Leo Knapp. Literary exercises were indulged in by the scholars in the audience room of the church.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

A severe storm of hail and rain passed through this section last Friday afternoon doing great injury to the growing crops, wheat naturally suffering the most. Cherries and berries were pounded into the ground and the fruit which remained on the stem rendered nearly worthless. Apples, peaches, plums and pears sustained great damage, flourishing family gardens were ruined. We understand that Ben. Reynolds estimates the damage done his crops at a number of hundred dollars. Among others who suffered heavy loss were E. C. Wisner, E. J. Whelan, F. Marshall, Mrs. A. R. Wisner Alvinza Whelan, the Demings, G. W. Allen. Drifts of hail formed which were six inches and more in depth and in places remained on the ground until the next day; in the woods the appearence was of winter the ground being evenly covered in all directions.

David Coryell and daughter, Mrs. James Pocklington, were called to Essex, Clinton county, Friday, by the severe illness of his daughter, Mrs. John Houseman. They returned Monday, leaving her improving slowly.

The entertainment given by the L. C. S., at the home of Mrs. A. J. Sutton, on Friday evening, was one of the best ever given by the society. The attendance was very large, more than the house could accommodate, comfortably. The program was a grand success in every respect. The whistling solos by Miss Ramsdell were rendered with a hearty encore. Misses Bailey and Elliot captivated their listeners with their fine violin selections. Miss Grayson furnished one of her vocal selections in her usual pleasing manner; Miss Moore in her recitations presented a superior talent for the profession. Her manner of impersonation and articulation was very noticeable and received the best of comment by those who had the pleasure of hearing her. The committee desire to return their heartfelt thanks to those who assisted, and for the grand success of the evening's entertainment.

A severe hail storm passed over this section Friday, July 3d. Corn was badly injured, the leaves being all torn into strings. All crops suffered more or less. Wheat was shelled out some, but might have been worse. Cherries were beaten from the trees in large numbers, those that remained giving evidence through their bruises of the pelting they received. During the storm lightning struck the barn on Patrick Noon's place, in south-east Manchester, and it was consumed with all its contents, including a large quantity of both old and new hay.

I have used only one bottle and I can say I feel like a new man. I make this voluntary statement that others may know of the Balm.—J. W. Mathewson, (Lawyer),

BY ORDER OF COMMITTEE.

We are indebted to the author, Prof. Melville M. Bigelow for a copy of his late work entitled "Elements of the Law of Torts." It has just been adopted as a text-book in the Law School of the University of Cambridge, England This, we believe, is the first American law book which has been introduced into an English University. The Law Times, London, in a notice of the new edition, says: "It is designed for the use of students, and we can quite understand the popularity which it has achieved. It is concise, clear, and topical, scientific in its arrangement, and accurate in its phraseology. As a text-book on specific torts and the meaning of the legal term, we know of no superior, and can thoroughly recommend it to students." It has also been adopted as a text-book or recommended for study in many of the Law Schools of the United States, and has had a wide sale among the profession.

GOOD FORTUNE OF A LAND BROKER.

In Feb. 1889 I commenced to use Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup and Plasters for inflammatory rheumatism from which I had suffered for three years. My joints were swollen so that I could hardly walk, but three bottles of the Syrup, and the Plasters applied to my limbs, have cured me. C. R. Nicholson, Manson, Iowa.

A SURPRISE PARTY.

July 4th occurred one of the pleasantest surprise parties that it is the good fortune for anyone to attend. The party was held at the pleasant and hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Schreder. July 4th being the 43d anniversary of their marriage, their children planned to give them a surprise. Invitations were accordingly sent out to between sixty and seventy friends.

It is said if "you want a secret kept you must keep it yourself and not take anyone into confidence;" but these many friends proved true and not a lisp or suspicion reached the ears or eyes of Mr. or Mrs. Schreder.

They were invited to spend the day at Mr. P. Farley's. Fortunately they went quite early in the day, little suspecting that as soon as they left their home it would be taken possession of by their absent children. (Mrs. Schreder prudently thought of locking her part of the house, but her daughter-in-law told her it was not necessary, as she was not well and would remain at home all day.)

The children soon arrived and the house was a scene of activity, as the doors connecting rooms were thrown open and the work of preparing and decorating tables for refreshments went busily forward. At the hour designated—four o'clock—all things were in readiness for the guests, who promptly began to arrive until about sixty were present. Anxiety began to be manifested for the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Schreder, but it was of short duration, as they soon put in an appearance.

As they approached the house Mr. Schreder carelessly said: "There is a buggy at our house; there are two, there are three,—why, there's a lot of them!" Mrs. Schreder answered, "Pa, I guess we are sold."

If she guessed it before, she knew it when she went in. She said: "Why didn't you let me know you were coming and we would have been at home?"

Such surprise as was depicted upon their faces as one and another shook hands and spoke words of friendly greeting; but the climax was reached when they found Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Arner, from Ridgeway, and Mr. and Mrs. Gus Gillespie, from Mason. John Schreder had met these friends at the station and kept them secreted at his home, not letting even his brothers or sisters know of the expected presence of Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie. Nothing was lacking to complete the joy of the occasion except the presence of their daughter, Mrs. Anna Goodrich, and her husband. They regretted their inability to be present, but sent a beautiful mantel clock as a substantial token of their love.

After greetings were over the guests were invited to pass to the dining rooms—one in Mrs. Schreder's part of the house, the other their son Grant's—where as delicious refreshments as Mrs. Schreder could have prepared were served by the daughters, daughters-in-law and granddaughters, the daughters serving coffee and the pretty young lasses waiting upon the guests.

After refreshments Mr. and Mrs. Schreder were invited to go into the parlor where Mrs. F. C. Rector, in behalf of the friends and absent daughter, presented them with some useful articles of silver and the clock. Rev. Wm. Babbitt commended them to God in prayer. Their hearts were too full for more than a simple "Thank you," but the happy tears coursing down their cheeks told that the presents were accepted in the spirit in which they were given.

Mr. and Mrs. Schreder are pioneers, as they commenced life together when the country was new, with little except love for each other, good health and indomitable courage. They have lived to see the unbroken forest become beautiful fertile fields, yielding a good competence for life's eventide, the old house give place to a new one, and their children grown to manhood and womanhood and all married and living near them, except Mrs. Goodrich of Chicago.

Mr. Schreder says: "We had six children and they have brought us six more, so we now have twelve children and fourteen grandchildren."

God has blessed this family in a special manner, as in all these forty years death has not been permitted to call one of the loved ones away.

May many years of happiness still be theirs, is the wish of their many friends. F. D. R.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 9, 1891.

The new Chief of the Weather Bureau started out splendidly for a green hand. Let him persevere in well doing.

The Iowa Democracy have renominated Gov. Boies and they are going into the fall campaign with a determination to win.

If cheaper sugar is a good thing why would'nt cheaper clothing be an equally good thing? Respectfully referred to Major McKinley.

If taking the tax off sugar lowers the price of sugar to the consumer, why not take the tax from other necessaries of life and lower their prices also?

The workingman who has had his wages raised since the McKinley law passed, and as a result of that law, would be a good subject for a dime museum.

Michigan is now on the list of the States having an Australian ballot law, and it is one of the best reform laws that has been enacted by any of the States.

The University graduated 620 students at the last Commencement. This is the largest number "floated out upon life's river" by any American college in a single year.

The lines are rapidly forming for the great contest in Buckeyedom this fall. It will be a royal battle in any event, a contest of national importance and far reaching consequences.

The contest for the Speakership is warming up. Mills, McMillan, Crisp and Springer are the leading candidates, although a new combination is said to be forming to push Holman for Speaker and Col. Morrison for President.

The last legislature might have done better, that is true; and it might have done far worse. When compared with its two predecessors of '87 and '89, its superiority is so marked that fair minded men find but little to criticise in its work.

The Chicago Times offers this suggestion: If it be true that Tom Reed is to general the forces of Napoleon McKinley in Ohio this fall he ought without fail to run over to Belgium before he returns home and study the field of Waterloo critically.

The new "reform" mayor of Chicago starts out finely. He has invented the wonderful theory that an ordinance requiring the saloons to close at mid-night is fully observed if the proprietor continues serving drinks all night to those persons who may remain inside after the doors are closed and locked.

In the death of Ex-Senator Joseph E. McDonald Indiana has lost one of her most honored citizens and the Democracy one of its strongest leaders. He was a politician of the old school, honest and incorruptible, always fighting for the rights of the people and against the encroachments of wealth and monopoly.

The appointment of Prof. Harrington, of Ann Arbor, as Chief of the Weather Bureau is one eminently fit to be made. As the successor of Prof. Jas. C. Watson in the chair of astronomy he has gained a national reputation. His appointment will be a serious loss to the University but a great gain to the weather service.

The University of Michigan at the last Commencement graduated 620 students. May each one of them take to heart the good advice given them by Mr. Bayard in his address on "Disinterestedness in Public Life." To know is well, and education is a good thing. To do, and to choose to do the highest, is a greater thing. An intelligent appreciation of the duty of the individual to the public, and a manly determination to perform it, will make the young men of to-day the wise fathers of the republic to-morrow.—Toledo Bee.

COMPARING PRICES.

A Protection Organ on Prices in 1854 and 1890—The Little Tin Cup—A Piece of Cheap Ignorance—What Has Brought Down Prices—Steam Transportation and Labor-Saving Machinery—McKinley and "Cheapness" Again.

An Iowa protectionist paper prints a list of prices "taken from an ancient book kept in Boonesborough during the year 1854," and compares with it a corresponding list of prices in 1890. The prices in the list for 1890 are of course much lower than in the list for 1854; and the protectionist organ hastens to conclude that "when the prudent housewife compares the two sets of figures she will feel that she is willing to live under republican regime and pay five cents for a tin cup that in 1854 cost four times as much." The performance of this organ is a fair sample of the cheap and ignorant arguments put forth in defense of protection by men who know absolutely nothing about the changes in industrial conditions affecting prices since 1854; or if they are aware of those changes they ignore them and pretend that protection is the force which has reduced prices.

This republican editor takes a tin cup as a specimen of the reductions which protection has caused. But the tin plates of which tin cups are made, are produced in Wales. How could our protective tariff bring down the price of tin plates? The truth is that the development of the industry in Wales has caused the cheapening of all the tinware in this country. The causes leading to these developments are pointed out by David A. Wells in his "Recent Economic Changes." The first cause was the cheapening of tin consequent upon opening of mines in Australia and on the "straits" of Malacca. The second cause was the improvements in the manufacture of iron and, owing to the invention of the Bessemer steel process, the substitution of steel plates in place of charcoal and puddled iron plates. The principle cause, however, is the great improvement in the process of tinning the steel sheets, a modern tin plate mill turning out every twenty-four hours more than double the product of the old-fashioned mills, without any increase in expenditure for motive power or labor.

Besides these changes in the method of production, a still greater change has come in the method of distribution. Railroads and iron steamships have revolutionized prices. There were almost no railroad communications between Iowa and the east in 1854, as compared with the great lines of rapid transportation to-day. Mr. Edward Atkinson shows that freight charge between Chicago and New York in 1865 was 8.45 cents per ton per mile and 0.68 of a cent in 1885. How this cheapening of railroad freights is still going on may be seen from the fact that the average rate on all classes of freight on all the railroads of the United States in 1888 was 1.236 cents per ton per mile, and already in 1887 this had fallen to a trifle above one cent.

Another enormous factor in cheapening the commodities consumed by our people to-day is the great reduction of ocean freights caused by the use of steel and of triple-expansion engines in making ocean steamers. This reduction can be estimated from the fact that the freight charge between Liverpool and New York is now less than one-tenth of what it was in 1860. This lowering of freights by land and water has increased the foreign demand for the products of our farmers, and has thus tended to check the downward tendency of prices of these products.

The price of flour is given in these lists as $4.84½ a hundred in 1854 and $3.34 in 1890. The cheapening of flour even is claimed for protection; but if the western farmers believed this the protectionists would have a hard time convincing them that protection is a good thing for them. The only way in which protection can possibly cheapen flour is by driving our foreign customers to other markets by reason of our high duties on their products. But, as a matter of fact, the cheapening of flour has not been due so much to tariffs as to the invention of labor-saving machinery. The grain drill for planting and the self-binder for harvesting wheat has diminished the labor of the farmer to a very low point. On producing the crop of 1887 in Dakota it was found that the year's labor produced 5,500 bushels of wheat per man.

Since the war the roller mill process of grinding flour has been introduced into this country from Hungary; and now one laborer can in one year turn into flour the 5,500 bushels of wheat of the Dakota man. Thus the labor of two men produces 1,100 barrels of flour in a year, allowing five bushels of wheat to the barrel. In this way, as David A. Wells points out, American flour from the fields of Dakota and the mills of Minneapolis is sold in European markets at rates which are determinative of the prices which Russian peasants, Egyptian "fellahs" and Indian "ryots" can obtain in the same markets for similar grain grown by them on equally good soil, and with from fifteen to twenty cents per day wages for their labor.

The cheapening of commodities in the United States under protection is not a thing peculiar to this country. The same thing has taken place in England without a tariff to quite as marked an extent as in the United States with its high tariff. Protectionists never weary of telling us how the first plate glass made in this country at New Albany, Ind., in 1878, cost $2.50 a foot, and that now the price is from 75 to 90 cents a foot; but they overlook the fact that the price of English and Belgian plate glass has gone down to less than 33 cents a foot. And the parrots go on jabbering that protection lowers prices.

In ways like this the protectionists ignore the operation of perfectly natural causes and explain all the cheapening of commodities by calling in the great miracle-worker, protection. Thus it is hoped to lead the people of a state, which has the slightest possible interest in protection, to believe that their prosperity depends upon that system. Hardly one person in a hundred in a state like Iowa has any direct interest in maintaining a protective tariff; hence the attempt there to make the people believe that protection lowers the price of commodities. If this is the effect of the tariff, what, pray, will be the effect of McKinley's increased duties on corn, wheat, potatoes, hay, barley, etc.? Moreover, if his high duties were intended to lower prices, why did he go up and down the land last fall trying to convince the people that cheapness is a bad thing; that cheap and nasty go together?

THE SUGAR BOUNTY.

It Will Cost More Than McKinley Thought—The Treasury Department Enlarging the Estimates—Unjust Favoritism of Bounties and Protective Tariffs.

It was estimated by Maj. McKinley last year when he was in the tariff making business, that the sugar bounty would cost the country about $7,000,000 a year. As the bounty was given for fifteen years the total sum thus voted away would be $105,000,000, but it is already evident that this bounty is going to cost the country vastly more than McKinley's estimate.

The treasury department has estimated, upon the basis of the production of sugar in 1890, that $9,000,000 will be called for for bounties—about $8,000,000 for cane sugar, $300,000 for beet sugar and sorghum sugar and $875,000 for maple sugar. The great bulk of the expenditure for cane sugar will go to the Louisiana planters, who produce 400,000,000 pounds per year, against only about 15,000,000 pounds in Texas and 5,000,000 pounds in Florida. There are 746 cane sugar producing institutions in Louisiana, 20 in Texas and one in Florida. Sorghum is produced at six institutions in Kansas and beet sugar at one institution in Nebraska and two in California. Another factory is building in California and one in Utah and one in Iowa. The maple sugar producers, who are largely in Vermont, are estimated at between 10,000, and 15,000, and their production at 50,000,000 pounds.

The estimates made cover only the present production and make no allowance for the stimulus of the big bounty. The bounty itself is not all of the expense, for it was necessary to add $165,000 to the appropriation of the internal revenue bureau for deputy collectors and other officials and $36,000 for the payment of inspectors' salaries and expenses, and to authorize six additional clerks in the commissioner's office.

It is reported already that an unusually large crop of sugar cane will be planted in Louisiana this year in order to get the McKinley bounty. It may be expected that within a few years the sum required to meet the bounty will be very much larger.

As the sum increases the people will see more and more clearly the folly and injustice of taking away millions from the taxpayers and giving it over to sugar producers. Why should one industry be favored in this way at the expense of all other industries. This is the question which will force itself upon the minds of the people. To the protectionist mind, warped as it is by economic heresy, the bounty may appear a very reasonable way to assist an industry which is not able to stand on its own legs; but the plain, common-sense, unperverted mind of the country will reject this conclusion in toto. The plain working people of the land, the farmers, the mechanics, will conclude rather that an industry which of itself does not yield a profitable return can only be rendered profitable at the expense of these industries. Whether this extra profit be guaranteed by a protective duty, whether it be seized by a trust or combination to maintain high prices, or whether it be voted direct from the treasury in the form of a bounty, the people will see that the result is the same in the long run—the toiling masses are assessed to guarantee profits to the few. Their instinctive love of fair play will inevitably demand that all industries be put upon an equal footing—an open field for all, and favors for none.

If under these conditions sugar planters are compelled to take up other employments, the country will be a gainer, and not a loser; for we shall still sweeten our tea and coffee, and do it more cheaply than ever before. If the few hundred window-glass makers have to shut up shop the people would lose nothing. We should still have glass in our windows and have it at nearly half price. The destruction of an industry is not always an evil to be feared; it may, indeed, be a good thing. The farmer who abandons an unproductive field to take in a more fertile one gains by the change; and if one kind of crop does not pay he very sensibly adopts another which has money in it.

It is false to assert that any given industry is a necessity to a country. Commodities are the only things necessary, and it is indifferent who makes these. Not the production of commodities, but the possession and enjoyment of them are the main considerations. Bounties and protective duties can give us nothing which we could not have gotten by simpler and cheaper methods.

McKinley's Drawback.

McKinley has put his foot in it again. He recently spoke in Worcester, Mass., and tried to say something which would quiet the strong demand in New England for free raw materials. In order to do this he attempted to show that the manufacturers already have practically free raw materials. "A private citizen," he said, "can buy his raw material abroad, pay a tax on it (so the duty is a tax) at the custom house, manufacture it in his factory and the government will refund 99 per cent. to the manufactured material."

McKinley ought to explain why he gives the manufacturers greater advantages when making goods for the foreign markets than when making them for our own people.

However, the free raw material clause of the tariff law is largely a deception, since the drawback can only be collected from the government in cases where the materials used can easily be identified and measured. The tin plates used in making oil cans can easily be identified and measured; and so the Standard oil trust collects a half million dollars a year from the government in drawbacks. Why should not home consumers be favored as much as those in foreign lands?

"THE NORTHERN KING."

NELSON, THE KING OF THE TURF, WILL START AT DETROIT.

His Marvelous Flight of Speed—He is Being Specially Prepared for the Effort of His Life—Will the Record of Maud S. be Beaten?

In the few years that Detroit turf affairs have been directed by the present management, admirers of the trotting horse have learned to look with confidence to the "Blue Ribbon Meeting" as a model of all that a harness racing carnival should be.

Ceaseless vigilence to detect and punish fraud early warned the pirates of the track not to attempt operations at the Hamtramck course, and happily racing there has long been free from even the suspicion of jobbery. Drivers fully know that honest contest is the watchword of the judges and they therefore drive to win. The richest prizes of the year await victors in every class, and spectators see the fastest and most famous horses on the turf arrayed against each other.

Novel and sensational features are never wanting to maintain interest at the highest pitch. Each year some fresh attraction is added to the Blue Ribbon programme. Last year it was Sunol 2:10¼, the queen of all four-year-old trotters. Now we learn that Nelson, 2:10¼, the fastest stallion that the world has seen will start to beat his record at the coming meeting of July 20–25.

A world of interest has always centred round the king of the turf, from the old days when Ethan Allen's 2:28 was the champion stallion record, down to the present time. And when, as in Nelson's case, the fastest horse in the world is among the handsomest, this interest is heightened and doubled. At the American Horse Show in Chicago last November, after Nelson had lowered the record and wrested the honors from Axtell, thousands swung their hats and cheered at sight of "The Northern King." Brilliant and stirring will be the scene at Hamtramck a few weeks hence, as President Campau gives the word and Nelson speeds away with stately stride in the flight against time, the eager eyes of thousands strained to catch his every stroke.

Can the Maine horse beat the record?

Few among those who have followed the career of the stallion from colthood and who ought to know him best, are at all in doubt about his ability to lower the present stallion record of 2:10¼, whenever he strikes a fast track and is himself in good condition. The question about which there is greater difference of opinion among turf critics is as to whether the record of Maud S. can withstand the onslaughts of "The Northern King." There can no longer be a doubt that the horse is possessed of a flight of speed away below anything indicated by his record. Late in October of last year, on a track where no fast records were ever made, Nelson, twice within one week trotted a half mile at a rate of speed which if maintained would eclipse the 2:08¼ of Maud S. by nearly three seconds. This season he is going like a wild horse, faster than ever before in the work which is to prepare him for the supreme effort of his life at Detroit. All that the trainer's art can do is being done to bring him to the post in the pink of perfect condition. How fast he may trot the specially prepared track with all conditions favorable no one can attempt to foretell. But when the watches stop on Nelson at Detroit, a storm of applause may not unlikely follow the suspense to tell that a new trotting record has been made.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years it was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

King of Medicines

Scrofulous Humor—A Cure "Almost Miraculous."

"When I was 14 years of age I had a severe attack of rheumatism, and after I recovered had to go on crutches. A year later, scrofula, in the form of white swellings, appeared on various parts of my body, and for 11 years I was an invalid, being confined to my bed years. In that time ten or eleven sores appeared and broke, causing me great pain and suffering. I feared I never should get well.

"Early in 1886 I went to Chicago to visit a sister, but was confined to my bed most of the time I was there. In July I read a book, 'A Day with a Circus,' in which were statements of cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was so impressed with the success of this medicine that I decided to try it. To my great gratification the sores soon decreased, and I began to feel better and in a short time I was up and out of doors. I continued to take Hood's Sarsaparilla for about a year, when, having used six bottles, I had become so fully released from the disease that I went to work for the Flint & Walling Mfg. Co., and since then on account of sickness. I believe the disease is expelled from my system, I always feel well, am in good spirits and have a good appetite. I am now 27 years of age and can walk as well as any one, except that one limb is a little shorter than the other, owing to the loss of bone, and the sores formerly on my right leg. To my friends my recovery seems almost miraculous, and I think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the king of medicines." WILLIAM A. LEHR, 9 N. Railroad St., Kendallville, Ind.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

THE SINGLE TAX AND THE FARMER.

R. G. Brown, of Memphis, has an admirable article on "How the Single Tax Would Affect the Farmer" in a recent number of the St. Louis Journal of Agriculture. Explaining the difference between land and land values and the value of improvements, Mr. Brown shows how taxing land value alone would relieve the farmer from the burdens that now oppress him. To the supposed question of the farmer as to whether the single tax would not destroy the value of his farm, Mr. Brown says it would destroy the land value but would not affect the improvement value nor the usefulness of the farm. He takes the following case to illustrate this point:

John Smith owns a farm of 60 acres, which, under the present system of taxation he can sell for $40 per acre. Adjoining this farm is a plot of woodland equally fertile as Smith's farm, owned by Old Money-bags, the speculator, who paid $1.50 for it some 20 years ago, and who now holds it for $15 an acre, owing to the fact that Smith, Jones and Robinson have cleared the land around his woods, made roads, built a schoolhouse, put up a church, and in short, "made the wilderness blossom like the rose." Is it not as clear as two and two make four, that the difference in value between Smith's 60 acre farm and Old Money-bags' 60 acre woodland is the value of Smith's improvements? Is it not evident that $900 of Smith's farm is land value, and $1,500 is improvement value?

Where Smith lives money is worth 6 per cent., and if the tax rate there were 6 per cent. every year, the land value of his farm would be wiped out, since no one would give him any thing for a $900 land-value upon which the purchaser would have to pay $54 taxes every year. Smith's farm would, therefore, sell for only $1,500. But is he hurt by this? Not at all! Old Money-bags' sixty acres of woodland would be taxed $54 every year, and as it would be bringing in nothing, the owner would let it be sold for taxes, and Smith could get it for a nominal sum and on undertaking to pay the taxes in the future. Then he could spend his $1,500 in improving it and would be in exactly the same condition as he was before he sold his old farm.

He shows how a personal property tax bears heavier on the farmers than on any other class of the community. He says:

In my county (Shelby county, Tenn.), although we have $1,000 worth of personalty exempt by law, which entirely covers the amount of personal property owned by the average small farmer, the personalty in the country amounts to 27 per cent. of the total valuation, while in the city, Memphis, which is the distributing point for a territory of a one-hundred mile radius, the personalty is only 16 per cent. of the valuation.

Mr. Brown estimates that a general farmer has on the average about $1,000 of personalty and $1,500 of improvements for $900 of land value. He then shows how a 6 per cent. tax on this $900 of land value, or $54 a year, would be far less than the taxes he now pays, which, including the enhanced pieces of goods occasioned by the tariff, would be at the lowest possible extent at least $70 a year. He points out how the cities, New York for instance, where land has sold for $300 a square foot, or $13,000,000 an acre, would pay the bulk of taxation under the single tax. The benefit of exempting improvements in stimulating industry, and the evil of indirect taxation, taxes on goods, on production, on houses, tariff duties, which increase prices, stop consumption and lessen the demand for the farmers' products, are clearly shown. Mr. Brown asks the readers of the Agriculturist to look into this question, and as secretary of the Memphis Single tax association he offers to supply literature to anyone who asks for it.

A Detroit Paper Sees the Light.

A local assembly of the Knights of Labor in Boston has passed a set of resolutions which demand:

That a bill be drafted by the state legislature providing that the state government seize, under the rights of eminent domain, all vacant lands held for speculative purposes, adjacent to all steam or electric surface and elevated railroads, at present erected or to be erected; that such lands be cut up into houselots and deeded to, at sum not to exceed $200 per lot, workingmen, under a mortgage by the state; that 2½ per cent. be charged as interest; that the land be appraised by a state appraiser; that each holder of a deed be advanced enough money to build a house of reasonable dimensions thereon; that when the sum advanced by the state be refunded a clear conveyance of the title should be made to the holder of the title.

The Detroit Evening Journal thinks that people will laugh at this proposition, and that perhaps that is the best way to treat it. Nevertheless it goes on to say:

To the thoughtful mind there is something suggestive in this resolution by the Boston Knights. Why is it that in this young country, with its natural resources hardly touched, wages are so low that men find it hard to get homes of their own? Is it because our land is taken up in advance of actual need? The speculator always goes ahead of enterprise, and the land takes on not only a fair rental value, but it takes on prospective value, and every increase in productive power simply gives the landowner a chance to shove up the price of his land. Wages, therefore, do not rise materially; for the value of the land tends to increase faster than the production of wealth, and the landowner gets what ought to go to labor as wages. Horace Greeley saw all this more or less clearly forty or fifty years ago, and he advocated a law limiting the area of land which one man might own. It would have been well had his warning been heeded; for even now workingmen are looking greedily at the land which belongs to those who don't work. The Astors, drawing $23,000 daily as ground rents, brush by the man who works for $2 per day and who can't save enough to buy a foot of ground. The few owners of the land of New York city receive $100,000,000 annually for its use, or, at least that is about the rental value, while only 4 per cent. of the inhabitants live in houses of their own. Such a state of affairs can not but lead to propositions of confiscation.

Tax Commissioner Coleman on Taxation.

Recently, before a New York legislative committee, Tax Commissioner Coleman gave it as his opinion that the effect of the taxation of personal property in this state had been to drive out of this city, in one year, over $320,000,000 in capital represented in corporations alone. At least 15 to 20 per cent. of that amount represented the capital of companies which had been doing business in this city. They had found it more profitable, however, to wind up their affairs in New York and reorganize in New Jersey. Excessive taxation had driven them across the river. Although organized in New Jersey, many of these firms did business only in New York city. This information was the result of special investigation on the part of Mr. Coleman. Among those firms the witness named the Thurber-Whyland Co., Park & Tilford, the Celluloid Co., the United States Book Concern, Devoe & Co. and the Hoffman Cafe. The Hoffman cafe was capitalized at $1,250,000 in New Jersey. This fact greatly surprised the senators. These concerns all received the same protection from the fire and police departments as those incorporated in this state. They contributed in return practically nothing to the government of New York. They depend upon New Jersey for nothing except exemption. It was true that they were obliged to pay some money to the state of New Jersey. The amounts, however, were comparatively small. New Jersey did not compel her corporations to make returns of their property. Much of the other testimony given by the commissioner has been printed in the Standard heretofore; but he made one new point against the personal property tax. He said that it was sapping at the roots of home life in this city, "for," said he, "the rates of personal taxation are so obnoxious that people instead of building fine residences engage a suite of rooms in some hotel and live at some club. A few years ago hotels were but seven stories high, now they are seventeen stories high." The commissioner said that the virtual abolition of the tax on personal property would be of the greatest benefit to the city of New York.

New York Times on the Land Tax.

The great advantage of a tax upon land is that it can be equitably adjusted and economically collected, that there can be no escape or evasion, and that it will bear upon a value that is absolutely proportioned to the profitableness of its occupation and use. In other words, it will be proportioned to the wealth that is employed in the use of the land, which, directly and indirectly considered, is the entire wealth of the community. The tax will necessarily be paid out of the surplus of production. When the tax is levied anywhere between the land and the wealth accumulated from its use, it falls upon the active agencies of production, and interferes with their activity and fruitfulness. This induces inequality of burdens and efforts to escape, and whenever the pressure is greater in one place than another, there will be a shifting of ground as inevitably as air or water moves in the direction of the least resistance. In our efforts at tax reform we are driven more and more back to the land, or to what is called real property, as the true basis of public revenues.

A Church That Wants no Exemption.

Rev A. P. McDiarmid, pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist church, in Brooklyn, addressed a meeting of Baptist ministers the other day on the subject of church taxes. He argued that the Baptist church should not countenance the exemption of state taxes which is now in vogue. "The church, in accepting an exemption from taxes," said he, receives that which is wrested from the tax-payers. It is a gift from the state and a tendency toward the state maintenance of the church. A public grant each year from the state would be less objectionable, for then every thing would be done openly, and the tax-payers would know just how much the different churches were receiving. A religion that can not pay its just taxes should be booted out of the world."

TAXES on the value of land not only do not check production as do most other taxes, but they tend to increase production, by destroying speculative rent. How speculative rent checks production may be seen not only in the valuable land withheld from us, but in the paroxysms of industrial depression which, originating in the speculative advance in land values, propagate themselves over the whole civilized world, everywhere paralyzing industry, and causing more waste and probably more suffering than would a general war.—Progress and Poverty.

THE San Francisco Star tells of six lots in that city which were wanted in order to open a street. A commission appraised them at $1,845, but the owner wanted $4,000, and said he valued them at $6,000 and didn't want to let them go even at that price. An examination of the assessor's books showed that they were assessed at only $45 each. The Star says this case ought to make single taxers of all thinking persons who examine into it; and we think so, too.

WERE all taxes placed upon land values, irrespective of improvements, the scheme of taxation would be so simple and clear, and public attention would be so directed to it, that the valuation of taxation could and would be made with the same certainty that a real estate agent can determine the price a seller can get for a lot.—Progress and Poverty.

THE FIRST DISCIPLES.

LESSON II, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JULY 12.

Text of the Lesson, John i, 29-42—Commit Verses, 40-42—Golden Text, John i, 29—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

29. "The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him."

The following verses indicate that the events of the two days included in this lesson took place after the baptism of Jesus.

"Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the world."

The Father had testified by an audible voice from heaven, and by the descent of the Holy Spirit in the form of a dove, that this was His beloved Son, and now John points Him out as the one to whom he came to bear witness.

30. "This is He of whom I said, After me cometh a man who is preferred before me, for He was before me."

This He had said when they sent to ask Him if he was the Christ or Elijah or the prophet (verses 19-27). When a little later word was brought to John that all men were following Jesus, he only reiterated his testimony exalting Jesus. Every believer should make it his and her constant aim to magnify Christ under all circumstances.

31. "And I knew Him not."

Inasmuch as this gospel was written to prove that He is the Son of God (xx, 31), it may be that it was as Son of God he knew Him not till after the baptism.

"But that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water."

Gabriel had spoken of Him as one to sit on David's throne and reign over the house of Jacob, and Zacharias (the father of John) sang of Him as the one who should perform the oath which God had sworn to Abraham (Luke i, 32, 33, 72, 73). As the son of David, son of Abraham, to restore the kingdom to Israel (Matt. i, 1; Acts i, 6), John must have known Him, and baptized the people, pointing them to Israel's coming Messiah. But as Son of God and Saviour of the World bearing away the sin of the world this was a new revelation, and not till long after Pentecost did even the apostles receive the truth that Jesus was a Saviour to any but Jews.

32. "And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon Him."

For special service and on special occasions the Spirit had in Old Testament days come upon people, but here is one on whom He can abide. Not as a tongue of fire does He come to Jesus, but as a pure and gentle dove.

33. "And I knew Him not; but He that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me."

As witnesses unto Christ we must be much away from the world and go forth in the power of God, and as sent by Him to make ready a people for His Second Coming, now so near at hand.

"Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending and remaining on Him, the same is He which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost."

From the time when the Spirit of God moved upon the chaos of Gen. i, 2, and even before that (Ps. xxxiii, 6), all that has been done on earth that has been truly good or great has been by the Holy Spirit.

34. "And I saw and bare record that this is the Son of God."

The word "son" in Scripture does not nesessarily signify inferiority or difference of nature, and sometimes not that at all, but rather likeness or sameness of nature or quality, the closest possible resemblance.

35. "Again the next day after John stood and two of his disciples."

John continues his work quietly and faithfully. When we are wholly subject to God He will clearly show us when to go and when to stay, when to speak and when to stop.

36. "And looking upon Jesus as He walked, He saith, Behold the Lamb of God."

The statement concerning His taking away the sin of the world is here omitted, so that this would point him out more definitely to Israelites as the antitype of their burnt offerings and paschal lamb.

37. "And the two disciples heard Him speak, and they followed Jesus."

See the benefit of personal work; the statement in verse 29 was probably a general declaration to the multitude, but here is a private and personal statement to two individuals, and the result is that both follow Jesus. Observe how it came about, and do thou likewise.

38. "Then Jesus turned and saw them following, and saith unto them, What seek ye?"

How quietly and ordinarily it all comes about, the calling of these first two disciples! What a small and unlikely beginning!

"They said unto Him, Rabbi (which is to say, being interpreted, Master), where dwellest thou?"

Perhaps hardly knowing what they did seek, or what to say, but longing for something they had not yet obtained, they ask where He dwells. He might have answered, "I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble and to revive the heart of the contrite one (Isa. lvii, 15).

39. "He saith unto them, Come and see. They came and saw where He dwelt, and abode with Him that day, for it was about the tenth hour."

"Him that cometh to Me I will in no wise cast out" (John vi, 37). However unworthily or however feebly they come, if any one will only come they will be welcomed.

40. "One of the two which heard John speak, and followed him, was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother."

The other, we suppose, was John himself, inasmuch as he, being the writer of this Gospel, would not be likely to mention his own name; and it is only in the latter part of the Gospel that he speaks of himself as "That disciple whom Jesus loved."

41. "He first findeth his own brother Simon."

It may be that he thought of God's question to Cain, "Where is thy brother?" but whether or not, he did well to seek first his own brother. The first question for the sinner is, "Where art thou?" and when found and saved the next should be, "Where is thy brother?" (Gen. iii, 9; iv, 9).

"We have found the Messiah, which is, being interpreted, the Christ."

The word "Messiah" is only found four times in our English Bible; here and in chapter iv, 25, in the New Testament, and in Dan. ix, 25, 26, in the Old Testament.

42. "And he brought him to Jesus."

The very thing to do, and the only thing to do, with our friends and our enemies, our joys and our sorrows, and all that concerns us.

HOW THE OLD BIRD CARRIED SAIL AT BRITTON ON THE FOURTH.

A Rousing Old-Fashioned Celebration—Plenty of Music, Fine Games, a Big Crowd, a Splendid Speech and a Gay Day Generally.

Britton was booming on the Fourth. The saying has passed into a proverb that Britton never does anything by halves and it was verified anew last Saturday. The rain of the previous evening had nicely laid the dust and a brisk breeze from the west kept the atmosphere cool and comfortable during the entire day. A better day for celebrating one rarely sees. In fact it was an equally good day for cutting wheat, which doubtless kept many farmers in their harvest fields. As early as eight o'clock teams began pouring into the village from all points of the compass and by ten o'clock a large crowd had gathered. The train from the West brought a good train load from Tecumseh, including the old City Band and Co. C, while the train from the East brought a large installment from Dundee. The morning trains on the Wabash also brought liberal additions to swell the crowd.

Britton was fully prepared to welcome her guests and was rigged out in holiday attire. The village was very nicely decorated with flags, evergreens, and bunting. Every business place in town was ornamented, either outside or inside, with the national colors. Lenardson's front window was a show in itself, being fixed up in a very artistic manner. The pole in John Britton's yard had a large national flag floating from the top, which seemed to look down upon the rest of the village with fatherly kindness and bid the multitude of visitors a hearty welcome. Many private residences were handsomely decorated also. The Exelby House porch was elaborately trimmed with bunting and the dining room was neatly fitted up in a similar manner. The yard in front of the House was occupied with ice cream and candy stands and a floor for a bowery dance. The many games of chance and devices for gathering in the nickels, which abound at all large gatherings, were numerously represented and all seemed to do a thriving business during the day. The lower floor of the G. A. R. hall building was used for a ten-cent dance, and the Exelby Hall was devoted to the same purpose. The bowery dance floor in front of the Exelby House was also well patronized. At least half the stores in town were fitted up with lunch counters, affording abundant provisions to feed the multitude.

Upon the arrival of the Tecumseh train the City Band and Co. C were met at the depot by the Britton Band and escorted to Chicago street. Here each band gave a fine selection and Co. C gave a short drill, when they all marched to the field west of the school house and broke ranks. Between that time and one o'clock the crowd busied themselves in procuring dinner, as the formal program, games, etc., were postponed until afternoon. The two hours devoted to dinner were well spent and afforded none too long a time to feed the entire gathering.

Promptly at one o'clock the procession was formed by Richard Wiggins, who acted as Marshal of the Day, consisting of Co. C, the Tecumseh City Band and citizens in carriages and on foot, and proceeded to Hoagland's grove, Southwest of the village, where the literary exercises were held. A suitable platform and seats had been provided to accommodate the audience and it proved to be a beautiful place for the exercises. The grove was clean and the massive trees afforded an abundance of shade.

Dr. E. E. Hendershot, who officiated as President of the Day, called the assemblage to order and announced the program as follows:

First came a serenade, entitled "Armonia," by the Tecumseh Band, which was followed by an eloquent prayer from Rev. E. W. Borden.

The choir, composed of local singers, then sang "America" with fine effect. All present who could sing joined in the grand old tune, making the forest ring.

Miss Martha Ackley read the Declaration of Independence. It was finely rendered and displayed elocutionary talents of a high order.

The Band then played the "Sagamore March."

Attorney L. H. Salsbury, of Adrian, then followed with an eloquent address which held the undivided attention of the audience for nearly an hour. As it was entirely extempore, we are compelled to forego the pleasure of printing it. It was well worthy of publication, however, and was received by the audience with the highest commendation.

The Band played the "Dead Shot March," which closed the exercises at the grove, and the crowd then wended their way back to the village.

During these exercises, between one and three o'clock, a large gathering was collected in the field west of the School House to witness the match game of base ball between the Britton and Dundee clubs. It was hotly contested on both sides and resulted in a victory for Britton by a score of 6 to 10. Ousterhout and Biggs acted as battery for Britton; Ostrander and Palmer were Dundee's battery. Umpire, Elias Oliver; Scorer, W. J. Helm.

At three o'clock the games were called on Chicago street and for two hours the crowd was surging back and forth between the railroad and the corner near the School House, witnessing and enjoying the sport.

First on the carpet came the hurdle race. Three contestants entered—Wiggins, Larrabee and Lee. They were quite evenly matched but Wiggins took the first prize and Larrabee second.

At this point the ragamuffin brigade made their appearance. Where they came from is a mystery, but they got there from some quarter, and they "got there" after their arrival, too. There were three rigs in all. One contained "Haverley's Minstrels," numbering six burnt cork artists. The second rig was truck No. 2 of the Blakville fire brigade. The third was "Haines" Organ." It is needless to say that this unique procession, as it marched about town, was the center of attraction. Everything else came to a standstill until the ragamuffins disappeared as mysteriously as they came.

The foot race was then called. In this there were nine entries. Some trouble was had in getting started but the word "go" was finally given and off they went. Balcom won first money and Larrabee second.

The egg race followed and it is no exaggeration to say that it took the whole bakery. Such a scrambling after eggs you never did see. Eight contestants entered the race. Wm. Larrabee came out first and Ben Snyder second.

During the intervals between the races the greased pig was caught and the greased pole was "clumb," but we failed to learn the name of the lucky man who caught the pig, or of the stick-to-it-ive mortal who "clumb" the pole.

At the close of the games the Tecumseh Band took their station on the street and entertained the crowd for an hour or so with some of their best selections.

Many visitors then left for their homes, but a large gathering still remained to witness the fireworks in the evening. After supper Co. C had a fine dress parade on the depot grounds and the Band favored the crowd with plenty of music, and they both brought forth the plaudits of the spectators.

With the approach of darkness the display of fireworks began and for over an hour there was a continuous shower of rockets, Roman candles and other elaborate pieces. When the Mackinaw train left with the Tecumseh contingent on board the fireworks were still in progress, and even after their close the festivities were kept up in the dancing halls until the approach of Sunday morning put a final end to the celebration.

THE AFTERMATH.

Although full of Fourth of July enthusiasm the crowd was a very orderly one.

Not one accident occurred to mar the pleasures of the day.

The number present at ten o'clock in the forenoon would reach at least five hundred. At three o'clock in the afternoon the number present would approach nearer five thousand. It was certainly the largest crowd Britton ever saw.

The Britton Band did finely and proved themselves good entertainers as well as players.

Co. C was entitled to and received a long credit mark for their patriotism.

The Tecumseh Band never played better. Their music was excellent, both in quantity and quality.

The Exelby House entertained a tremendous crowd at both dinner and supper, but the House was fully equal to the emergency.

That dish of ice cream at John Britton's, about six o'clock, hit the spot exactly.

Ezra Sink did a rushing business in tin types. He can consider himself a lucky man that his camera passed through the siege intact.

Salsbury gave a splendid address, as he always does, and no one was disappointed.

Deputy H. W. Stevens was on hand, but he had nothing to do, for it was such an orderly crowd.

Rich Wiggins made a model marshal, but where was Charley DuBois?

Doctor Hendershot presided with as much ease and dighity as though he were simply prescribing quinine to a la grippe patient.

Joe Hunter took charge of the races in apple-pie order. We forgive Joe for what we said about him last year.

Will Clark ate more ice cream than any other two men in Britton.

Geo. Oliver left his reaper in the field to come up and hear Salsbury's speech.

We never saw John Britton appear happier, and that is saying a good deal.

A number of the Tecumseh Bi Club took the trip down and back on their wheels.

The display of bunting on Thos. Lee's residence caught the eye of the Tecumseh crowd on the train.

Frank DePuy was disgusted at the high tariff on watermelons and went home.

Alex. Easlick repented and vowed to print Britton in red ink on the next edition of his calendar.

The Britton girls all fell in love with the Tecumseh drum major and he has been supremely happy ever since.

The brilliant display of fireworks was a fitting termination of the day's festivities.

THE ALUMNI REUNION.

HISTORY, CLASS OF '83, BY IDA TAYLOR.

"Uneasy lie the heads of all who rule,
But most of all his, whose kingdom is a school."

During the spring cleaning our class history, prepared for the Alumni of 1890, shared the fate of some old letters and was destroyed. When the President wrote, I still had Mrs. Baird's letter. Miss Waldron kindly consenting to write one, also, and each telling her story so much better than I had done, I find my office now to be somewhat of a sinecure.

The following is from Mrs. Baird:

DAYTON, OHIO, June 17, 1890.

MY DEAR IDA:—You ask me for a history; now don't begin by telling me that it is seven years since we graduated; seven years since that eventful night on which we gave our Tecumseh friends more good advice than they had been able to gather from years of experience, and when you and I played our instrumental duet with our knees shaking so that it jarred the whole piano! It seems but yesterday so well do I remember it. Certainly we were a remarkable class—three brave girls who had stood the school storms of the years during which our sterner class mates had dropped out one by one.

But this is not the story of the years intervening since then. Let me see. Have I done anything of any consequence? The first year after leaving school my mother kindly planned for me a thorough course in house-work and sewing, but not being entirely to my taste, I secretly applied for a school near by and, as I was successful in my application, I found myself a school teacher without more ado, and I spent the next seven months in Raisin, near Holloway.

This was a varied experience; how to arrange thirty classes for one day's hearing became harder than some of the problems in Algebra, which had brought the tears two years before; how to get ahead of the big boys when they would tie the bell rope out of reach and do other aggravating things; how to find sufficient patience when after explaining the difference between P and Q to the little fellows every day for a week to discover the following Monday morning that they didn't know which was which. But taken as a whole it was a very pleasant experience and one that I would not have missed for a great deal.

In February of the following year I was married to C. E. Baird, a Civil Engineer of the M. & O. Road, just then completed, and that spring we came to Dayton, Ohio, where we have been ever since and hope to make it our home for a long time to come. It is a lovely place and delightful people for friends are in it. The years spent here have been uneventful but very enjoyable. We have been housekeeping just a year in such a pleasant home of our own, which we built last spring."

Mrs. Baird closed with greetings to her old class mates and members of the Alumni, regretted that she could not be present at the '90 meeting, and promised to be here if possible for the '91. With her housekeeping, her church and society work, her music (she is a member of the Philharmonic club), and painting, an occasional trip with her husband, we may infer that her time is busily ond happily spent.

Miss Waldron writes: "I would gladly have distinguished myself in some way, wisely or not, in order to have made my history interesting, but fate decreed that it should not be so. After I graduated, having said I should never, never, no never teach school, I made myself useful to my mother for about a year and a half. Visions of an easier employment, of the delightful dignity of being a school-ma'am, and of a little pocket money began to float thro' my brain. The more they floated, the more anxious I became until I thought there was nothing so much to be desired as to find a school-board willing to overlook my inexperience. Such a board lived in the village of Weston, twelve miles south of Adrian. Here, during a term of four months, I learned to build fires with green four-foot wood and no kindling, to walk a quarter of a mile up the stickiest clay hill to be found, to study human nature by means of a varied collection of about forty subjects. This experience enabled me to obtain a school nearer home and I taught a year at Newberg; after which there came a year in the East Branch, Tecumseh, and two years in Raisin, District No. 5. The year just closing has been spent at the State Normal, where I have nearly completed a course in Kindergarten instruction.

"As I look into the future before me, my path, which I trust is a straight one, is bordered with numberless little heads, sunny, dark, or brown, straight haired or curly; and there are ten times as many little fingers busy with clay, with paper, or keeping time to the little Kindergarten game or song. As I aim to make of my charges 'not ideal children, but children with high ideals,' I expect the years will fly swiftly and happily by and I shall awake some morning and find myself a white haired woman of seventy-five. Then I shall retire to live upon my honors and my friends and relatives."

As for my own life spent in alternate teaching and housekeeping, never going beyond a radius of fifty miles from Tecumseh in all the years since graduating—why, there is nothing to tell about it.

Whether any one of us has realized all of which she dreamed and wrote eight years ago, I'm not prepared to say; but I am sure each year has found us more content to do what we could in the sphere in which we are placed; has found us more humble learners, more earnest workers.

"'A commonplace life,' we say, and we sigh,
Yet why should we sigh as we say?
The commonplace sun in the commonplace sky
Makes up the common place day.
The moon and the stars are commonplace things,
And the flower that blooms and the bird that sing;
But dark were the world and sad our lot
If the flowers failed and the sun shone not:
And God, who studies each separate soul,
Out of commonplace lives makes his beautiful whole."

R. H. Hendershot, the Drummer Boy of the Rappahannock, the most noted drummer of the age, gave an exhibition of his wonderful skill with the sticks, at Greenwood Garden, before a large audience which, notwithstanding the unpleasant weather, had assembled to hear him. He played on the solid silver drum with the gold tipped stick, presented to him by Horace Greeley, and it is no wonder audiences are delighted to hear him. Such drumming has never been heard in Maine. One of his selections last evening was an imitation of a battle, and old soldiers who have passed through battles in all their fearful reality know how real are his imitations.—Argus, Portland, Maine.

Married, on the evening of the 29th ult., at the home of the bride's parents on Adrian street, Mr. Elmer G. Crego of Adrian and Miss Kitty L. Morrison of Tecumseh. The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Joslin, Mr. Vern Crego, cousin of the groom, officiating as grooms-man and Miss Mae Morrison, sister to the bride, as bridesmaid. The spacious parlors of the family homestead were beautifully decorated and a large number of friends favored the occasion with their presence. The bridal gifts were numerous and many of them elegant and costly. The groom is a favorite in Adrian society, and the bride one of Tecumseh's most beautiful and accomplished young ladies. About midnight the happy couple started for their home in Adrian amid a shower of rice and old shoes.

The Year Book of Albion College for 1890-91 has just been issued. It is a neat volume of 184 pages. It consists of two parts. One hundred and twenty-eight pages are devoted to the work and record of the college. The last fifty-six pages are given to discussions on several very important educational questions. These discussions will be found to be of great value to teachers and an aid to all who are interested in the educational problems of the day. We are sure they will be read by the many thousands to whom the book will, on application, be sent. The college prints 8,000 copies to supply the demand. Their issue last year amounted to 7,000, which was exhausted some time before this new volume made its appearance.

Astronomy is a beautiful science. We are told that if a railway was to run from the earth to the nearest fixed star, and the fare was one penny for every hundred miles, and if you were to take a mass of gold to the ticket-office equal to twice the national debt—or $3,800,000,000—it would not be sufficient to pay for a ticket to the nearest fixed star aforesaid. If this be the case, it matters very l ttle to us whether such a railway is ever constructed. It would be discouraging to go to the ticket-office with a mass of gold equal to $3,800,000,000, and be informed that the fare was $5,678,032,000. If the ticket agent wouldn't trust until we got back, we'd be compelled to forego the trip.—Norristown Herald.

A bowl of good pea soup is as satisfying as a hearty dinner on a cold day. To make a gallon of it, wash a pint of peas and soak them over night; then boil in five pints of water, gently simmeri g three hours or so, until thoroughly soft. With a potato-masher rub the soup through a colander or wire sieve. A pound of beef or ham bone may be boiled with the peas. The soup may be seasoned in various ways—with onions, cloves, pepper, etc.

An ear for music is generally accompanied with an eye for the beautiful, a tongue for the true, and a mouth for all the good things of this world.

Arthur H. Temple and wife of Bay City spent the Fourth in Tecumseh. He returned on Monday, but his wife will remain a few weeks to complete her visit.

We understand that our old friend, Fred. Landgraf, has left Adrian and gone to Toledo to live. But we presume he will visit Tecumseh occasionally as of yore.

Miss Retta Kempton of Addison is gaining quite a reputation as a teacher of elocution. Her class will give an entertainment in that village next Saturday evening.

Major Hendershot is an old Tecumseh boy and many of our older residents will remember him well. We should all turn out and give him a rousing benefit to-morrow evening.

Prof. E. A. and R. A. Haight & Son of St. Louis, Mo., and Alton, Ill., are guests of their cousin, Mrs. Gus Slayton. They came across the country on their wheels and report having had a good time.

Tecumseh was pretty well scattered on the Fourth. Some followed the Kid band to Manchester, many went to the lakes, some were visiting friends abroad, but the largest crowd took in the celebration at Britton.

The Co. C. boys have got their dander up. As the train schedule is now arranged they will have to foot it from here to Britton in order to make connections to the encampment. What the outcome will be remains to be seen.

Laverne Ide and wife, and Edgar Ide and wife, of Detoit, were the guests of Wm. Ide's family over the Fourth. They are both enjoying life in their city home and prospering, and they enjoy a visit in the country occasionally.

The east side of Lowry's double store is not yet ready to occupy, but will be next week. Entire new shelving and fixtures are being put in, which will make the room a very fine one for exhibiting a large stock of crockery to the best advantage.

Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Farrah are spending a few weeks at the old home in Raisin. They still hold their position as teachers in the school at Michigamme, of which Prof. Farrah is the Principal. He has been engaged for another year, which will be his fifth year in that school.

Prof. and Mrs. Kellogg and Miss Ella Jackson started Wednesday morning on a pleasure trip. Intending first to visit Niagara Falls, from there to Toronto to attend the Teachers' National Association, and from there they go to Boston. They expect to be gone about two weeks.

Miss Ella Jackson has resigned her place as organist of the Baptist Church. She has filled the position most satisfactorily for the past four years and feels the need of a respite from work. Miss Rhoda Benedict will take the position, and will fill it creditably, as she is a skillful musician.

The old City Band has taken on a new lease of life and usefulness. It has reorganized, taken in some new members, appointed Will Ingersoll leader and director and will soon be at the front again. It had thirteen men at Britton on the Fourth and the band rarely played better than it did on that day.

Miss Mabel Jenkins gave a reception to a large number of friends on Tuesday evening last. Nearly, if not quite, one hundred guests paid their respects during the evening and taken altogether is was probably the most brilliant company of young people that has assembled in Tecumseh this season. The members of her music class at Adrian college were present and guests were present also from Brooklyn and Charlotte, Mich.

Geo. Kies of Elkhart was in town Monday.

J. W. Wightman went to Detroit Wednesday to engage quarters for Beers Post, G. A. R. of Tecumseh. During the National Encampment he intends to secure quarters for 100 men.

C. A. Sharp is now at work for the Page Wire Fence company at Adrian and is also putting in his leisure time giving private lessons in short-hand. He has a fine class started and like Oliver Twist is calling for more.

The Christian Union has been changed in form and put on a new dress. It was an excellent paper before, but it is a model family paper now. There is no publication that can compare with it in both secular and religious news.

John Hialey is having a good run of work now. He is putting up a large number of the popular road wagons, which find a ready sale. Two of these are shipped to Adrian to-day, and he sells large numbers of them abroad. He is now behind on his orders.

Eugene Mann, the editor and owner of Town Topics, published in New York city, is making a few weeks visit among old friends at Adrian, and spending a portion of his time at the lakes. We had the pleasure of a little chat with him the other day in Adrian.

Albert Vedder went to Detroit last week expecting to stay several days, but he felt worse and came home. Upon returning he suffered a relapse, continued to grow worse and was taken away Tuesday. The funeral is to be held this afternoon at one o'clock.

According to his usual custom, S. W. Anderson indulged in a display of fireworks at his own residence on the evening of the Fourth. He had a fine assortment last Saturday evening, which was almost as good as going away to celebrate.

Major C. M. Woodward of this village, who has for several years been surgeon of the First Reg. M. S. T. has been promoted to the post of Surgeon General of the Michigan brigade. This appointment is a merited recognition of his faithful service in the past and he will doubtless reflect the same honor on the new position that he did on the old. We congratulate the Doctor on his good fortune.

Robert Plank, who has been in feeble health for some time, departed this life on Friday last at the residence of his son-in-law, Daniel Hanford. He was one of Tecumseh's oldest settlers and had been a member of the Odd Fellows for many years. The funeral services were held at the M. E. church on Sunday afternoon. A proper tribute to his memory will appear hereafter.

Dr. B. F. Steinhoff met with quite a serious mishap on Sunday. He and Geo. Merritt were taking a spin on their wheels west of town and they met a team. One turned out on one side and the other on the opposite side. The Doctor ran into the ditch and upset, falling flat upon his side and the wheel dropping upon his leg, bruising it very badly. He is confined to the house at present but will soon be about again.

While Prof. Kellogg was exercising himself on his wheel on the afternoon of the Fourth, he met a horse and carriage containing a man and his wife and a little four weeks old babe. The horse being afraid of Mr. K's wheel he dismounted until the man drove by, then remounted his wheel and started on his journey. Hearing a noise behind him he turned his head back and behold the old horse was running away, but it was a short race as the horse was reined up to the picket fence over by Sutton's hill, throwing the man and his wife clean over the fence into the field, lodging the little babe on top of the picket fence. All were more frightened than hurt and were glad it was no worse. It was a close call however.

IOWA REPUBLICANS.

They Hold Their State Convention at Cedar Rapids,

Hiram C. Wheeler Nominated for Governor—List of Other Candidates for State Officers and New State Central Committee.

CHOSEN TO LEAD.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., July 2.—The republican state convention was called to order at 11 a. m. Wednesday by State Chairman Mack, in the Grand opera house. In the audience were many persons of state and national reputation. Senator Allison, Congressmen Henderson, Perkins, Flick, Dolliver and Hull; ex-Gov. Gear, ex-Gov. Larrabee, and Solicitor of the Treasury Hepburn occupied seats on the platform, and Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, the distinguished representative of the Non-partisan Women's Christian Temperance union, headed a delegation of enthusiastic lady republicans who occupied a private box. After prayer, Chairman Mack announced the selection of Attorney General John Y. Stone as temporary chairman. In assuming the chair, Mr. Stone made a speech of nearly an hour's duration. He was frequently interrupted by applause, but the culminating point was reached when the name of James G. Blaine was uttered. Mr. Stone called attention to the crisis with which the republican party was confronted.

At the conclusion of the address a recess was taken and the committees went into session. That upon permanent organization fixed upon ex-Congressman Gear, of Burlington, out of a host of candidates, for permanent chairman.

Immediately after the reconvening of the convention Permanent Chairman Gear was introduced and made a brief speech, predicting party success on the tariff and local issues. The nomination of state officers was then declared in order, and the convention declared that no nominating speeches should be permitted.

H. C. Wheeler, of Odebolt; B. F. Clayton, of Pottawatomie, and Daniel Kerr, of Grundy Center, were placed in nomination. Attorney General Stone was nominated by the Cherokee delegation. Before half the counties had been called Wheeler had a majority and there were yells of "Make it unanimous," but the roll was called to the end with the result: Wheeler, 775; Clayton, 210; Kerr, 48; Stone 9. Wheeler was then nominated by acclamation.

The first ballot for lieutenant governor resulted: Poyneer, 458; Van Houton, 476; Rumple, 117; scattering 7. There being no choice, the chairman ordered a roll call for the second ballot. The early gain made by Van Houten caused considerable cheering for that gentleman, and the tide that had set in for him carried him in a winner on this (the second) ballot. At close of roll call the counties began changing to Van Houten. A motion was made by a Tama county delegate to make the nomination of Van Houten unanimous. Rumple seconded the motion, which was carried with loud cheers. The first formal ballot on supreme judges resulted as follows: Beck, 204; Blake, 127; Weaver, 315; Blanchard, 161; McClain, 261. A second ballot increased Weaver's lead, and on the third he had 500 votes. A few counties changed, and he had won. Frank T. Campbell for railroad commissioner and Henry Sabin for superintendent of public instruction were nominated by acclamation without opposition and the ticket was complete.

A synopsis of the platform is as follows:

It indorses the McKinley tariff law in the warmest terms, and particularly commends the reciprocity provision and its interpretation and observation by President Harrison and Secretary of State Blaine. Liberal pensions to disabled soldiers and their widows are urged. The financial question is briefly disposed of by the indorsement of the present silver law, of which Mr. Conger, of Iowa, has the credit of being the author. The Harrison administration is indorsed and the large appropriations of the last congress are defended as having been necessary for the fulfillment of the obligations, welfare and development of the country. The prohibition plank of the platform of last year is reaffirmed, and the democratic party and democratic local officials are arraigned for conspiring with the law-breaking element for the violation and non-observance of the prohibitory law. The course of Iowa's senators and representatives in the national congress is commended, and particular eulogy is extended to Senator Allison for his liberal and patriotic course as chairman of the senate committee on appropriations. A liberal appropriation for the state exhibit at the World's Columbian exposition is urged. The rest of the platform is given up to denunciation of Gov. Boies and the democratic party.

The new state central committee which is to conduct the coming campaign is composed as follows:

First congressional district, C. M. Junkin, of Jefferson county; Second district, J. M. Kemble, of Muscatine county; Third, W. H. Norris, of Delaware county; Fourth, J. E. Blythe, of Cerro Gordo county; Fifth, J. G. Brown, of Marshall county; Sixth, J. W. Kendall, of Monroe county; Seventh, W. S. H. Matthews, of Polk county; Eighth, J. T. Wall, of Ringold county; Ninth, L. P. Zevers, of Guthrie county; Tenth, M. K. Whelan, of Emmett county; Eleventh, E. E. Mack, of Buena Vista county.

The Cotton Product.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Secretary Hester's monthly cotton report shows that the movement into sight during June was 103,438 bales, exceeding all records for that month. The total amount of the cotton crop market for the ten months from September to June inclusive was 8,493,313 bales.

Three Generations Divorced.

GAINESVILLE, Tex., July 6.—In the Trebal circuit court of the Chickasaw nation at Tishomingo, Smith Paul, aged 80 years, his son, Sam Paul, aged 45, and the latter's son, John Paul, all prominent Chickasaw Indians, were each granted a divorce from his wife.

THE FLAG OF OUR COUNTRY.

Brief History of the Changes That Have Been Made in Our National Emblem.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—By order of the war department another star will be added to the United States flag to-day, making forty-four in all. They are arranged in six rows, the first and last containing eight and the four others containing seven stars, as represented in the accompanying illustration.

Every star in the new flag represents a new phase of progress in the nation's history. On June 14, 1777—one hundred and fourteen years ago—the American congress passed a resolution that "the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation." In 1795 two stripes were added to commemorate the entry of Vermont and Kentucky as states into the union, and two new stars were also placed with those in the union. The stars were then arranged in three parallel rows.

No further change was made until 1818, although in the meantime Tennessee (1796), Ohio (1802), Louisiana (1812), Indiana (1816) and Mississippi (1817) had been admitted. April 4, 1818, a bill was signed by President Monroe reducing the number of stripes to thirteen and adopting new stars for the states admitted since 1795.

The number of stars has been increased as follows on the Fourth of July of the following years:

1819, one star for Illinois; 1820, two stars, one for Alabama and one for Maine; 1822, one star for Missouri; 1836, one star for Arkansas; 1837, one star for Michigan; 1845, one star for Florida; 1840, one star for Texas; 1847, one star for Iowa; 1848, one star for Wisconsin; 1851, one star for California; 1858, one star for Minnesota; 1859, one star for Oregon; 1861, one star for Kansas; 1863, one star for West Virginia; 1865, one star for Nevada; 1867, one star for Nebraska; 1877, one star for Colorado; 1890, five stars for North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Washington and Idaho; 1891, one star for Wyoming—making forty-four in all.

MICHIGAN.

The Legislature Adjourns—Its Closing Acts.

LANSING, Mich., July 3.—The Michigan legislature of 1890-1 adjourned Thursday afternoon after a six months' session. The Rhines' voting machine bill was defeated in the house by a vote of 47 to 21 and the Wayne county circuit court commission bill was passed, the senate concurring. The conference committee on the special eastern asylum appropriation recommended $25,000, and both houses adopted the report. The general appropriation bill passed both houses at $1,270,000, as against $1,596,000 two years ago. The bill incorporating equal suffrage associations also passed both houses. President Strong, of the senate, was presented with a costly gold-headed cane, and Speaker Wachtel, of the house, an elegant tea service. The committee to investigate bribery charges against Senators Wilcox and Weiss reported exonerating both. The governor has signed the world's fair bill.

BARDSLEY SENTENCED.

He Must Spend Fifteen Years in Prison and Pay a Heavy Fine.

PHILADELPHIA, July 3.—John Bardsley, ex-city treasurer of Philadelphia, was brought into court at 10 a. m. Thursday before Judge Willson to have sentence passed upon him for the confessed crimes of loaning, speculating with and receiving interest on public funds intrusted to his care as the chief judiciary officer of the municipality. The sentence of the court was that he undergo fifteen years solitary confinement in the Eastern penitentiary and to pay a fine equaling the sum to which he pleaded guilty of misapplying.

Judge Wilson was seen after passing sentence on Bardsley relative to the amount of the fine, and said that it would be about $237,530.

A Lover's Crime.

OTTUMWA, Ia., July 3.—A horrible tragedy was enacted at John Warner's farm, 11 miles east of Keosauqua, late Wednesday night. Albert Zernipsky, an 18-year-old youth, has been in the employ of Mr. Warner and has been paying attention to the 19-year-old daughter, Miss Ritta Warner. She refused his suit, and he shot her, not fatally, and then shot and killed her brother James, who came to her rescue. The murderer fled.

DEATH ON THE RAIL.

Two Terrible Accidents Cause the Loss of Many Lives.

A Fast Freight Crashes Into a Passenger Train at Ravenna, O.—Excursionists Go Through a Trestle in West Virginia.

A FATAL BLUNDER.

RAVENNA, O., July 4.—The most appalling railroad horror of the year occurred here at 3 a. m. Friday. Twenty persons were killed and many of their bodies burned to a crisp, while between thirty and forty others were badly injured. The list of dead, so far as known, is:

Thomas Venhill, Corning, N. Y.; David Rellan, Corning, N. Y.; William Kane, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Albert Gantrap, Corning, N. Y.; Henry Gilday, Corning, N. Y.; John Griffin, Boston; Thomas Colville; nurse girl; T. Huff, F. Burns, J. Demeen, J. Coyle, A. Hardin, Lewis Kimball, W. Newcomb, D. Ryan, D. Cassidy, P. Nolan.

All but three of these were burned to a crisp. The residences of the killed, where not given, are Corning, N. Y.

The fast express (No. 8) on the New York, Lake Erie & Western railroad, bound for New York, while standing at the depot waiting for orders was crashed into from the rear by a freight train. A day coach on the rear of the train was completely telescoped and two sleepers forward took fire and were burned up. Many of the victims were so badly burned that they are almost unrecognizable. The freight train that telescoped the express is the dressed meat express from Chicago and was running about 30 miles an hour when it struck the passenger train. The accident was due to carelessness in leaving a switch open.

It is asserted by Superintendent Mattison, who is investigating the disaster, that the accident was due to the carelessness of the passenger crew. The train was in charge of Conductor Boynton, and his son was rear flagman. The latter, instead of going back, leaned against the rear coach until the freight was in sight and then it was too late to stop it.

THROUGH A TRESTLE.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 6.—At least thirteen persons were killed, four fatally injured and nearly sixty injured in a less degree in an accident on the Kanawka & Michigan railroad at 8 o'clock Saturday morning, at a point 8 miles west of here. The passenger train for Columbus left here with two carloads of excursionists, among them members of the Order of United American Mechanics, who were going to Poca. The wreck occurred on a high trestle. The sleepers on the structure had caught fire during the night and burned so that the rails spread under the train. The engine and baggage and mail cars passed over safely, but the two coaches were thrown from the track. After running some 40 feet on the sleepers the forward car toppled to the left, the rear one to the right. The forward car turned completely over, landing right side up. The other fell 20 feet, turning upside down, and one set of trucks fell upon it, crushing the car to splinters. Following is a list of those who were killed in the wreck:

Amos Coulter, Red house, W. Va.; Jasper Dougherty, New Martinsville, W. Va.; Col. W. E. Fife, Buffalo, W. Va.; Charles Huffman, Blue Creek, W. Va.; Ella O'Leary, Charleston, W. Va.; Orville Robinson, Midway, W. Va.; L. C. Rose, Blue Creek, W. Va.; Polly Sullivan, Mason City, W. Va., worked in Charleston; Thomas Thornton, Middleport, O., conductor; Walter Welcher, Charleston, W. Va.; Mrs. Walter Welcher, Charleston, W. Va.; James White, Middleport, O.; T. N. Wilson, Gallipolis, O.

The forward car, which turned completely over, now rests right side up in a field some 10 or 15 feet beneath the level of the bridge. When the other car fell on the other side of the track many of the passengers were killed by the fall, but when the trucks crushed down on top of the car they smashed it to splinters and killed almost every person in its range. The top of the car was crushed beneath the weight of the heavy trucks and pressed down flat against the bottom of the car, literally squeezing the occupants to death.

Death of a Prominent Jurist.

KEOKUK, Ia., July 4.—Judge James M. Love, judge of the United States court for the southern district of Iowa, died at his home in this city at 7:30 o'clock Thursday evening.

Judge Love was born in Virginia March 4, 1819. He was the captain of a company in the Third Ohio regiment in the Mexican war. In 1850 he came to Keokuk and February 21, 1856, was appointed judge of the United States district court by President Buchanan. He was re-appointed by Lincoln and was on the bench when he would have been placed on the retired list.

Captured Eight Bad Indians.

HOLBROOK, A. T., July 3.—A messenger who has just arrived from Col. Corbin reports that he arrested the eight Indians whom he went after for destroying landmarks and threatening the destruction of life. The messenger states that on account of the presence of the four companies of military the Indians did not make any attempt to fight.

VANDALIA, Ill., July 4.—A syndicate has purchased a large tract of brush land lying in Louden township, in the northeast part of this county, and will begin clearing it with a view to going into the fruit-raising business on a large scale. Between 75 and 100 negro families will be colonized in the township and will engage in the work of clearing.

MERIT WINS.

The papers contain frequent notices of rich, pretty and educated girls eloping with negroes, tramps and coachmen. The well-known specialist, Dr. Franklin Miles, says all such girls are more or less hysterical and nervous, very impulsive, unbalanced; usually subject to headache, neuralgia, sleeplessness, immoderate crying or laughing. These show a weak nervous system for which there is no remedy equal to Restorative Nervine. Trial bottles and a fine book, containing many marvellous cures, free at Baker & Hall's, who also sell and guarantee Dr. Miles' celebrated New Heart Cure, the finest of heart tonics. Cures fluttering, short breath, etc.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent;
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. MY ROMANCE.

Who the Ghost at the Old Home Really Was.

Into every life comes a great sorrow, sooner or later; and when I was twenty-two my parents died, almost at the same time.

In the first agony of my grief I closed my ancestral home, just as it was, dismissing the old servants and intrusting the keys to a valued friend of my late father. My bereavement gave me a gloomy turn of mind, and study was my only solace. Through all my college days and preparation for the law, I made few friends and never visited the dear old home, hallowed by so many tender recollections.

Five years at the bar, without any home ties or outside pleasures, began to prey upon my health; and in the summer of 188— my physician peremptorily ordered me to rest.

Most of my classmates were married, but, as yet, I had never seen a woman I cared to spend an hour with since my fair mother died.

Realizing that my physician's advice was such as I ought to follow, my thoughts turned to the long-deserted house in Farleigh, but two days' journey from Boston.

I arrived at dusk on a warm summer evening, and, taking my gripsack in hand, sought my old friend for the key of the silent house.

He greeted me with delight, and urged me to remain with his family. Years had silvered his hair, but had not cooled his regard for my father's only child.

"I don't like it at all, Frank," he said, as I took my departure. "You will have the hypo's in that house. It hasn't been aired, is damp; really, you must not go."

His earnestness was so impressive that I asked:

"Why? You must have some more potent reason, Mr. Lee."

With evident embarrassment, he answered:

"I hear, unpleasant as it may be to you, the house is said to be haunted; lights are often seen, gleaming from the windows, and—"

"Nonsense! I don't believe in ghosts. There is plenty of fuel in the shed—or was—I have matches. Heat will conquer the dampness, and a revolver will dispel all the ghosts I believe in. Come over in the morning and you will find me all right. Good night."

I stood at the gate and looked up at the great, rambling structure. All was dark and still, not even a breath of wind stirred the leaves of the large honeysuckle that climbed at its own sweet will over one wing. The air was heavy with its rich perfume.

The key turned rustily in the lock and the door creaked on its hinges. I stood for a moment like a guilty creature ere I entered, and almost doubted the propriety of spending a night in a dwelling that had not been occupied for nine years.

The air was close but not as damp and musty as I anticipated, and lighting a small lantern, with which I had provided myself, I went in.

I examined the hanging-lamp in the hall, but found it destitute of oil, as I expected.

One in the parlor was full and, to my surprise, wick nor oil seemed candied. Its light illuminated the room and lent a homelike glow to its appointments.

I sought the library and soon had a glowing fire in the grate. Little shivers ran down my back and I began to feel uncanny fears which I resolutely shook off.

I busied myself airing some bedding by the fire and improvising me a couch on the lounge. Although a sultry summer's night, the fire was not uncomfortable.

Reclining in the very easy chair where I used to nestle as a child, with my feet on the tarnished brass fender and a cigar between my lips I tried to feel at home.

A slight noise in the room above aroused me, and I took my lantern and explored the chambers.

"Rats," I said, as I was about to descend, when I again heard it; this time I knew it was in the attic. I could hear footsteps, distinctly.

Secreting myself beneath the stairs I turned my lantern down and waited.

I am no coward, but it was no pleasant sensation to wait for those soft footfalls to reach the lower stair. The stairway was closed up in the old style with a door.

A hand was on the latch, I grasped my revolver. The door opened, softly and slowly, and I turned on the full light of my lantern at the same time pointing my pistol at—what?

"Stand or I fire," I cried in a voice that echoed through the long, dark hall.

A feminine shriek answered me, and a form crouched down in the stairway.

"What are you doing here?" I demanded, sternly.

"No harm, sir," returned a musical voice and the form rose, revealing a slight girl of some eighteen years with great startled eyes as soft and velvety as a fawn's, looking out from a delicate, wild-rose face framed in masses of golden hair.

"Explain yourself," I said, pointing at the traveling-bag she carried. "Are there any others?"

"No;" with a defiant gleam in those wonderful eyes.

"Come downstairs then and tell me how you come to be here."

She obeyed, and was soon quietly seated before my fire.

"You wonder, sir, how I came here in your house," questioningly. I bowed assent. "Very well, I will tell you. I am a poor working girl, and this summer I was out of employment. The temptations of the city are great to a poor girl like me, and I came out here in the country. No one would hire me." My eye sought her hands, so soft and white. "I never did do housework, but I could. I work in a printing office. Some one told me about this house, and I rambled through the grounds one day. It was all so cool and restful I longed to stay. I got into the house, and, while I wandered through the rooms, a terrible tempest came up.

"I had to stay, indeed I did, sir; and slept sweetly in a room in the upper story.

"It must have been my evil genius that prompted me to stay. I thought it could do you no harm, and me, oh! so much good to spend a few quiet months in this great empty house.

"I cook my food with a spirit-lamp, I have not taken anything, truly, sir; but I know it was very wrong. I keep a light burning all night, and people say the house is haunted. It is—by me. Then I only go out at dusk, and always in white. If I need groceries I start before daybreak and walk to A——, coming home after dark.

"But I will go at once, sir," nervously clasping and unclasping those tiny hands.

A great pity welled up in my heart for the childish creature. Were the spells of a woman beginning to cast their glamors over me, Frank Linwood, sober-minded lawyer that I was?

My father never turned a dog away from his door hungry and cold. Mine was not a charitable heart, but I knew the law of kindness.

"You must not go to-night," I said, and we kept our strange vigil through all the long summer night, for one of those sharp, fierce tempests that so often follow a sultry day was rising. Blinding flashes of lightning made the girl cover her eyes with her hands, and the heavy thunder shook the house.

A heavy clap of thunder and a sharp flash brought us both to our feet. Ellen Blaine, as she told me her name, began to sob with terror, and I soothed her like a child. The touch of her hand stirred my sluggish blood, and I felt the silky feel of her fine hair for hours after its silken braids brushed my cheek. My plans were quickly made.

"Have you no friend or elderly relative who can come here and stay with you? If so I will pay you a monthly sum to keep the house open and to put it in such order as would please my mother if she were alive."

"Do you mean it?" with a sharp look on the childish face, a suspicious look, I thought.

"Certainly; it is not proper you should stay here alone. I shall board at a friend's during my visit, but I would like to keep the house open while I stay."

A hot flush burned on her cheeks. I feared I had wounded her pride.

"You will do me a favor, Miss Blaine."

"You are very kind. I will stay if an old aunt of mine will come out to chaperone me," archly.

I wonder now that I did such a quixotic thing. I must have been fascinated by her beauty, and the influence of my surroundings made me softhearted.

I breakfasted at Mr. Lee's and bore his raillery very well when I told him I had leased the house to a middle-aged lady and her niece for the season.

In due time Mrs. and Miss Blaine took possession and neighbors began to call on them. It was very pleasant to have the house occupied. I was a frequent caller, and on one occasion surprised Ellen, or Nellie, as I learned to call her, seated at the piano.

"Do you play?" I asked in some surprise.

A brilliant movement, followed by a soft accompaniment and a bird-like song, was her response. She enjoyed my astonishment; music was my mother's passion. I almost disliked to have anyone use her instrument but conquered the feeling and sent to the city for a piano tuner. It was really a fine instrument and Nellie quite a performer, so I spent many evenings, with Mrs. Blaine nodding in her chair, listening to her simple songs or gay fantasies.

She was mistress of the violin and showed an almost childish joy when I brought one, that had been mine, from some hidden recess. I have heard many masters handle the bow but never one who could draw such touching and thrilling strains from the instrument. Mrs. Blaine's small eyes would open, for she spent the most of her time sleeping, when Nellie struck the first chords. There was something about the woman that always repelled me, and the way she looked at me from her half-closed eyes really made me nervous. She wore a wig of that peculiar faded, reddish brown which wig-wearing ladies so much affect, and her manners were rather coarse.

As deeply as I was in love with her niece, I recoiled from becoming connected with that lady by marriage.

The grounds at the rear of the house sloped down to a river, flowing broad and free, and I soon had a gay little boat for my use on long afternoons or sweet, still evenings. With Nellie opposite me, it was my delight to row for hours, or, resting on my oars in some shady cove, to idle the hours away feasting my eyes on that lovely face and gazing into the depths of those dark, bewildering eyes.

Although slightly hoydenish, Miss Nellie was always dressed in exquisite taste. Soft, flowing robes of white, or fluffy ruffled gowns as delicately pink as the heart of a rose. I vaguely wondered at the variety of costume which her slender means allowed her. Once I hinted as much to her. It was a cool, rainy evening for the season of the year, and I went over to the house to spend an hour or two.

It was seldom that I found Nellie alone at that hour, for the young people of Fairleigh had formed the pleasant habit of running in to see her at that hour for a little musicale or a game of cards.

She came to meet me, looking as fair as a dream in a shimmering robe of silver-gray silk. A bunch of some tiny, sweet-scented flowers nestled in her corsage, and her golden hair was confined in a ribbon of pale blue. Its silky meshes fell to her waist in waves of brightness.

Something in the hue of the dress and the fair odor of violets that clung to its folds reminded me of my mother.

My greeting was rather cool. Should I place this, perhaps low-born girl, in my honored mother's home as its mistress?

As if divining my thoughts, she took a seat at some distance from me, and taking up a book, asked softly:

"Shall I read to you? My father used to enjoy having me, and it has been the dream of my life to become a fine elocutionist. Papa was so fond of Tennyson; but oh! how I did dread reading Shakespeare to him."

Her father, then, was an educated man of refined tastes. I was glad to learn it. I requested her to make her own selection.

"I feel rather sober to-night and shall enjoy it," I added more kindly.

Her selection was "Morte d'Arthur;" and, as she read, every word fell clear and pure like the soft chime of silver bells.

A long silence fell on us as the last words of the poem fell from her lips; not broken until she arose and glided across the room with her peculiar, undulating motion, to adjust "auntie's" cap. Aunty, who, as usual, was asleep in her armchair; as she bent over her the coarseness of the elder lady's dress contrasted sharply with Nellie's silken robe.

She came back and sank down on a low divan near me.

I passed my hand over her bright head, the nearest approach to a lover's caress that I had ever made.

"Tell me, Nellie, how is it that you can wear such—toilets? This," feeling the stuff, "is like one my mother used to wear."

A passionate burst of tears was her answer. I could not check her.

"You know it is your mother's. I thought to show you how well such costly robes become me, a poor girl! I know you despise me; you always did. It is no use for me to try to please—you—I—wish—I had never—seen—you." Sob, sob, sob.

What could I do but dry those dark eyes with my own hands and silence her words with kisses, she was such a foolish child, because through petulance she disclosed a strong desire to please me.

Man's heart is wicked, deceitful, but desperately fond of adoration. Yet I did not speak of my love, some unseen power held me back.

I was shocked at her for wearing my dead mother's garments, so sacred to me.

I must have been in love or bereft of my senses, for I was seriously meditating offering my heart and hand to this girl of whom I knew positively nothing, when an unforeseen meeting prevented this lifelong mistake.

It always took me a long time to make up my mind to do anything of importance, but when I once decided I was quick to act.

One hazy evening I started to go over to see Nellie and decide my fate.

Mr. Lee had just returned from A—— with the startling news that the bank had been operated on by burglars and they had got off safely with their spoils.

The only store in Farleigh was broken into the previous night and some money besides many articles of value were taken.

I took my revolver in my pocket and was calculating the propriety of Nellie and her aunt's remaining in that house alone nights any longer, fool that I was!

I went across the fields intending to go into the ground by a little gateway, at the end of a path running up from the river. This path was now hidden by a tangle of bushes; and, as I approached, I saw a woman leaning on the gate. It was Nellie.

She saw me before I could speak.

"Slim Jim, is it you?" she asked.

"Yes," my voice was husky with emotion, the lie rose almost unconsciously to my lips.

I drew near to be certain it was my darling speaking, and she threw her soft arms round my neck, pressing warm kisses on my cheek.

"I heard you cracked the crib last night, and got away with the boodle, but I've been so worried all day for fear the nibs would get you."

I thanked God, in that brief moment, that I resembled Slim Jim as much in a foggy, moonless night as anyone else, and vaulted lightly over the gate.

"Tell me about yourself, my daisy." I said with an encouraging pat on her plump cheek, "for I can't stay only a moment."

"Can't! I'll hide you where no one can find you. Pop is here; he broke into a store the other night. I helped him. Where are the rest of the boys?"

"All safe. Ta! ta!" and I retreated at a breakneck speed. I heard her exclaim.

"I believe Jim's been drinking too much, or the cops are after him."

Now that I knew that Nellie Blaine belonged to a gang of burglars, I longed to arrest them, although dreading the publicity. If Slim Jim was expected, I would be there to receive him with a warrant.

At midnight the officers of the law, accompanied by myself, entered my house, and soon had Slim Jim and "Pop," who was no less a personage than Mrs. Blaine, in irons. That lady was a bald-headed, smooth-faced man of fifty, who had masqueraded in woman's attire all summer for my benefit.

Nellie, aroused by the uproar, came out on the landing of the first flight in her night-robes, looking like a little angel, but fighting like a young tigress.

"I could choke you, you dumb-headed old villian," was one of her most complimentary remarks to me. "I've made a nice fool of you, Sir Timbertoes, anyhow."

Her allusion to my feet cut me to the quick for I am sensitive about them. But I kept silent, feeling sure that her punishment would come by other hands than mine.

She and the pseudo Mrs. Blaine were handcuffed together and taken away. "Pop" swore furiously, while Nellie shook her fist at me.

"Of all the idiots I ever met," she cried out, "you are the biggest."

I rather thought so myself, and it was some time before I could think of the affair without confirming her final opinion of me.—Sarah P. E. Hawthorne, in Yankee Blade.

The New Weather Bureau.

Many of the alumni of the University of Michigan will remember, in connection with their college days at Ann Arbor, two men the mention of whose very names once caused cold chills to steal up and down spinal columns. They were Prof. Olney and Prof. Watson, both of whom have gone to their long home. The former was known among the students as "Toughy," on account of the consistency of his problems on "trig," while the latter was known as "Tubby," because of his rotund figure.

When Prof. Watson, who occupied the chair of astronomy in the university, passed away in 1879 he was succeeded by Prof. Mark W. Harrington, a graduate of the institution. And now Prof. Harrington has been selected by Secretary Rusk to take charge of the Weather Bureau, whereat there is great rejoicing in Ann Arbor.

Chicago is filled with alumni of the University of Michigan, and they now join heartily with their fellows all over the land in appealing to a graduate of their alma mater for a better article of weather than has been furnished by the Signal Service. When you take active charge of the bureau, Prof. Harrington, just lock up the cyclone drawer and throw away the key; leave the sunshine drawer wide open, and unlock the rain drawer of the bureau only when it is necessary for the welfare of the crops. "Tubby" Watson would do that were he in your place and any of the "boys" asked it of him. As his successor you should remember that, and give us an article of weather which will make your old fellow-students proud of you.—Chicago Post.

HUMAN INSTINCT.

So powerful is human instinct that some of its suggestions become embodied in social and household customs. The people know and feel that at the beginning of the spring season the system needs an alterative and a purifying tonic and stimulant. In all parts of [illegible] housewife to dose her brood with sassafras tea. Among the simple remedies that our ancestors employed this decoction has continued to hold its own. The demand for a spring alterative and tonic, however, is filled more efficaciously by S. S. S., which is itself as simple as nature's remedial medicine should be. It purifies the blood, cleanses and strengthens the system, and prepares the human machine to stand the wear and tear of the summer months.

MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

LANSING, Mich., June 30.—The senate yesterday passed the bill providing for a special tax of half a mill on each dollar of their capital stock upon all new corporations when they file articles of association with the secretary of state. The appropriation for maintaining the state weather service was defeated, as was also the house bill imposing a specific tax of 6 per cent. upon the Michigan earnings of car loaning companies and fast freight lines.

LANSING, Mich., July 1.—The Detroit charter bill, after hanging fire for several months, was finally killed in the senate yesterday. The general election bill was passed by a vote of 30 to 0, it being satisfactory to all parties.

LANSING, Mich., July 2.—Bills providing for the establishment of free employment bureaus in various sections of the state and creating the office of state food commissioner were killed in the senate yesterday. The new general election law, which had previously passed the house, was passed, also the general tax bill which embodies the California system of taxing mortgages and provides for a return to the bounty system of collecting delinquent taxes.

LANSING, Mich., July 3.—In the senate yesterday the committee to investigate bribery charges against Senators Wilcox and Weiss reported exonerating both It was agreed to allow the eastern insane asylum to use $25,000 of its surplus in building a new cottage for patients and in buying additional land. The general appropriation bill was passed at $1,270,000. The business of the senate having come to an end, President Strong was presented with a costly gold-headed cane.

HOUSE.

LANSING, Mich., June 30.—The house yesterday worked steadily in committee of the whole all day on the new general bill incorporating the California system of collecting mortgages. A message from the governor was received vetoing the bill requiring railroad companies to build cattle guards at all farm crossings and to also erect fences from said cattle guards to the right of way fences on either side of the track as well as for the crossing.

LANSING, Mich., July 1.—The general election bill passed the house yesterday. It is modeled after the Australian system so far as the ballot is concerned, while the secret booth system of the present Michigan law will be retained. The ballots will be prepared and printed by county commissioners of elections instead of by the secretary of state as at present. The house refused to agree to the senate amendments to the world's fair bill, and a conference committee was appointed. It was decided to finish all business, if possible, by 12 o'clock tonight, with final adjournment three days later. The senatorial redistricting bill was passed without amendment, and it was signed by the governor.

LANSING, Mich., July 2.—The general appropriation bill passed the house yesterday. It calls for $552,383 this year and $718,550 in 1892. The expenses of the legislature are placed at $140,000, about $10,000 less than last season. The general appropriation bill, together with all the special appropriations, brings the total state taxes for this year and next up to $2,830,601. The world's fair bill was also passed. The appropriation is fixed at $100,000, and six commissioners, two of whom shall be women, are provided for. The senate bill appropriating $15,000 for additional equipments at the mining school was agreed to. The report in the Doyle-Munthe bribery case was made. It pronounces that the bribery charges were totally unfounded, but censures Representative Munthe for accepting $50 from Ironwood to reimburse Mr. Doyle for assisting him during the session.

LANSING, Mich., July 3.—In the house yesterday the conference committee on the special eastern asylum appropriation recommended $25,000, and the report was adopted. The bill incorporating equal suffrage associations was passed. The Rhines voting machine bill was defeated by a vote of 47 to 21 and the Wayne county circuit court commission bill was passed. The soldiers' home investigating committee made a majority and minority report, the former mildly censuring and the latter exhonorating the management. The business of the house was then, after a session of 176 days, declared at an end. Speaker Wachtel was presented with a massive silver service.

TRAGEDY IN DES MOINES.

An Old Soldier Fatally Shot by a Local Desperado.

DES MOINES, Ia., July 2.—Frank Pierce, a notorious Des Moines ex-searcher, narrowly escaped lynching Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. He drove to the city cemetery to unload garbage. He was refused the use of the grounds by E. A. Wishart, who acted under instructions from the mayor. Pierce carried three revolvers, and after a war of words he began using them. Four shots entered Wishart's body and he fell mortally wounded. Before the officers arrived with Pierce at the city jail a crowd of 500 people were waiting for them. A dozen officers were with Pierce, and as soon as the party came in sight the excitement in the crowd became intense. Cries of "lynch him!" "Bring a rope!" and "kill the scoundrel!" were heard on every hand. Surrounded by forty policemen Pierce was hurried into the jail. Pierce shot John Harney about three years ago and at that time the jail was surrounded by 3,000 men, who were there to lynch him. His life was only saved by the prompt arrival of the militia, who dispersed the crowd by firing blank cartridges. Shortly after that Pierce shot Henry Lloyd. Nine months ago he shot Terry Chambers, and had he not been spirited away he would have [illegible] victim, is a prominent grand army man and his friends are talking seriously about the matter. Strong precautions have been taken to protect Pierce, yet there is still danger of a lynching.

FILLED HIM WITH LEAD.

Georgia Lynchers Make Short Work of a Negro Who Entered a Girl's Room.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 2.—News has reached here of the lynching of a negro named Dan Buck at Bluffton Tuesday. Early Tuesday morning the 15-year-old daughter of a well-known citizen of the village of Bluffton was awakened by a noise in her room and saw a negro man. She screamed and he fled. Buck was suspected, arrested and confessed. A party of about 200 men took him from the village jail, hanged him to a tree by his heels and filled him with bullets and shot. There was not a place on his body an inch square that was not perforated.

TO TROT FOR $10,000.

THE STAR EVENT OF THE YEAR IN THE HORSE WORLD.

The Great Merchants' and Manufacturers' Stake Race at Detroit, July 21.—Speculations as to Its Outcome.—The Cracks of the Trotting Turf Will Compete.—Some of the Probable Starters.

The subject which just now engages the attention of all votaries of the trotting turf is the coming contest for the Merchants' and Manufacturers' stake of $10,000, which takes place at Detroit during the week beginning July 20. Interest is at high tide among horsemen throughout the country, and the chances of the different probable starters are canvassed with earnestness wherever horse talk is heard. This great "fixed event" of the Blue Ribbon meeting has come to be regarded as the star event of the year in the horse world. Some one has aptly termed it the "Blue Ribbon of the Trotting Turf," borrowing the popular title of the famous English Derby.

For the third annual renewal of the Merchants' and Manufacturers', there were thirteen subscribers when the stake closed last April, all of whom have made good the payments due to date. Nominators must name their horses on Monday next, and as the time draws near subscriptions are in great demand. Secretary Campbell reports ten applications, within as many days, from owners of promising trotters, who are anxious to purchase at a premium the right to nominate their horses for the event. It may be now taken as settled that a baker's dozen of the fastest young trotters in the world will score up for the word this year. A very great race is sure to develop among so many good ones.

The clever Kansas City trainer, Bob Stewart, again has his eye on the big prize, and if there is truth in the stories told of the speed that Ryland T. is showing in his work at Terre Haute, the Missourian may be able to repeat his victory of a year ago. Ryland's record is 2:30¼, but it is said that he has already trotted better than 2:20 this season, and is gaining speed at the rate of a second a week. The horse is doubtless a marvel in point of speed, and Stewart seems to be saving him for the event.

A starter that looks to be "in it" from first to last is Honest George, named by A. J. Haws, of Pennsylvania. This horse made a record of 2:22¼ in the sixth heat of a race last week. He is fast and a stayer.

Another eastern entry that will be strongly fancied is Lakewood Prince, owned by Vandergrift & Odel, of New York. His record is only 2:25, but he seems to have a habit of winning his races no matter how fast the time may happen to be.

Andy McDowell, who trains for the Montana copper king, Marcus Daly, will start one of the fast ones in his stable, probably Fantasie, 2:25.

The bay gelding, Prince M., from La Porte, Ind., is another fast one that may start for the great stake. His record is 2:19¾, made last week, and it is said he can trot in 2:15.

Others that will probably be named are, Nutting King, 2:25¼, a very fast Kentucky stallion; Mattie H., 2:24¼, likewise from the blue grass region; Clara G., 2:28¼, owned by J. I. Case, of Wisconsin; Bismont, 2:24, from the stable of Gov. Harris, of Chicago, and Michigan's representative, Sir Arthur, the property of G. H. Hammond. At present the remaining starters cannot be foretold with any certainty, but race-goers are already assured of seeing thirteen of the pick and choice of the whole country start for the splendid prize on the second day of the Blue Ribbon Meeting, Tuesday, July 21.

Mr. Strong was seriously indisposed last Sunday but was able to attend to his usual duties on Monday morning.

Geo. Getty, Jr., has commenced threshing. He has a large number of jobs engaged and guarantees to do good work.

Earl Leonardson and Montie Hoagland came very near breaking their necks last Sunday. "A miss is as good as a mile," boys.

The next play to be given in the near future by the Britton Amateur Dramatic Society is entitled, "Oath Bound, or Faithful Unto Death," to conclude with the laughable farce entitled, "Chops." Full particulars will appear later.

Dr. Thomas Smith's famous trotting mare, Maud Loree, won a large amount of money for her owner last week on the Petersburg track. The Doctor will probably be shipping her to Detroit the early part of next week, to take part in the races there, and all lovers of horse flesh will do well to come and see her before she leaves Britton.

A team of horses belonging to Irve Osborn ran away and passed through Britton last Monday morning soon after 8 o'clock. When last seen by your correspondent they were going at the rate of about forty miles an hour, and if they have not been stopped before this goes to print, Irve will probably find them near the Atlantic Ocean.

OBITUARY.

Died, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Daniel Hanford, at 6:30 a. m., July 4th, 1891, Mr. Robert Plank, aged 87 years, 6 months and 24 days.

Mr. Plank was born in Catskill, Green Co., N. Y., December 10th, 1803. He resided there until 1838, when he came with his family to Lyons, Wayne Co., N. Y., and lived there twelve years. He came to Michigan in the spring of 1850 and to Tecumseh in the spring of 1853, where he has ever since resided until eight years ago. Health failing his wife, they went to live with his eldest daughter, Mrs. D. Hanford, of Franklin, Lenawee Co. He was married in 1830 to Miss Phœbe Ann Springer, of Duchess Co., N. Y., by whom he had two children—Mrs. Hanford and Mrs. Whiting Cleveland—who both survive him, his wife having died at the same daughter's seven years ago. He experienced religion during a revival in 1834 and united with the Methodist Episcopal church, of which he has ever been an earnest, consistent member; and while suffering severe pain, in his last illness, ever expressed himself as strong in the faith that God was afflicting him for some wise purpose. He was a member of the Tecumseh Lodge of I. O. O. F. during the last twenty-five years and always felt a great interest in its welfare. A delegation attended the funeral, acting as bearers of his casket to its last resting place in our beautiful cemetery. The funeral services were held at the M. E. church in Tecumseh, of which he had been a member for thirty-seven years, and which his hands had helped to build. The pulpit, before which his casket rested, his own hand had helped to fashion many years ago. Although a humble citizen, as the world goes, he filled the station which Providence had allotted to him with honor and faithfulness. His life's work is now over and he has gone to meet that heavenly reward that awaits the just.

Died, in Tecumseh, July 7th, 1891, Albert Vedder, in the 59th year of his age. The deceased was born Sept. 24th, 1832, in Orleans county, N. Y. When but three years of age he moved with his parents to this county where he has since resided. He was the eldest of a family of eight children. He was married Oct. 7th, 1855, to Elizabeth Mattiss who died March 1st, 1879, leaving one son, and on Jan. 18th, 1882, he was married again to Emma P. Stebbins, of Tecumseh. A little son came to their home eight years ago, which will be a great comfort, we trust, to his bereaved mother.

The deceased became a member of the M. E. Church in this place eleven years ago, and in many ways he has served the church with credit. During the last few months of his life he has been a great sufferer from a disease that has troubled him for many years, and in these few months he has been making preparation, both temporal and spiritual, for the great change that he felt was soon to await him. He felt anxious for his family, but was perfectly resigned to go if the Lord so willed. As a neighbor he was kind and obliging, as a citizen he was loyal and true, as a business man he was prompt, energetic, honorable and honest, and always to be relied upon, and as a husband and father he was kind and loving.

A large circle of relatives and friends gave evidence of the esteem in which he was universally held by attending his funeral which was held at the home, conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. S. Joslin, assisted by Revs. W. Q. Burnett and W. F. Harding. And so amid the flowers and beauties of the day, we laid him to rest in the vault of our beautiful cemetery.

CHARLES F. FIELD, Recorder.

The time is coming in which the man who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow need not work very hard in order to do it.

A FEARFUL SUICIDE.

The following heartrending details of a suicide are condensed from an account in last evening's Times.

Alfred Heinzman, a lad betwen 18 and 20 years of age, committed suicide yesterday in a lonely spot back of George A. Betz's slaughter house. The rash act was accomplished by putting a bullet through his heart. The young man was last seen about 10 o'clock in the morning, going across a cornfield belonging to Charles Price, in the direction of the slaughter house, which is situated in a field owned by Mr. Betz, at the end of a lane running from James street, just south of the Lake Shore passenger station, near Treat road.

Marshal Gippert, City Attorney Westerman, Justice Westerman and City Physician Segur were notified, and repaired to the scene of the tragedy.

The remains were found lying twelve feet from the trunk of a good-sized tree, east from the slaughter house about fifty feet. His legs and arms were drawn and stiff. He was lying on his back, his head drawn back, his face swollen and purple. There was a small bullet wound three inches below the left nipple, which undoubtedly indicated the cause of his death. His clothing had caught fire, presumably from the powder, from holding the revolver so close. All he had worn was a shirt, pants, shoes and stockings. The shirt had entirely burned off, down to the waist of his lower garment. The flesh was scorched black in spots, and the hair on the back of the neck and base of the skull was burned off short. The breeches had burned considerably about the waistband, and the flesh about the stomach was especially black and charred. The balance of the trousers were covered with spots of paint, which he spattered on them while working in the paint shop of the Standard oil plant, in the Lake Shore yards. On the other side of the tree and six feet from it, Officer Lards found the revolver, which had very probably been thrown by Heinzman when he fell. Its muzzle was filled with dirt and sticking in the ground. It was a seven-shooting, silver mounted, 32 calibre revolver, in one chamber of which was found a discharged cartridge shell. The balance of the chambers were empty, and had no doubt been so for some time. The fact of the revolver being found some eighteen feet away from where the body lay would indicate that he had had a convulsive struggle in the agonies of his dissolution.

An inquest was held by Justice Westerman and a verdict rendered that the unfortunate man came to his death by his own hand, while temporarily insane.

A correspondent of the Adrian Times, writing from camp, says: In a comparison between Whitmore and Battle Creek, the location of last year's encampment, these officers pronounce the former sadly inferior to the surroundings of the waters of Goguac. But these same gentlemen who are so prejudiced against the present location, are extremely warm in their praises of Quartermaster General Wood, who they say is indefatigable in his efforts to make the most of everything, and who has accomplished what probably very few men in the state could do in arranging matters, handicapped as he is, to provide the comfortable quarters that he has.

Progressive hammock parties are the latest craze, and it is said to knock the spots off progressive pedro or euchre, says an exchange. Any progressive young gentleman and lady can play it. The game can be enjoyed anywhere provided always there are plenty of shaded locations for the hammocks, so that the fair occupants shall in no case be moon-struck. When the hostess strikes the gong every young man must march to the next hammock. Prizes are awarded to the most entertaining conversationalist, of either sex. The young gentlemen vote for the young ladies, and vice versa. Any young man found with a long hair on his shoulder or complexion powder on his coat sleeve is subject to a heavy fine.

DETROIT BEATS THE RECORD

THE MOST SUCCESSFUL TROTTING MEETING IN THE HISTORY OF THE TURF.

A Triumph for the Blue Ribbon Managers—An Unexampled List of Entries—All the Stars of the Turf to Compete—The Great Free-For-All Race—Sensational Features.

Detroit has gone to the front as a harness racing centre. The recent innovation of its turf managers, of whom the leading spirit is Mr. D. J. Campau, in reducing entrance fees to all races from ten to five per cent, has brought out the largest list of high class entries for the Blue Ribbon Meeting of next week ever known in the history of the trotting turf. Horsemen are deeply interested in the success of Detroit's new departure in this matter of lower entrance fees and their indorsement of the reform is manifest in the astonishing list of nominations sent in.

The Blue Ribbon meeting of a year ago was second to none in the country in point of earnest racing, fast time and large attendance. But beside the carnival of a week hence it seems almost insignificant. In 1890 seventy-six horses were entered for the week's races. This year, under the five per cent plan, one hundred and twenty-three nominations have already been received and three classes yet remain open. It is thought the total will reach 160, or more than double the number entered a year ago.

All the great stables of the country are represented, from C. H. Nelson's of Maine, to the Pleasanton Stock Farm string of California. Budd Doble will be on hand with the best stable of horses he has ever driven—among others, the five-year-old, Nancy Hanks, 2:14½ and McDoel, 2:15¼. James Goldsmith comes from New York with a string of seven fast ones, including the great young horse Leicester, 2:18¼, Gean Smith, 2:15¼ and Mambrino Maid, 2:18. General John Turner of Philadelphia has named a number of famous flyers for the different events—among others Rosaline Wilkes, 2:14¼ and the fast Siglight that is credited with having trotted a trial in 2:12. George Starr brings the champions Margaret S., 2:12¼ and Homestake, 2:14½, from California. Andy McDowell of Montana, enters Yolo Maid, 2:12¼ and Lord Byron, 2:18 among others. John Dickerson, Bob Stewart and all the other famous reinsmen of the East and West are well represented in the entry list.

The field in the free-for-all class is without doubt the most remarkable ever known. The entries are Guy, 2:10¾; Homestake, 2:14¼; Alvin, 2:14¼; Rosaline Wilkes, 2:14¼; Alcryon, 2:15¼; Gean Smith, 2:15¼; and McDoel, 2:15¼. The winner must trot the fastest race on record if weather and track are right.

The free-for-all is a fair sample of each and every event on the programme. In all classes large fields of the fastest and best horses on the turf are entered. In some races as many as sixteen will start.

Many sensational features have been arranged for and others of equal importance will be announced within a few days.

Nelson, 2:10¼, the fastest stallion that has ever lived is now at the track and in shape to trot the mile of his life. He will start to beat his own best record for stallions, 2:10¾.

The champion pole team Clayton and Lynn W., 2:19 are to be brought on from New York for a fast exhibition. They are owned and will be driven by Matthew Riley, Esq., president of the New York Driving Club, one of the most noted amateur reinsmen of the metropolis.

The great $10,000 stake race has enlisted a fine field of young trotters and bids fair to prove even more exciting than the seven-heat contest of last year in the same event. The horse that wins will doubtless trot three heats right around 2:16. The big race comes off on Tuesday, July 21, and as Monday will be Blue Ribbon Day—admission free—many will start for Detroit in time to be on hand for Monday's races, remaining over until after the decision of the great event of the year.

SCHINDLER, G. P. A.

Ely's Cream Balm is especially adapted as a remedy for catarrh which is aggravated by alkaline dust and dry winds.—W. A. Hover, Druggists, Den-

My catarrh was very bad. For thirty years I have been troubled with it—have tried a number of remedies without relief. A druggist advised Ely's Cream Balm. I have used only one bottle and I can say I feel like a new man. I make this voluntary statement that others may know of the Balm.—J. W. Mathewson, (Lawyer),

I have not used all of one bottle yet. I suffered from catarrh for twelve years, experiencing the nauseating dropping in the throat peculiar to that disease, and nose bled almost daily. I tried various remedies without benefit until last April, when I saw Ely's Cream Balm advertised in the Boston Budget, I procured a bottle, and since the first days' use have had no more bleeding—the sorness is entirely gone.—D. G. Davidson, with the Boston Budget, formerly with Boston Journal.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 16, 1891.

Nearly every state in the Union repudiated the McKinley tariff last fall. Will the State of Ohio be the first to back track and elect the author of that tariff to the governorship this fall?

Major McKinley says that he expects to be elected Governor of Ohio. That is to be expected of course. But perhaps he will change his mind after election. Gov. Foraker changed his two years ago.

An exchange remarks: "Let the prosperous pay the taxes." That is good enough doctrine for any man. The trouble is that for the past twenty five years the bulk of the taxes have been paid by the least prosperous part of the community—the farmers and laborers.

At this writing it seems evident that Gov. Campbell will be renominated by the Ohio Democratic Convention this week, and that the party will be a unit in his favor, after the convention is over. The line of battle will then be formed in Ohio, and the issues will be a hot one, with the chances about equal.

The Toledo Bee is asking impertinent questions. Here is the last one:

The Portsmouth woolen mills have suspended operations because of lack of business. A few years ago Quigley's forte, most industry was that of the manufacture of woolen goods. Perhaps Major McKinley and his high tax associates, who insist that a high tariff on wool is necessary, can explain just what has become of this industry.

One object of the McKinley law was to stop all wool importations and thus sell to the people of domestic wool. But it has had exactly the opposite effect. The foreign importations have been heavier during the last six months than ever before, for a like period, while the price of domestic wool is constantly going down.

The April number of the Century contains an article written by Horace Greeley in his lifetime, giving his opinion of Abraham Lincoln. As an estimate of the above statesman by the ablest editor of war times, it will possess peculiar interest at this day. Many people will not agree with Greeley's conclusions but the article is written in his most vigorous style and is intensely interesting.

If the Democrats had had complete control of both branches of the Legislature from the outset the session would have been shortened by at least two months. As it is, the session is no longer than was that of two years ago, while a saving of over $10,000 has been effected in the running expenses, as compared with the cost of the last Republican Legislature. This is a good showing; and when we reflect that the general legislation of the present session has been far more thoroughly considered, and is of a much more important character than that enacted by the bungling Hawbuck aggregation of 1889, the immense superiority of this Democratic Legislature over its immediate predecessors becomes at once apparent.—Lansing Journal.

The N. Y. Sun is responsible for this bit of practical good sense:

Some of the Alliance cotton raisers in the South want to withhold the cotton from the market till its price can be [illegible] wheat raisers in the Northwest want to withhold the wheat until they can sell it at their own price. But the wheat raisers do not want to pay any more than they now pay for cotton, and the cotton raisers do not want to pay over the present price for wheat. So it goes all around. The grocers, tailors and shoemakers want bigger profits than they get, and their customers want the goods at cheaper prices. The house owners seek to raise the rents, and their tenants would like to cut them down. So it goes all around, from Maine to California, from January till December.

Ex-Senator Ingalls took especial pains to stir at the Farmers' Alliance in his lecture before the Glen Echo Chautauqua at Washington last week. Although he did not refer to it by name, there is no doubt as to what was aimed at when he said: "We have now a new school of political philosophy, that is repudiating the Declaration of Independence, that is endeavoring to overthrow the maxims of democracy and to insist that the race shall not be for the swift nor the battle to the strong; that the distinction ordained by God among men shall be an obliterated statute, so that idleness shall bring the same reward as industry and thrift; that the ignorant shall be as wise as the learned; that debts shall be paid by acts of Congress; that money shall be made as plenty as the autumn leaves of the forest; that taxation shall be abolished by acts of a State legislature, and that property shall be equally distributed among all men."

TRADE WITH THE SOUTH.

Observations of a Sharp Yankee Merchant—Reciprocity Not Needed—American Goods Can Compete Already, But We Lack Enterprise—Pauper Labor and American Labor. Our Labor the Cheapest on Earth.

At a recent meeting of the Boston Shoe and Leather exchange Mr. D. F. Murphy, an enterprising Yankee merchant who does a wholesale business in American manufactures at Kingston, Jamaica, made an address on reciprocity and our general trade relations with southern countries. Mr. Murphy displayed absolutely no enthusiasm on the subject of reciprocity, since even without reciprocity American goods can be profitably exported to neighboring countries to the south of us, and the only reason which now keeps American merchants from doing a large and profitable business there is a lack of information and enterprise.

"There is nothing whatever," said Mr. Murphy, "in the way of our doing business in the south excepting what exists here at home, and that we can remedy. We have free raw material for all the south requires. The credit system is as good, I say better, than our own. We have ample steamship and mail service. We have access to all the markets of the south on the same terms as the most favored nation. These advantages are sufficient to insure us a trade of $500,000,000 a year out of the $1,400,000,000 or $1,500,000,000 a year of the southern commerce. These are all the advantages we can have or shall be likely to have. I am not a believer in Mr Blaine's reciprocity scheme including manufactured goods."

"There is a chance," he went on, "that reciprocity may become a political question, and our manufacturers will await congressional action on it. I fail to see how congress can give us any help in this southern trade that will give us any advantage over European competitors, but while we are waiting to see, valuable concessions for exclusive rights are being granted to European houses for manufacture of ice, of soap, of navigation of rivers, of construction of public works, of electric light plants, of banks, refining of sugar for home use, erection of coffee cleaning plants. This system of concessions, or exclusive rights, is to hasten development, but it is a most pernicious one. The few able representatives we have in the south see no movement on our part indicating that we want any of the good things going, and therefore do not use their influence against the concessions.

"It appears to me that our government, in giving us reciprocity, is like giving us a white elephant. As we are, we are not in a position to use it. It may be costly to keep, by our surrendering duties on southern goods in exchange for that which we cannot use. There are about twenty points on which we must have information, regardless of any southern tariffs, before we can safely export."

We pride ourselves with being the most enterprising nation on earth; but, so far as the export trade to South America is concerned, it is clear from the facts stated by Mr. Murphy that American manufacturers and merchants have not been awake to their opportunities. They have not studied southern markets; they have not gathered information about the wants of the southern peoples, about their tariffs, their routes of trade and methods of transportation; and, they have never undertaken to manufacture the special grades and varieties of goods demanded in the so-called Latin America.

In confirmation of all this a writer in Hardware, a New York trade journal, points out how a New York merchant lost an opportunity to build up a trade in South America for American made shovels by refusing to pack them as ordered. The same writer contrasts with this the way in which English manufacturers accommodate themselves to the wants of the people for whom goods are intended. He says: "For all parts of the world they manufacture goods with reference to the local demand, laying British preferences entirely aside. It would be difficult to buy a mackintosh in England similar to the great mass of those sent for the market of the United States. Every Chola woman in Eastern Peru wears a peculiar shawl knit in Manchester in exact imitation of the old cotton shawls which the Indians had for ages previously made with their own hands; and the trapiches, or sugar mills, for the Amazon valley are designed after those formerly constructed by the natives out of the hardwoods of their forests."

The trouble with our manufacturers is that they have learned under their protection schooling to look almost entirely to the home market. Protection has sapped their enterprise and self-reliance. Mr. Murphy said in his address: "It appears to me that our people are growing into a habit of leaning on the government for help, while our business interests are becoming the foot ball to be tossed between the rival parties in politics."

In this address Mr. Murphy exposed some of the false notions upon which our protectionists defend McKinleyism. He rejected utterly the claim of the protectionists that we cannot compete with the "cheap pauper-made goods of Europe." "For years," he said, "we have raised in our imaginations obstacles in our way of doing this southern trade. First, we cannot compete with the 'pauper labor' of Europe. I have sold crimping machines for twenty-five dollars to thirty dollars made by our high priced labor, as you call it, and made a good thing. The pauper crimping-machine from Europe is not sold for less than forty dollars. Boston letter copying presses pay well, selling them at five dollars each. Pauper made ones from England cannot be sold less than seven dollars. Boston stationery is now sold where I am as cheap at retail as it is in Boston. The pauper stationery from England costs 20 per cent. more."

In answer to all this rot about the "pauper labor" of Europe Mr. Murphy asserted that we have the cheapest labor on earth. He said: "In our system of manufacturing our operatives perform but one part; that they learn quickly. Machinery is well made and nicely adjusted for that part; it runs swiftly, but there is no changing it. On that special style a man gets enough to do month after month. The maximum amount of work is thus obtained from the operatives and the maximum output from the minimum cost of plant each year. This is the case in shoes, in cottons, in castings, in glassware, furniture, agricultural tools, hats, leather, and in the production of such goods I tell you we have the cheapest labor per cent. on cost of production there is on earth, and we have also untaxed or indigenous raw materials for everything of our manufacture which the southern countries consume."

It is often claimed that English manufacturers have the benefit of a much lower rate of interest than our manufacturers, and that they can therefore, carry heavier profits in South American and West Indian trade. This claim Mr. Murphy says he had found by his own observation to be false.

Whenever it is pointed out that we sell so little in these southern markets the protectionists are ready with their stale assertions about "lack of shipping and postal facilities." This was heard to the point of disgust during the recent subsidy raid in the last session of congress. The falsity of all this was pointed out by Mr. Murphy. He said: "Want of steamship communication is another supposed obstacle to our doing southern trade. The fact has been for some years that to all the countries, say as far south as the mouth of the Amazon, within that limit the steamship communication with the United States is six times greater than that with all the countries of Europe combined. I shall venture to say that three-fifths of the mails for Great Britain from that territory now pass through the New York post office. Previous to the first of January last postage to the United States by unsubsidized steamship lines, going once or twice or three times a week, was five cents per one-half ounce. Postage by the contract mail lines of Great Britain, going to Great Britain every ten days, was eight cents per one-half ounce."

Starting a New Industry.

The beet sugar factory at Grand Island, Neb., is a striking example of the craze to establish new industries and of the reckless way in which the taxes of the people are paid out to foster private enterprises. This factory at Grand Island receives a bounty of two cents a pound on raw sugar from the state of Nebraska, and with the next crop will begin to receive an equal bounty from the United States government in accordance with the McKinley tariff law.

As this factory has a capacity of about 40 tons of sugar per day the two bounties of four cents a pound will amount to about $3,700 a day. Refined granulated sugar is already being sold at wholesale in centers like New York and Philadelphia at 4½ cents a pound. The Grand Island concern is therefore to be paid nearly the full price of refined sugar for turning out raw sugar, and besides this will get the full market price for its product.

This is a fair example of establishing private enterprises at public expense. The people can look at that $3,700 a day, multiply it by six and make it $22,200 a week, and multiply this by four and make it $88,800 a month, and then they can decide whether it pays to tax themselves to start private business undertakings. An industry is a good thing to have, but only when it is self-supporting.

A Picayune Tariff Maker.

The ridiculously small spirit that manifested itself in concocting the McKinley tariff job was well shown by what Senator Plumb told in the closing days of the recent session of congress about Senator Edmunds and the bounty on maple sugar. Mr. Plumb stated that the republican senators were appealed to last year to vote for the maple sugar bounty on the ground that it would help Senator Morrill, of Vermont, to be reelected. Plumb, and apparently some of the other senators, voted for the bounty for this purpose, with the understanding that the conference committee would strike it out.

When this became probable Senator Edmunds, of Vermont, one of the great republican "statesmen," threatened in writing that he would vote against the entire tariff bill unless the maple sugar bounty were retained. The learned senator was willing to join the "enemies of American industry" and cast his vote against the McKinley tariff bill unless the Vermont farmers were paid two cents a pound on their maple sugar by the United States government.

Of such stuff are "great" men made, and such is the pettiness that dominates tariffs.

—Under the heading "Protection Does It," the American Economist declares that we export more brass and copper goods to Canada than does Great Britain. This article was quoted by Mr. Blaine in his answer to Mr. Gladstone in the North American Review. What are the facts? In 1889 we exported to Canada $230,690 of copper and brass goods. In the same year England sent to Canada only $176,175. In 1888 we exported to all British America only $135,690 of copper and brass goods, or $95,000 less than in 1889, and England sent them $128,560. Such is the triumph of high duties!

—Some time ago the owners of the Springfield (Ill.) woollen mill reduced the wages of their employes. Now they have laid off a portion of their force. Some of those discharged have been employed in the concern for years. In the political campaign of 1888 the manager of the mill was unsparing in his denunciations of the "free traders" and assured his workmen that disaster would surely follow the election of Cleveland, and "free trade" in congress.

—The school boys in Moundville know a thing or two. When asked the difference between Buffalo Bill and the McKinley bill, one of them is said to have answered: "Buffalo Bill killed buffalo while McKinley bill killed Buffalo, New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Cripple Moundville."

A Delusion and a Snare.

The price of wool is now at the lowest point of the year, and on some lines, especially X and XX grades, at lower figures than have been seen in several seasons. Seldom has the month of July been ushered in with the market in a more depressed and unsettled state. It is difficult to sell any large line of wool except at concessions.

The wool growers who have been looking to the tariff as the panacea for the evils which have beset them are most woefully disappointed. High tariff on wool has done them no good, and those who were the most clamorous for the enactment of the tariff law, the Ohio and Michigan wool grower, have been the least benefited. It has worked, in fact, to their detriment. Ohio and Michigan fleeces have been a drag on the market for the past six months, steadily declining, and they are likely to continue to be a drag on business [illegible] which we have frequently voiced, that wool must be prepared and put up for market in better condition. Thus far, we are sorry to say, there has been no general, substantial improvement in the methods of preparing and sending wool to market. We hope that there may be. If there is not, all the tariff laws that were ever enacted will not benefit them.

It is easy enough for high tariff advocates to "figure up" what the fleece of the market ought to be, but the test of experience has demonstrated that consumers of wool are buying it on its merits. They will continue to buy foreign wool even at a higher cost per scoured pound than domestic fleece, for the reason that ultimate results are more profitable and satisfactory. A mixture of Australian wool with territory yields better results to manufacturers of fine goods than domestic fleeces and while this continues to be the case importations of Australian wool will not be checked by high tariff laws. The latter, as far as wool is concerned, have been demonstrated to be a delusion and a snare, deservedly involving those who were the most instrumental in securing their enactment.—American Wool Journal.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years it was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

Dr. A. M. Spaulding of Grand Rapids, Mich., says: "I prescribe Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup in my practice, and unhesitatingly recommend it. Dyspepsia

Few people have suffered more severely from dyspepsia than Mr. E. A. McMahon, a well known grocer of Staunton, Va. He says: "Before 1878 I was in excellent health, weighing over 200 pounds. In that year an ailment developed into acute dyspepsia, and soon I was reduced to 162 pounds, suffering burning sensations in the stomach, palpitation of the heart, nausea and indigestion. I could not sleep, lost all heart in my work, had fits of melancholia, and for days at a time I would have welcomed death. I became morose, sullen and irritable, and for eight years life was a burden. I tried many physicians and many remedies. One day a workman employed by me suggested that I take Hood's Sarsaparilla, as it had cured his wife of dyspepsia. I did so, and before taking the whole of a bottle I began to feel like a new man. The terrible pains to which I had been subjected, ceased, the palpitation of the heart subsided, my stomach became easier, nausea disappeared, and my entire system began to tone up. With returning strength came activity of mind and body. Before the fifth bottle was taken I had regained my former weight and natural condition. I am today well and I ascribe it to taking Hood's Sarsaparilla."

"TABOO" LAND.

If there be in this universe superior intelligences engaged, with higher powers, in the study of its infinite marvels, who sometimes examine the speck we tenant with such studious curiosity as our microscopists watch the denizens of a drop of water, the manner in which, in such a country as this, population is distributed, must greatly puzzle them. In our cities they find people packed together so closely that they live over one another in tiers; in the country they see people separated so widely that they lose all the advantages of neighborhood. They see buildings going up in the outskirts of our towns, while much more available lots remain vacant. They see men going great distances to cultivate land while there is yet plenty of land to cultivate in the localities from which they come and through which they pass. And as these higher intelligences watch this process of settlement through whatever sort of microscopes they may require to observe such creatures as we, they must notice that, for the most part, these settlers, instead of being attracted by each other, leave between each other large patches of unused land. If there be in the universe any societies which have the same relation to us as our learned societies have to ants and animalculæ, these phenomena must lead to no end of curious theories.

Take in imagination such a bird's-eye view of the city of New York as might be had from a balloon. The houses are climbing heavenward—ten, twelve, even fifteen stories, tier on tier of people, living one family above another, without sufficient water, without sufficient light or air, without playground or breathing space. So close is the building that the streets look like narrow rifts in the brick and mortar, and from street to street the solid blocks stretch until they almost meet; in the newer districts only a space of twenty feet, a mere crack in the masonry through which at high noon a sunbeam can scarcely struggle down, being left to separate the backs of the tenements fronting on one street from the backs of those of another street. Yet, around this city, and within easy access of its center, there is plenty of vacant land; within the city limits in fact, not one-half the land is built upon, and many blocks of tall tenement houses are surrounded by vacant lots. If the improvement of our telescopes were to show us on another planet, lakes where the water, instead of presenting a level service, ruled only by the action of the wind, stood up here and there in huge columns, it could hardly perplex us more than these phenomena must perplex such extramundane intelligences as I have supposed. How is it, they may well speculate, that the pressure of population which piles families, tier on tier, above each other, and raises such towering warehouses and workshops, does not cover this vacant land with buildings and with homes? Some restraining cause there must be; but what, it might well puzzle them to tell.

A South Sea Islander, however—one of the old heathen sort, whom, in civilizing, we have well-nigh exterminated, might make a guess. If one of their high chiefs tabooed a place or object, no one of the common sort of these superstitious savages dare use or touch it. He must go around for miles rather than set his feet on a tabooed path; must parch or die with thirst rather than drink of a tabooed spring; must go hungry though the fruit of a tabooed grove rotted on the ground before his eyes. A South Sea Islander would say that this vacant land must be "taboo." And he would be not far from the truth. This land is vacant, simply because it is cursed by that form of the taboo which we superstitiously venerate under the names of "private property" and "vested rights."

A Labor Union Sees the Light.

The Central labor union of Evansville, Ind., has sent a petition to the common council of that city, in which they ask that "all taxes on improvements be removed, in order that the building industry may be stimulated and employment given to those who are now idle." The Evansville Courier heartily indorses the petition in an editorial article. It says it can see no good reason for fining men who are willing to beautify our city by erecting handsome buildings and more wholesome cottages for the working people, particularly when such improvements do not make the city more attractive than similar cities where little care is taken to provide for the comfort of those who care about the esthetics of life, or interesting themselves in the prosperity of the city. The Courier continues: Under the present policy of our city, the Courier continues, every man who erects a building or even builds a fence around his building is fined $3 on every $100 of capital he employs, which is absurd, of course; but the problem is to make the every working men who would be benefited the most see its absurdity. Thousands of them know how to do carpenter work, paint, lay bricks, plaster and do plumbing, but they don't seem to know how to advance their own interests. The Evansville Central labor union is on the right road, however, and its example might be followed with advantage by larger central unions.

THAT a people can be enslaved just as effectually by making property of their lands as by making property of their bodies, is a truth that conquerors in all ages have recognized, and that, as society developed, the strong and unscrupulous who desired to live off the labors of others, have been prompt to see. The coarser form of slavery, in which each particular slave is the property of a particular owner, is only fitted for a rude state of society, and with social development entails more and more care, trouble and expense upon the owner. But by making property of the land instead of the person, much care, supervision and expense are saved the proprietors; and though no particular slave is owned by a particular master, yet the one class still appropriates the labor of the other class as before.

How Land Speculation Pays.

On Friday of last week there was a transfer of a plot of land on the upper part of Manhattan Island known as Washington Heights. The land lies between Tenth avenue, which runs along the edge of the bluff on the east, and Kingsbridge road on the west, and One hundred and Eighty-second street and One Hundred and Seventy-seventh street on the north and south. It comprises about 18 full blocks or 400 city lots. The price paid for this plot was $1,000,000. The purchasers are a syndicate of New Yorkers who propose to place the property on the market in small plots. The sellers were Vice-President Levi P. Morton and his partner, George Bliss.

This property was known as the General Butterfield farm and was purchased by Morton and Bliss in the latter part of 1885, just five and one-half years ago for $450,000. Since that time the improvement of the cable road on Tenth avenue, the building of the Washington bridge across the Harlem and the laying out of One Hundred and Eighty-second street has brought the land into the market. And the result has been an accretion in value in the five and one-half years of just $550,000, or $100,000 per year. This increase on an investment of $450,000 represents a profit of over 22 per cent. per annum. If we estimate the average rate of profit in business investments over and above all expenses, insurance and wages of superintendence as high as 7 per cent., we see that it has paid Messrs. Morton and Bliss just three times as well to speculate on the prime necessity of life and withhold from use the source of all production—land, as to invest their money in productive enterprise, employ labor and build up the community.

Why a Land Value Tax is Just.

Land has two elements of value: one given it by labor, the other by the community without any exertion of labor. The first should not be taxed; the second may be. A tract of land located a hundred miles away from any settlement or from any market may attract no settler; but let a school be established within a mile or two, and let a village grow up at the crossing of the roads, and let a city begin to form in the neighborhood, and this land will begin to attract settlers and to command a price. The value given it by the community is the value of the land, and this value the community may take for its own by taxation, or may let individuals appropriate by purchase. If the community does the latter, it robs those who create the wealth by their labor of a portion of the fruits of their labor, to give it to those who have done nothing to create it. If it does the former, it does justice to all, and lays the burden of its support on those who have appropriated a portion of the wealth created by others. If a man buys a piece of land in the city of New York, he may be obliged to pay $1,000 a year for the privilege of using it for a few years, while his neighbor, who has paid $1,000 for his land, may be able to use it for nothing, because his land is not yet worth more than he paid for it. The man who pays $1,000 a year may be a poor man, who is using the land to carry on business by which he earns a living for himself and family, while the man who pays nothing may be a speculator who is withholding it in the hope that others will do something that will make his land worth more than he paid for it. The man who pays $1,000 a year may be a manufacturer, who is employing a hundred men in his business, while the man who pays nothing may be a gambler who is levying a tax upon the community because the presence of the manufacturer has made his land worth more than he paid for it. If the land value belongs to the community, the man who pays $1,000 a year for the use of land is being robbed of that amount by the community, while the man who pays nothing is robbing the community of $1,000 a year. If the land belongs to the community, the land, for all practical purposes, is restored to the community, though the person who occupies it may continue to do so, or even to sell, exchange, mortgage or bequeath it, and if the taxes on such lands, whether in city, village or country, amount to sufficient to defray the expenses of all departments of the government, there will be no necessity for taxing the products of labor, and, therefore, the two laws of nature which I have named as having been violated, will be restored to their normal dignity, and their violation ceases. The cause of enforced poverty being thus abolished, that terrible foe to human happiness will disappear.—Henry S. Schill.

The Landowner is the Manowner.

Land being indispensable to labor, those who monopolize land are able to make their own terms with labor; or rather, the competition with which each other of those who can not employ themselves, yet must find employment or starve, will force wages down to the lowest point at which the habits of the laboring class permit them to live and reproduce. At this point, in all countries where land is fully monopolized, the wages of common labor must rest, and toward it all other wages tend, being only kept up above it by the special conditions, artificial or otherwise, which give labor in some occupations higher wages than in others. And so no improvement even in the power of labor itself—whether it come from education, from the actual increase of muscular force, or from the ability to do with less sleep and work longer hours—could raise the reward of labor above this point. This we see in countries and in occupations where the given to more carpenters, painters, bricklayers, plasterers, plumbers, and, in fact, the workmen of every trade and industry. Under the present policy of our city, the Courier continues, every man who erects a building or even builds a fence around his building is fined $3 on every $100 of capital he employs, which is absurd, of course; but the problem is to make the every working men who would be benefited the most see its absurdity. Thousands of them know how to do carpenter work, paint, lay bricks, plaster and do plumbing, but they don't seem to know how to advance their own interests. The Evansville Central labor union is on the right road, however, and its example might be followed with advantage by larger central unions.

THAT a people can be enslaved just as effectually by making property of their lands as by making property of their bodies, is a truth that conquerors in all ages have recognized, and that, as society developed, the strong and unscrupulous who desired to live off the labors of others, have been prompt to see. The coarser form of slavery, in which each particular slave is the property of a particular owner, is only fitted for a rude state of society, and with social development entails more and more care, trouble and expense upon the owner. But by making property of the land instead of the person, much care, supervision and expense are saved the proprietors; and though no particular slave is owned by a particular master, yet the one class still appropriates the labor of the other class as before.

in to aid the natural bread-winner in the aid of the support of the family. While as for any increase in economy and thrift, as soon as it became general it could only lessen, not increase, the reward of labor.

THE effect of substituting for the manifold taxes now imposed a single tax on the value of land would hardly lessen the number of conscious tax payers, for the division of land now held on speculation would much increase the number of land-holders. But it would so equalize the distribution of wealth as to raise even the poorest above that condition of abject poverty in which public considerations have no weight; while it would at the same time cut down those over rown fortunes which raise their possessors above concern in government. The dangerous classes politically are the very rich and the very poor.—Progress and Poverty.

THE Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, republican, and the Cleveland Plain Dealer, democratic, are talking on the same side on the question of the taxation of personal property. They both want the tax abolished. The Gazette on the ground that it will continue to drive capital from Cincinnati and the Plain Dealer because it is "defective, unequal in its operation and injurious to the most important interests." Both papers want a commission appointed to make a thorough investigation of the whole subject; and as they are among the leaders in their parties, their wishes will probably be respectfully considered.

THE FIRST MIRACLE.

LESSON III, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JULY 19.

Text of the Lesson, John ii, 1-11—Commit Verses, 1-5—Golden Text, John ii, 11—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

After Andrew brought his brother Simon to Jesus we read that Jesus went into Galilee and found Philip, and then that Philip found Nathanael and brought him to Jesus. If the work had thus gone on, each one finding Jesus, or being found of Him, quickly bringing another, how different the world would be today! Why should not every saved soul bring another to Jesus?

1. "And the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee."

This was the town of Nathanael (xxi, 2), and it would not be strange if this was his own marriage.

"And the mother of Jesus was there."

"Blessed among women," Elizabeth said, and "Blessed is she that believed" (Luke i, 42-45). But when another on a certain occasion spoke of Mary's blessedness Jesus replied, "Yea, rather blessed are they that hear the Word of God and keep it." Nowhere are we taught to worship or even to think much of Mary except as a highly honored woman. See Jesus only! Worship God!

2. "And both Jesus was called and His disciples to the marriage."

These disciples were probably the five referred to in the previous chapter—Andrew, Simon, Philip, Nathanael and the unnamed one whom we suppose to have been the writer of this gospel. It is always safe for the disciples of Jesus to go where He goes.

3. "And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus saith unto Him, They have no wine."

The revised version says, "When the wine failed." Their need is going to draw forth his fullness; their emptiness will give an opportunity to glorify Him. It is even so still, and always so: His strength is made perfect in weakness. He only asks our nothingness.

"Thou art Simon, the son of Jona; thou shalt be called Cephas, which is, by interpretation, a stone."

Thus said Jesus as He looked upon him. If you have been born from above, you too, are a living stone in the temple, the church, the body of Christ, the new Jerusalem now being builded.

4. "Jesus saith unto her, Woman, what have I to do with thee? Mine hour is not yet come."

There is no unkindness here, for He could not speak unkindly; neither is there any harshness. If we understood their customs better we would better understand their language, but let no Sunday school scholar even for one moment tolerate the thought that Jesus could speak harshly or unkindly to His mother. The last clause of the verse reminds us that He has an hour and a time for everything.

5. "His mother saith unto the servants, Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it."

His mother evidently understood Him to mean that He would see to it in due time and therefore instructed the servants accordingly. Pharaoh said unto the Egyptians, "Go unto Joseph; what he saith to you, do." Jacob's wives said unto him, "Whatsoever God hath said unto thee, do" (Gen. xli, 55; xxxi, 16). If the question of our lives concerning everything was "What has the Lord said?" and our determination "That only will we do" how safely we would walk and how successfully we would work!

6. "And there were set there six water pots of stone, after the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins apiece."

It is evident from the next verse that these vessels were empty, and thus we are reminded of the kind of vessels which Jesus can use. To be willing to be empty, clean and always ready to the Master's hand is to be where we will be of some use to Him; it is the privilege of every believer to be "a vessel unto honor, sanctified, and meet for the Master's use, and prepared unto every good work" (II Tim. ii, 21).

7. "Jesus saith unto them, Fill the water pots with water. And they filled them up to the brim."

The servants were ready, the order was given and promptly obeyed. Ready and prompt obedience is required of us and ought to be our constant habit. Vessels must receive before they can give; the use of vessels is to receive and give, not to receive only, but to receive in order to give.

8. "And He saith unto them, Draw out now, and bear unto the governor of the feast. And they bare it."

How very soon the vessels, so recently receivers, become givers—and why not? But ask yourself, dear reader, "Am I a giver?" and if not, "Why not?" "Have I received nothing?"

9. "When the ruler of the feast had tasted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was (but the servants which drew the water knew), the ruler of

The water had become wine. "He made the water wine (chapter iv, 46); He who, through the vine, had from the days of Noah made water into wine now does it instantly, for He is the vine, and we know that He can do everything.

10. "And saith unto him, Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine; and when men have well drunk, then that which is worse; but thou hast kept the good wine until now."

Hear this bridegroom getting all the credit for that with which he had nothing to do and Jesus gets not a word. Oh for this spirit which, conscious of the approval of God, is so abundantly satisfied that nothing disturbs.

11. "This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth His glory."

Here is the Spirit's testimony that this was the first of all miracles wrought by Him, thus putting the stamp of untruthfulness upon all records of miracles said to be wrought by Him before this time. The Spirit also testifies that here He manifested forth His glory—the glory of His power, the glory of His grace, the glory of His humility, the glory of serving unseen and unthanked. And yet it was manifest to some—the servants saw it, the disciples saw it, God and angels saw it. Some having eyes see not, while others can say, "One thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I see."

"And His disciples believed on Him."

This was the first mighty work they had seen done by Him, and they were now convinced more fully that He was the Christ, their long promised Messiah. Are you believing in Him because He makes you happy and will take you to heaven when you die, or is it Himself, His great love, His person, His work that captivates and constrains you?

TOLEDO, O., April 6, 1891.

I had a horse in my stables that had hoofs so brittle that it was impossible to keep a shoe on his feet. I have used one can of Marshall's Hoof Cure on his hoofs and the horse has been shod for four weeks and the shoes stay on all right. I consider it the best hoof cure I have ever used.

A SHORT TRIP THROUGH IRELAND.

Landing at Queenstown—A Visit to Cork Blarney Castle—Glengariff, and the Lakes of Killarney.

One year ago, on the 12th of July, we landed at Queenstown, formerly called the "Cove of Cork," an ancient-looking old town, situated on a hillside, and although it was five o'clock in the morning we had no desire to remain here, even for a short time, but immediately took the train for Cork, where we partook of a very ordinary breakfast at a very ordinary establishment, at a very extraordinary price, after which we engaged a carriage to look over the town. After visiting St Ann's church, which contains "the bells of Shandon," and viewing a fine monument to the memory of father Matthew, the Irish apostle of temperance (and, by the way, let me state here that intemperance is the greatest curse of Ireland), we crossed the River Lee which runs through the town, going along a winding road until we came to a quadrangular building, which is Queen's College. This College is the principal seat of learning in the southern part of the Island. Here we spent a very pleasant hour in looking over this fine institution of learning. Upon returning to the City we engaged an Irish jaunting car to carry us to Blarney castle. The jaunting car has two wheels, strong enough to carry a ton and upwards. Why, they are so cumbersome was a question that I frequently asked but never received a satisfactory reply. It has two seats, one at each side, parallel to the wheels, and a shelf below to rest the feet. The occupants sit back to back, facing the roadside, which is not a very pleasant position for traveling, much less for observation. On this unique vehicle, which has nothing similar to it outside of Ireland, we started for Blarney Castle, over hill and dale, passing green fields enclosed by stone walls. Our driver finally reined up his steed near the railroad station, situated within a short distance of Blarney Castle.

We wended our way through a grove of small trees until we came to this immense and singularly-constructed old castle, built of stone, the walls of which are from six to ten feet thick. We examined it within and without; entered its prison cells, where the miserable wretches confined here had only a stone to rest upon, and where light and air scarcely penetrated. We ascended its spiral staircase, built of stone, until we reached the top of the castle, which is about 120 feet high, and from this height our party had a grand view of the surrounding country, as well as of Blarney Lake, a quarter of a mile distant. We of course kissed the Blarney stone, and then descended by means of the old stone stairway, walked to our jaunting car, which we mounted, and our Corkonian driver whipped up his nag and brought us back to Cork. We immediately proceeded by rail to Bantry, and from this point to Glengariff, ten miles distant, the journey was made by stage coach.

Glengariff is situated at the head of Bantry Bay, amidst a grove of trees, whose branches from either side of the road met just above our heads, while the setting sun, casting its rays upon the dark green foliage above, formed a picture more beautiful than can be drawn by the painter's art. Here we remained over Sunday and attended service in the Episcopal church, where we had the pleasure of hearing an excellent discourse. Towards evening we strolled through the beautiful grove, where the yew, the holly, and the arbutus are seen in all their glory, while the ever-rolling waves of the sea, striking against the lonely shore near by, brought to memory the following lines of Byron, who may have written them

> There is a pleasure in the pathless woods;
> There is a rapture on the lonely shore.
> There is a society where none intrudes,
> By the deep sea, and music in its roar."

Early in the morning, July 14th, we boarded the coach bound for the Lakes of Killarney, forty-five miles distant from Glengariff. We had only advanced a short distance on our way when a troop of beggars of both sexes made their appearance, crying out, "Please give us a pinny to buy a book!" We had no sooner disposed of one lot of little urchins than another made their appearance. This scene was repeated at intervals along the whole route to the Lakes of Killarney. In fact the road is infested with beggars, and nowhere in Europe did we find this class so numerous and so persistent as along this road, where the scenery is grand and beautiful. Approaching the Lakes, we came in view of a range of mountains called Magillacuddy's Reeks; a craggy peak named Carran Thule towering head and shoulders above its neighbors, some 4400 feet in height, being the highest mountain in Ireland, is seen many miles away in the distance. About four o'clock in the afternoon our coachman reined up his four-in-hand in front of Muckross hotel, in close proximity to the Lakes, and we immediately set out to visit Muckross Abbey, which was built early in the fifteenth century; this, like many of the old abbeys, as well as ancient castles of Ireland, was partially destroyed by Cromwell. Enough of the old Abbey remains to give the visitor an idea of its rude but strong architectural arrangement. We left Muckross Abbey in the twilight of the evening with a feeling of regret that we could no longer linger about its old ruined walls, which speak silently though truthfully of a by-gone civilization.

In the evening we formed a party of eight, made arrangements with our landlady for a basket dinner and boatmen to row us through the Lakes of Killarney. Early the next morning our party was comfortably seated in the coach which was to convey us to the Gap of Dunloe. The morning's drive brought us through a delightful grove, where the rhododendron, with its beautiful evergreen leaves and its brilliant flowers, grows beside the holly, the ash and the arbutus, forming a dense and dark green foliage, interspersed with radiant flowers, which make this region a veritable paradise.

The Gap of Dunloe is a narrow defile about four miles in length, with rocky mountain peaks ranging from the height of 2000 to 3500 feet on either side. In many places the road is a mere bridle path, leading to the verge of a precipice. We were obliged to make our way on horseback through this pass, single file. Along this narrow road is pointed out Black Lough, a very small sheet of water which is called a lake, where St. Patrick banished the last snake from Ireland. The owner of the pony, which gave me a thorough jolting through this defile, vouched for the story. However, the snake is not a native of Ireland, yet it is said that a great many of the inhabitants are frequently troubled with snakes in their boots. Passing through the Gap of Dunloe and across the Black Valley we came in the vicinity of the Lakes, where we found our boatmen with our basket dinner waiting for us. The members of our party were unaccustomed to horseback exercise; the consequence was that we had substantial reasons to remember our trip through the Gap of Dunloe during the following week.

Our party, seated in the boat, were delighted with the voyage through the Lakes, which are three in number, named the Upper, Middle and Lower Lake. The sturdy boatmen rapidly propelled their little boat through the deep, clear water. One of their number, acting as guide, possessed the ready wit and fluent speech of his countrymen, and had a history for every little island, and a thrilling story in connection with every mountain peak and rocky cliff in the neighborhood of the Lakes. The numerous islands are covered with trees and shrubs; one of these which we passed, named Arbutus Island, is literally covered with arbutus, with its strawberry-like flowers and its rich glossy green leaves making this island the most beautiful of the many interesting islands in the Lakes of Killarney. We landed on Ross' Island and visited Ross Castle, built in the fourteenth century, and partly destroyed by Cromwell. We ascended to the summit of the Castle, the walls of which are covered with ivy. Returning to our boat we were rowed through a swift current called "The Meeting of the Waters," and as the evening was far advanced the boatmen landed us near Muckross Abbey, and from that point we made our way to the hotel.

SMITH'S PAPER MILL.

The repairs that have been going on for some time at Smith's Paper Mill are now completed and the mill is booming again as of yore. We took a stroll over there yesterday and were quite surprised at the extent of the changes that have been made. A new flume has been put in, leading to the mill, more than double the size of the old one, and a new Leffel turbine water wheel of 56 inches capacity. Mr. Blashfield, of Jackson, an old and experienced millwright, had charge of this part of the work. A new covering has been built over both water wheels. These wheels river and drive all the machinery of the paper mill. Steam is used only to heat the straw vats and run the rolls in the upper story. The saving on fuel is about one-half. Before this change the fuel consumed averaged one carload of coal each week, besides a large quantity of wood. One year the mill used 57 carloads of coal. This saving in fuel will make a very material addition to the profits of the business. A straight channel has been cut through the flat, directly east from the waste gate, which will convey the surplus water at a good distance from the mill and thus wear a new channel away from the foundations of the building. The engine and boilers were also overhauled and repaired, and the mill is thus better equipped than ever for doing a strong business. Two full sets of hands are now employed and the establishment is run both night and day form Monday morning till Saturday night. This industry has been a great business help to Tecumseh for many years, and is destined to witness a period of still greater prosperity.

The great fight at Devils lake, between Mr. Beardsell and the Manitou dock company is settled. Not before Mr. Beardsell had built another dock at that place however. But everything is now amicably cooled off, after two hot meetings with the Cincinnati investors, and Mr. Beardsell's boats are landing at the old dock.—Adrian Times.

JOURNALISTIC ETHICS.

The Michigan Messenger of yesterday takes the HERALD and six other county papers to task for having violated journalistic ethics and committed the unpardonable sin of failing to mention the Messenger's enlargement and its purchase of a new job press. So far as the HERALD is concerned, we plead guilty and ask the mercy of the court. "Journalistic Ethics" is a good thing to keep about a printing office. However well grounded an editor may be in the theory of his calling, he sometimes becomes [illegible] in its practical application. Preaching is so much easier than practising, as the ethical editor himself well knows. It is proper, therefore, that the ethical editor should jog the memory of his brethren occasionally on this point. And in this connection we wish to call the ethical editor's attention to another fact. Newspapers, that give their attention to legitimate news, rather than to partisan skull-duggery, frequently find their columns overcrowded. The HERALD suffered a surfeit last week occasioned by the big celebration of our Britton friends. The truth is, we had a notice of the Messenger's enlargement prepared for last week's paper, but this item, with other trifling matter, was crowded out because it would "keep" another week. But perhaps the ethical editor is never annoyed with experiences of this kind

There is one feature of the ethical editor's dissertation upon which we humbly seek more light. Seven papers are enrolled among the sinners, in a list made emphatic with dotted lines, to-wit: Times, Press, HERALD, News, Gazette, Post and Advance. The Clinton Local did make a note on't, and the notice is reproduced verbatim. But what of the Courier and Observer? Did they violate journalistic ethics by refusing or neglecting to note the Messenger's journalistic stride? If so, why are they not included among the goats? If they did notice it, why should not journalistic ethics class them with the Clinton Local, among the sheep?

By the way, before leaving this interesting subject we beg leave to remark that on a bright, lovely day in the month of May, when the robins were singing and the buds were bursting, and all nature looked gay, the HERALD surprised its friends and confounded its enemies by coming out in a dandy new spring suit. And yet the ethical editor failed to chronicle the fact, either in his weekly or semi-weekly, his State or county editions. But then, perhaps the ethical editor was getting his spectacles mended that week and inadvertently overlooked it.

MAJOR R. H. HENDERSHOT.

The entertainment given on Friday evening last at the Opera House by Major Hendershot deserved a crowded house. Those who failed to attend missed a rich treat. The program was made up partially of home talent and some trouble was experienced in getting assistance, but the exercises as finally given were very creditable throughout.

Mrs. A. P. Coddington called the meeting to order and prayer was offered by Rev. Frank Arnold.

Naomi North then gave a recitation entitled "The Drummer Boy of the Rappahannock," which was very nicely rendered.

The "Drummer Boy" himself was then introduced. The name seems somewhat like a misnomer now, for the Major is a broad-shouldered, portly man, who would tip the scales at nearly 200 pounds, and a very different looking individual from the one who lived in Tecumseh before the war, known as Bob Hendershot. But his war cognomen will always stick to him and he deserves it. The Major prefaces his selections with a few explanatory remarks and stories which spice up the exercises very nicely. He is accompanied by his son, who is a skillful player on the fife. After a few introductory words and a short story well told the Major struck a pose and "sailed in." in this latitude. His representation of a battle and of a railroad train at full speed were decidedly realistic. The effects which he can produce on a single drum are wonderful.

Misses Dora Grayson and Dora Heck sang a duet very finely. Hon. J. D. Shull gave a short address which was well received. Harry Tansley and Will Blood, Misses Grayson and Heck sang a quartette, assisted by the Major, which brought down the house and elicited a rousing encore. A recitation was also given by Jessie Case.

The exercises closed with a series of selections on the drum and fife, among which were Gen. Lee's march, G. A. R. march, Captain Jinks, Tecumpolk Quickstep and several others. The members of the W. C. T. U. have reason to congratulate themselves upon the excellent character and marked success of the entertainment.

We are glad to note that the council has voted to pay the Marshal for looking after unruly boys evenings, keeping the sidewalks so ladies can pass, and quelling general disturbances. We hope he will be on hand when any more fights occur, and promptly arrest the parties and take care of them. A few arrests would do away with these noisy hoodlums, and give our citizens a chance to sleep without being awakened three or four times during the night.—Clinton Local.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS.

Mrs. Abbie Fisher and daughter, Gertrude, start to-day for Battle Creek to visit friends. Before returning they expect to visit Grand Rapids, Grand Haven, Chicago and other places and may possibly be away from home two months or more.

Joe Smith returned from his Chicago trip yesterday, having been gone just a week. There is a very large display of furniture at the exposition and many sales were made last week. The Table Co. has a fine display of goods there, and the general agent, T. F. Stevenson, was left in charge of the exhibit. The exposition will last until August 6th.

Capt. A. D. Lawrence received a few days ago from Gen. W. G. Veazey, the Commander in Chief of the National G. A. R, an appointment as Aide-de-camp on the Commander's staff during the National encampment. This was a very flattering offer, but owing to his official engagements here at home, and his health, he felt compelled to decline the honor.

Puck of July 15th is the Midsummer Puck. This publication stands at the head of its class, and is better, if possible, this year, than ever before. The Midsummer Puck, notwithstanding its increased size and its numerous attractive features, is sold at the same price as the regular weekly edition of Puck; this fact will commend it to readers of periodical literature.

"That ticket good?" asked a stranger of Lake Shore Ticket Agent Kennedy, yesterday. "I don't know, but I'll give you a good one for it, on a chance. This one is worth keeping as a curiosity." It was an old Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana ticket, good from Jonesville to Tecumseh, and was numbered 162, dated February 17, 1869. Where it has been knocking around nobody knows.—Adrian Times.

Co. C. started for camp last Tuesday evening with full ranks and full of enthusiasm. Promptly at the hour named in general orders, the boys filed out of the Armory, formed in line and set out for their march to Britton. The company was escorted to Britton by the Kid Band and the march to that village was made without any special incident or accident. They arrived there about nine o'clock and found the whole village on the streets waiting to receive them. The boys passed the night very comfortably in John Britton's barn, and took the early train on the Wabash yesterday morning, bound for camp.

Better than water, lemonade or cold milk for the youngsters in hot weather, says an exchange, is weak tea cooled in glass jars and bottles in the refrigerator. The tea should be brewed fresh and quickly as for immediate use, and then reduced with boiled water, sweetened while hot, and stood first in cool water or some cool spot until its heat is sufficiently lessened to permit its placing in the refrigerator. Otherwise, of course, it melts the ice very rapidly. Most children, even the youngest, like this drink, and its ingredients of boiled water, sugar and tea—the last not much more than a flavoring—are wholesome.

We received a neatly engraved card yesterday, announcing the marriage of James Schermerhorn, editor of the Hudson Gazette, to Adeline M. Jenkins at Oswego, N. Y. July 13th. Bro. Schermerhorn will please accept our heartiest congratulations, both for himself and his bride. He is justly regarded by his brethren of the craft as one of the rising stars in the firmament of Michigan journalism, and they view his advancement with feelings of pride. May the trials of his life be "thin spaced" and its pleasures be "taken" with plenty of "fat." May his domestic happiness never get "pied." May his "run" on earth be "composed" of "nonpareil sorts" and "made up" "at the top of a column," next to "pure reading matter." By this method the "devil" got his first start on earth—in the Gazette office. Let us smoke.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Tenth Annual Session of This Society in Minneapolis.

The Membership Now Numbers Over a Million—Rev. F. E. Clark Reelected President—Resolutions Adopted and Other Work Done.

FOES OF SATAN.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 11.—The "decennial day" of the Christian Endeavor societies was opened at 8:30 a. m. by a half-hour prayer meeting led by William Shaw, treasurer of the united societies, Boston. The regular session was announced for 9 o'clock, but it was nearly half an hour later before it was called to order. There were fully 15,000 delegates present. The opening hymn was "This is My Story." Rev. Dr. S. M. Ware, of Omaha, read from II. Corinthians vi. Rev. Dr. McMillan, of Allegheny City, Pa., offered prayer and another hymn was sung. President Clark then announced the membership of the committees on resolutions, nominations and greetings.

The free parliament on the theme: "What the Society Has Done," gave the delegates their first opportunity of participating directly in the proceedings, and they made the most of it. All over the hall delegates were on their feet with suggestions as to the work of the society. The chairman pointed out one after the other, and they came so fast and the responses of the audience were so quick that each remark seemed the signal for a fresh burst of applause. Sociability, evangelistic effort, support of the pastor, conversion of souls, opposition to saloons and Sunday amusements and many other points were brought out in quick succession. Painesville (O.) societies reported that they had closed all the saloons in their town. Kansas reported that 162 societies had been instrumental in over 1,000 conversions. One St. Louis society supports a mission Sunday-school of over 1,000 children. Nebraska reported an organization in every city, town and village in the state. Indiana societies have dropped strawberry festivals and gives the same money for missions.

Rev. John H. Barrows, of Chicago, presided over the afternoon meeting, and announced that the next international convention would be held in New York in 1892, and in Montreal in 1893.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 13.—Sunday many of the Christian Endeavor delegates were in the Twin City pulpits both morning and afternoon, but full sessions of the convention were held, the only recess being to allow the delegates to go to church in the morning. Before that time 5,000 delegates and others were in their seats in the auditorium to hear President William R. Harper, of the Chicago university, give an interesting Bible study, with applications, on "Ninevah's Fall: the Prophecy of Nahum." The short session closed with a fifteen-minute prayer service, led by Rev. B. B. Tyler, of New York city. One of the finest audiences of the convention gathered in the auditorium in the afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Prof. Lindsey led in some grand chorus singing. Rev. H. C. Farrar, D. D., pastor of the First Methodist church of Albany, N. Y., presided. "To every man his work" was the motto for the session, and the first speaker was Mr. A. A. Stagg, the famous pitcher of Yale, and at present under engagement as instructor in physical training in the new Chicago university. The next speaker was Miss Margaret W. Leitch, from the Jaffna mission, Ceylon, India, who spoke upon "The Young Woman at Work." She appealed strongly for more mission workers, believing 20,000 missionaries were needed within five years if the heathen of this generation were to hear the Gospel, and asking for 16,000 from the Christian Endeavor to be sent through their various church mission boards. John G. Wooley, of Boston, delivered an address on "Gospel Temperance." He said he believed in Gospel temperance in the ballot box, and as he said it an Iowa delegate stepped to the front waving a banner, one side of which read: "Des Moines, the largest city in the world without a saloon," and the other, "Iowa's glory, a schoolhouse on every hilltop and no saloon in the valley." From floor to gallery a storm of applause swept over the audience [illegible] uing for a couple of minutes. He closed by saying he believed in no temperance except Gospel temperance.

It was stated from the platform that the attendance of delegates was 14,000 and the session closed by singing the doxology.

At the evening session resolutions opposing the opening of the Columbian exposition on Sunday and denouncing the "whisky ring's" influence in politics were unanimously adopted. President Clark was reelected and a long list of honorary vice presidents representing every state, territory and province. Bishop M. N. Gilbert, of Minnesota, of the Protestant Episcopal church, delivered an address on the need, strength and growth of the Endeavor movement, which he thought an indication of a rapidly approaching millennium.

The consecration service began with fifty or more personal testimonies, and then Indiana, Ohio, Minnesota and others in response to calls from the chairman renewed their consecration in songs or in repeated verses of scripture. A song by Mr. Sankey and singing by the congregation closed the tenth annual convention.

[The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor is one of the most remarkable movements of the age. Its membership embracing, as it does, one-sixtieth of the population of the United States. It is known in every civilized country on the globe and comprises, in all, 115,000 societies. The first society of Christian endeavor was formed February 2, 1881, at Portland, Me., in Williston church, by its pastor, Rev. F. E. Clark. It was established "for the training of young converts in the duties of church membership; to promote an earnest Christian life among its members, to increase their mutual acquaintance and to make them more useful in the service of God." There has been no swerving from this purpose; all societies are now doing just what the original one was organized to do.

The first society proving a success, others were formed, so that when the first anniversary of the Wilson church society was celebrated in June, 1882, there was a total membership in the different churches of Portland of 481. The United Society of Christian Endeavor, with headquarters at Boston, Mass., is the international representative of the movement. It, however, has no jurisdiction in the slightest degree over any society, nor does it levy an assessment on the same. It simply acts as a bureau of information, and publishes certain leaflets outlining the methods of work. It is governed by a board of trustees, who are representative men of acknowledged ability, and who are selected from the various denominations. The society has for its president Rev. Francis E. Clark, the man who organized this simple yet powerful agency. J. W. Baer is the general secretary, and William Shaw, treasurer.]

FORESTS ABLAZE.

Flames Again Sweeping the Woods in Northern Michigan.

ST. IGNACE, Mich., July 13.—One of the most destructive forest fires which have ever swept the northern peninsula is raging between Marquette and this city along the line of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railroad. For hundreds of miles nothing can be seen but one mass of flames, and the density of the smoke is so pronounced that the sun appears like a leaden ball. Railroad officials have large crowds of men stationed along the track, battling against the fire, but the flames are quickly gaining headway. It is feared the track will be destroyed. In many places between Newberry and Seny the small bridges crossing little creeks are now burning. At several of these places the train was compelled to stop in order to extinguish the fires. The telegraph poles have been burned down and the wires rendered useless.

ESCANABA, Mich., July 13.—Forest fires are still doing great damage across the bay from this city. In Bay de Noc township, this county, a number of settlers have lost all they had, except their homes, and they are not out of danger yet. The crops in this township have been completely destroyed and all the cedar pine and standing hardwood have been destroyed.

Six farmers, S. Thorsen, A. Sanborn, August Arman, old man Larson, N. J. Storm and Andrew Hanson, have lost all that they had. The rest of the settlers of the township are in danger of losing everything they have, as fires are still spreading and there is no indication of rain.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., July 13.—Forest fires which have been raging for several days have been checked somewhat. The smoke has cleared away and reports from Bay Mills and Detour say that rain has about quenched the flames. Telephone connection to inland towns is down and no reliable reports have been received from Gatesville, Drummond, Pickford and other smaller towns. At Detour six farmhouses and as many barns with contents were consumed. No loss of life has been reported, and, should the rain continue, the worst is over. Farmers are fighting the flames and say that the crops will suffer from the heat and sparks.

MILWAUKEE, July 13.—Word has reached here from Metropolitan, Mich., of the damage done there by forest fires. The Metropolitan Lumber Company lost 7,000,000 feet of lumber and all the logs on the river bank were burned down to the water's edge. Their large and well-equipped sawmill was also destroyed. The amount of insurance is not known. Two bridges on the Chicago & Northwestern railroad were destroyed.

OVER A MILLION.

Enormous Debts of the Falls Bank of Louisville, Ky.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 11.—The Falls City bank has closed its doors, making an assignment to the Mechanics' Trust Company. Bad debts and bad management are responsible. For over six months the clearing house has been tiding it over, but it was never able to recover from the panic of last December, when the general money market was so tight. It had a capital stock of $600,000. The liabilities, including the capital stock, will reach $1,200,000. The depositors will probably be paid in full, but the stockholders will be fortunate if they get 10 per cent.

In 1869 this bank was the victim of one of the most sensational robberies in criminal history. The robbers engaged a room overhead and bored through the [illegible] the vault securing $100,000 in money and collaterals.

Death of Aquilla Jones.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 13.—Aquilla Jones died Sunday, aged 80 years. He was one of the old-line democrats of the state, and was appointed to take the census of the state in 1840 by President Van Buren. He performed the same office in 1850. He served in the legislature from Bartholemew county in 1852. He had been postmaster of Columbus, Ind., and of Indianapolis, having been appointed last by President Cleveland. He leaves a wife and eight children.

Jeff Davis' Remains Go to Richmond.

NEW YORK, July 13.—Mrs. Jefferson Davis has addressed a letter to the veterans and people of the southern states, saying that after much anxious thought she has finally decided to give to Richmond, Va., the care of her husband's mortal body.

Died at the Age of 110.

CHICAGO, July 13.—Mrs. Josie Armstrong died here at the age of 110 years. Mrs. Armstrong is said to be the colored woman who nursed Abraham Lincoln's wife, and it is alleged her son played with "little Abe" before the latter had learned the art of splitting rails.

Shortage Made Good.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., July 11.—George R. Perry, ex-city treasurer, is shown to have been short in his accounts $16,967. The shortage has been made good.

Sentenced for Life.

NEW YORK, July 11.—"Frenchy No. 1," charged with the murder of a dissolute woman here, has been sentenced to life imprisonment.

MET SUDDEN DEATHS.

Results of Accidents in Various Portions of the Country.

Forty Killed by a Landslide—Eight Lose Their Lives by the Explosion of a Naphtha Launch—Many Drownings Reported.

SEVEN RAILWAY VICTIMS.

ASPEN, Col., July 13.—By a wreck on the Colorado Midland near here Saturday night at 11 o'clock seven lives have been lost and many people seriously injured. Aspen Junction was the scene of the disaster. A collision occurred between a Midland locomotive and the coaches of the Saturday "Laundry" or excursion train running between Aspen and Glenwood Springs. The coach-load of people returning in happy spirits from the springs, where a few pleasant hours had been spent in the swimming pool, were suddenly plunged in the horrors of a frightful railroad accident which resulted in the killing of seven people and severely scalding and burning six others. Of the twenty-five passengers three colored men, who were in the forward compartment, were the only ones not injured. A 2-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Ellis, of Aspen, was killed instantly. Miss Annie Phelan, of Cardiff, died soon after she was taken out. The other dead are Mrs. Frank E. Ellis, Mrs. J. C. G. Baldwin, Mrs. W. L. Willoughby and Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Rogers. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leonard, Mr. Frank Ellis, Thomas O'Donnell, Miss Mary O'Donnell and James Leach, all of Aspen, were scalded and burned.

MANY KILLED IN A LANDSLIDE.

TACOMA, Wash., July 13.—About 6 o'clock a. m., July 7, those working and living near the North Pacific cannery at Skeena River, Wash., heard a great rushing noise in the direction of the high, steep mountain at the back of the cannery. In a moment an avalanche of rocks and earth and trees was upon the doomed settlement, carrying away everything close to the cannery. The occupants of the houses had time to get outside of the buildings, but, before they could escape from the advancing torrent of debris, were caught and carried along at a fearful velocity. In all nine houses, with their occupants, were destroyed, including the mess-house and residence of the foreman of the cannery. In the messroom at the time of the catastrophe was the young wife of the foreman. She was carried along and dashed to death. The Indians claim that among those destroyed were about forty Indians of the Post Sampson, Sitka, Metlakatlah and Kilimat tribes.

KILLED ON A NAPTHA LAUNCH.

NEW YORK, July 13.—A yachting party composed of a number of New Yorkers left Thirty-sixth street, Brooklyn, at 7 o'clock a. m. Sunday. They were on board the steam launch Agnes Dean. Before they got through with the day they had some exciting adventures. It was along about 2 o'clock in the afternoon when one of the party saw a man clinging to a buoy bobbing up and down in the water off towards Coney Island. The buoy is a great distance from Coney Island. They lowered a small boat and with great difficulty they contrived to get the man from his dangerous resting place. The rescued man said that he was Capt. White, of East Rockaway. He had been on the Ethel, a naphtha launch. This launch, he said, had been chartered by a Mr. Dennis, a wealthy retired diamond merchant of Brooklyn. A party of eight had started on board early in the morning from Rockaway for a day's fishing. The Ethel had cruised about until it reached a point some way out from the shore of Long Beach. Then White said a terrible explosion occurred. It seemed as if all the bottom of the boat was suddenly lifted up and blown into the air. Every person on board was hurled into the water. He sank with the rest. When he came to the surface he saw nothing but wreckage. There was not a body in sight. He swam to a buoy and clung there until rescued.

DEATHS BY DROWNING.

CHICAGO, July 13.—At Columbia park on Sunday John McNeff and Lizzie Kaiser were drowned by the capsizing of a boat in which they were riding. Henry Campbell and Leslia Young lost their lives while boating on Sunday in Lake Calumet near Pullman. John Swanson was drowned in the lake at the foot of Barry avenue Sunday morning, and August Manarsta, aged 17, lost his life while swimming in a lady hole at the corner of Clyborne and Diversey avenues.

NEW YORK, July 13.—Three men were drowned from a small boat on the Hudson river, near the Pennsylvania railroad wharf, Jersey City, Sunday evening. The men were out for an afternoon's pleasure, and were run into by a steamboat which capsized their craft and caused them to be thrown into the water. The men all sank before they could be rescued. Their names are unknown.

RESULT OF A BOILER EXPLOSION.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 13.—A threshing engine exploded at Bruceville, and John Fleck was instantly killed, having his head blown off. Dick Price's breast was crushed in and he will die. William Coan, Herman Milburn, Newton Baker, Charles Gibson and Gude Barr were horribly scalded. The engine was blown to fragments.

Blaze in a Michigan Lumber Yard.

CADILLAC, Mich., July 10.—Fire started in Mitchell Bros'. lumber yard at Jennings Wednesday night, destroying 16,000,000 feet of lumber, a planing mill, engine house and four dwellings. The loss is estimated at about $250,000; insurance, $150,000. The fire is supposed to have caught from the refuse burner.

Parnell Denounced.

NEW YORK, July 13.—The National Federation of America, organized to aid the home rule movement in Ireland, has issued an address bitterly denouncing Mr. Parnell and declaring that he can no longer be regarded as a leader of the Irish movement.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of the Gov. Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich. and are blessed with a daughter, four years old. Last April she was taken down with Measles, followed with a with a dreadful Cough and turning into a Fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones".—Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold; yet you may get a trial bottle free at J. J. Orr's drug store.

Rev. P. S. Henson, D.D.

The Eloquent Pastor of the First Baptist Church of Chicago, Does Suffering Humanity a Great Service by Telling His Experience with a Great Family Medicine. Read:

"An almost fatal attack of La Grippe last winter left me with nasal Catarrh and such susceptibility to bronchial irritation that the slightest exposure would develop it, and a very little effort in public speaking would result in a distressing hoarseness so that I had serious fears of permanent disability. Besides, I suffered with dyspeptic troubles—notably what is popularly known as 'heartburn,' from which I found it difficult to obtain relief. I was induced by a friend to try KING'S ROYAL GERMETUER, and it gives me great pleasure to say that its effect has been as magical as 'Koch's Lymph' is reputed to be, which is also a 'germ destroyer,' though taken in a different way.

"Catarrh, bronchial irritation, and dyspepsia have all disappeared before one bottle of the GERMETUER has been used.

"One of my sons, who has long been a sufferer from Catarrh, has received like signal relief from his old enemy."

FARMER MORRISON'S WIFE.

Down at the farmhouse below the hill,
The blinds were closed, and the wheel was still.

The swirl of the stream and the blue fly's drone
Troubled the preacher's voice alone,

Where, by the open door, he stood,
And talked to the gathering neighborhood,

Of earth and Heaven, and the grave between,
The visible world and the world unseen—

Glancing aside, with solemn air,
To the dead who lay in her coffin there.

Every breath of the soft May breeze
Shook the blossoming lilac trees,

And sent a quiver of light and bloom
Into the hushed and darkened room.

It touched with a gleam the shadowed wall,
It flickered over the funeral pall,

And circled about the tremulous head
Of the nearest mourner beside the dead—

Farmer Morrison, old and gray,
Bent and helpless for many a day.

Up and down, with a dull surprise,
Restlessly wandered his sunken eyes.

Seeking, it seemed, in that crowded place,
The one familiar missing face—

The face that, stony and set, lay hid
Just out of sight 'neath the coffin-lid.

Never a day, till the day she died,
Had the wife been gone from her husband's side;

Thus were the twain asunder reft,
The helpful taken, the helpless left.

And the preacher spoke to the people there
Of the Well divine, in his simple prayer;

The Lord, who giveth and taketh away—
Praised be the name of the Lord for aye!

Now, when the last amen was said,
And the mourners rose to follow the dead,

Farmer Morrison, gaunt and tall,
Stood up straight in the sight of all,

Suddenly steady of eye and limb,
While the people gazed aghast at him.

He laid his hand on the coffin-lid,
He stooped to kiss the face it hid,

Then, spent with that one strong, sudden breath,
Life's latest flicker went out in death.

Thus were the twain again made one—
Trial over and trouble done.

And the preacher said, in his solemn speech:
"The way of the Lord man may not reach.

"Lo! He hath given and taken again!
Praised be the name of the Lord! Amen!"

OVER-THE-WAY.

What Brought Two Sad But Loving Hearts Together.

Over-the-Way — queer name for a woman, isn't it? It was big Jim Gray—he's a telegraph operator on a morning newspaper—who gave her the name. Of course we found out her real name afterward, but none of us at Mrs. Smith's ever spoke of her except as Over-the-Way. It was at the breakfast table—we were all night workers and the breakfast hour at Mrs. Smith's is noon—and Jim sits where he can look out of the window. Miss Elliott—she "does society" on another morning paper and is quite vivacious—noticed that Jim was neglecting his plate of buckwheat cakes and staring with all his eyes across the street. Now, Jim is a master hand at buckwheat cakes, and Miss Elliott, having a reputation for vivacity to sustain, was perfectly justified in remarking that Mr. Gray did not seem quite himself. We laughed, as in politeness bound, and that brought Jim back. He got up and made a flourish with his napkin and said:

"Ladies and Gentlemen: It now gives me great pleasure to present to you the neighbor we have long been expecting—Over-the-Way."

We were so interested that we got right up from the breakfast table and crowded to the windows. Even that reserved and sarcastic Elizabeth Hawkins—she's a telephone girl, and I suppose she's justified in having a poor opinion of mankind and trying to get even out of office hours—forgot her dignity for once and was as interested as anybody. You see, the workmen had been busy on a little cottage right across the street for two months or more. We did not pay any particular attention to it until they began to put in a second-story bay window that was almost as big as the rest of the cottage. After that bay window had done duty as a family joke for two or three weeks we fell to wondering what sort of people had built it and who would occupy such a funny little house. Handsome Harry Roberts—he's a window dresser in a big State street dry goods store and a great hand with the girls—said he knew some woman was responsible for that window and hoped she would be good looking; it would be a pity to spoil such a fine window, she's nice looking even if she is forty and has come down from better days to proof reading—reminded him in her precise, genteel way that young men who had no eyes for anything but a pretty woman sometimes came to grief. The graceless Harry responded that a homely woman was a real grief and a pretty one a joy forever. Here the scamp looked hard at Elizabeth Hawkins. Elizabeth Hawkins looked back at Harry, and I thought she was going to say: "Busy; what's your number?" And John Berry—he's some sort of an editor and doesn't say much, being as reserved as Elizabeth Hawkins and peculiar like—saw Harry and scowled.

Well, as I was saying, we had many a discussion over that little cottage, and finally came to feel a sense of proprietorship in what we called "Over-the-Way." So you see it was a great day for us when Over-the-Way herself appeared.

To be sure, there wasn't much to see when we did get to the window—just a big transfer wagon loaded with new furniture, an express wagon heaped high with household belongings, two drivers, an old negro woman with a gorgeous turban, and a dear little woman in a smart jacket and a wide-brimmed hat.

Harry Roberts declared he was simply perishing for exercise and fresh air and put on his overcoat and strolled past the cottage. He came back and reported that the little woman was a beauty; in fact, he grew quite eloquent over her charms. And then, of course, we had to talk it all over—whether she was married, and if she was, where was her husband, and if she wasn't, was she going to live all alone with the old colored aunty, and so on.

Over-the-Way was evidently a capable little body, for she had the furniture in and the house to rights in no time. And the way old Aunt Amanda—that's the name we gave to the colored woman and her turban—made things fly moved Mrs. Smith to wish with tears in her voice that the days of slavery were back again.

But though the nest was ready no male bird appeared. After a week had gone by we women began to hate "him," as we called the man Over-the-Way was waiting for. We knew there was a "him" by the way she flew to meet the postman and fairly hugged the letter when she got one, and kind o' drooped when she didn't. And there were mighty few days when she drooped, too. But his absence didn't seem to bother Over-the-Way a bit. She was busy morning and night fixing up the cottage for him. The big bay-window was evidently the pride of her life. Every afternoon she'd put on a pretty housedress, snuggle down in a big armchair right in the middle of it, and read over her letters. Harry Roberts thought it was all for his benefit until he found, after repeated trials, that she had no eyes for him except to find his glances and attitudes a subject for mirth. And then one day we found out why it was she had no eyes for Harry or any other man—except one.

It was the second Sunday, just before dinner time—her dinner time—and she was in the window as usual. But she had on a new dress, and to save her she couldn't sit still in her chair more than thirty seconds at a time. All of a sudden she clapped her hands and gave a little jump, and kissed her hand to somebody we couldn't see, and ran from the window. And then a manly young fellow went striding across the street and ran up the steps. The front door blew open with a bang, and Over-the-Way had him by the arm and was dragging him inside in a second. Then she let go of him in a hurry and ran in quicker than she came out. If she hadn't she'd have been kissed right there on the front porch in plain sight of everybody.

We knew they'd show up in the big bay window sooner or later. And sure enough, just after dinner, they came in sight. She was clinging to his arm and just dancing on her toes, she was so happy. And just as she was right in the middle of telling him how fine it was she discovered us at the windows. We could almost see her blush clear across the street, and her young husband straightened up and looked daggers. But John Berry rose to the occasion nobly. He had his overcoat and hat on—he was just going out—and he took off his hat and made a bow, respectful and friendly-like, as much as to say: "We're glad to see you, sir." And we women clapped our hands and smiled, as much as to say: "We're glad he's come at last." And then Over-the-Way and her husband saw it was all right and they smiled and bowed. Over-the-Way patted him on the arm, as much as to say: "Here he is; isn't he nice?" And the young husband put his arm around Over-the-Way and gave her a little hug right before our eyes, as much as to say: "It's all right now; I'll make up for lost time." And then we came away from the windows.

Young Mr. Over-the-Way—we found out afterward that in public life he was a traveling salesman for a big drug firm—staid three days. Then he went away. And Over-the-Way went up into her bay window and bravely kissed her hand to him till he turned the corner. Then she dropped down into her big armchair and turned its broad back to us.

He was gone two weeks, and they were long weeks for Over-the-Way. But everything human has an end and he came back at last. Well, it was the same thing over again; only he staid but one day. Then he was gone ten days. Next time it was a week, and after that it was every Sunday when we sat down to breakfast we found them together in the big bay window. But Sundays are invariably followed by Mondays, and poor Over-the-Way had hard work enough to lay in happiness enough in one day to last her six. Still, from Monday morning to Wednesday night she lived on remembrance, and from Thursday morning to Saturday night on anticipation; so she got along pretty well.

But one day, after six or seven months of this alternate sunshine and shadow, [illegible] Over-the-Way earnest over the little cottage. He came home in the middle of the week and Over-the-Way met him at the door with a scared face. The next morning he left with a big trunk. He had his hat down over his eyes and never looked back at the bay-window. He knew Over-the-Way wasn't there to kiss her hand to him. We didn't see her at all that day, for by and by Aunt Amanda came and pulled down the shades.

He had been ordered off on a three months' trip to South America, and John Berry said "reciprocity" or some such thing was the cause of it. I know we women all hated it, whatever it was.

Over-the-Way came back to her boudoir after awhile, but she didn't seem to be quite the same old Over-the-Way. She got letters, but they didn't come every day now. Sometimes we fairly hated the postman—just as if it was his fault! But when she did get one—why, we could tell a block off when the postman had a letter by the way he walked.

By and by Over-the-Way had a broad, comfortable lounge put in her window and deserted her armchair for it. There she would lie for hours reading or looking idly out of the window. And Jim Gray said one day that he hoped Over-the-Way wasn't going to grieve herself into a decline. If she didn't chirk up pretty soon he believed he'd get her husband's address and write to him to throw up his job and come home. And Harry Roberts said that maybe Over-the-Way wasn't so much better than every other woman after all and liked to lie around in a loose gown and read novels just like the rest of them. Nobody said a word and the next day Harry Roberts told Mrs. Smith that he guessed he'd leave at the end of the week, and he did.

But Jim Gray didn't write, for Over-the-Way did chirk up right away. She got an industrious streak all of a sudden and sat in her big armchair and cut and basted and sewed until Jim said he was afraid she was getting vain and thinking too much of her clothing for such a sensible young woman. Then he suggested that most likely she was getting ready to join her husband in South America. We women all began to talk about spring bonnets and Mrs. Smith left the room. She suddenly remembered that she had left something in the oven.

Jim grew reconciled to the sewing, but he found other things to worry him. He elected himself a bulletin committee of one and made frequent reports. When there were no facts he gave us the benefit of his speculations. One day he announced that he guessed Over-the-Way would begin to pack up before long; she had pretty much finished her sewing.

A few mornings after that there was news. We women all knew it long before breakfast time and John Berry and the other men were told by Mrs. Smith when they came down. The bulletin committee was a little late and we were all at breakfast when he appeared. The moment he entered the room he said he was sure that Over-the-Way was ill; when he got home everything was ablaze with light and there was a doctor's phaeton in front of the house. We could see for ourselves that the bay window shades were down.

"Umph!" said Mrs. Smith. "Is that all you have to tell us?"

"Why, what's happened?"

"Over-the-Way has a visitor."

"So he's back at last, is he? Well, it's time."

"I wish her husband was here; it's a dear little girl."

"Good Lord!" said Jim.

Nobody laughed right then, but a minute later, when Miss Elliott made one of her vivacious remarks, everybody roared—except Jim. Even John Berry and Elizabeth Hawkins, who were looking powerfully glum, had to laugh. Things get out so in a boarding house. We all knew that he had proposed and she had said no.

Just as we were getting through breakfast John Berry gave a groan at the window and turned to us with his face working and his lips trembling. He couldn't speak; just pointed across the street.

Old Aunt Amanda was tying a long streamer of white crepe to the door bell.

"Over-the-Way's dead," said some one in a strained whisper.

"White's for little children," said Mrs. Smith. "It's Over-the-Way's little baby. O dear! O dear!" And the good woman burst out sobbing. None of us were much better off, for that matter.

So it happened that when we made our first call across the street, John Berry and Mrs. Smith went. Mrs. Smith went in, but John paced up and down in front of the house. Elizabeth Hawkins never took her eyes off him. She was as pale as a ghost and yet she didn't look exactly unhappy either.

By and by they came back. As soon as they came in John took out a roll of money and dropped a bill in his hat. "Flowers!" said he, and looked around as much as to ask if anybody wanted to follow suit. We all put in something. Elizabeth Hawkins put in a dollar. I knew she had saved it to buy some Sunday gloves. After John had gone out Mrs. Smith told us how she had talked with the poor young mother in the darkened room and how the little baby was to be buried the next day and how John was to see to everything and go to the cemetery, and how the little coffin was to be put in the vault and kept till the father got home.

By and by John came back with a great box. It was full to the brim with lilies of the valley—not another flower.

Well, John's services were not needed after all; for that very night the young husband came home from South America. And the next day when the carriage drove away from the little cottage with a little white casket on the front seat heaped high with lilies of the valley the poor young husband looked over to us in the windows and made a sort of a bow and put his hand on his heart.

That evening when it was time to go to work John Berry came down with a [illegible] Over-the-Way good-by to us, saying he was going to leave. When he came to the last one—Elizabeth Hawkins—he hesitated, then held out his hand just as he had to the rest of us. She just barely touched it, and both of them looked white and trembling. Just as he was going out of the door she called to him:

"John!"

It wasn't a bit like Elizabeth Hawkins' voice, and we all stared. John came back, but didn't say a word—just stood waiting. And now they both were red.

"Are you going because—because—"

John nodded. I don't believe he could have said a word to save him.

"Well—well—I—John, don't go!"

Long before she finished John had her in his arms and right before us all.

"I said 'no,' John, because I was afraid you were hard and unfeeling—till to-day. Now I know better."

"God bless you, my children!" said motherly Mrs. Smith. The stereotyped old phrase was a relief, and we all laughed in a teary sort of way, then she added:

"When trouble comes and you need patience and forbearance, remember what brought you together."

And we all said:

WHY IT IS POPULAR.

Because it has proven its absolute merit over and over again, because it has an unequalled record of cures, because its business is conducted in a thoroughly honest manner, and because it combines economy and strength, being the only medicine of which "100 Doses One Dollar" is true—these strong points have made Hood's Sarsaparilla the most successful medicine of the day.

Merit may win, but it makes awfully slow time.

The declining powers of old age may be wonderfully recuperated and sustained by the daily use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

FROM NATURE'S STOREHOUSE.

It stands to reason that a medicine which will destroy the germs of contagious blood poison and counteract the effects of mercurial poisoning may be depended on to overcome the diseases that have their origin in malaria, or that have their seat in an impure condition of the blood. This is what S. S. S. has done, and what it will do, as its popularity attests. As a preventive, and a remedy for the long list of affections that display their activity during the spring and summer months, it stands without a rival. The secret of this is that it is a remedy drawn from nature's storehouse.

A GHASTLY STORY.

Terrible Slaughter in a Farmhouse in Nebraska.

J. H. Puterbaugh, His Wife and Four Children Found Dead—Indications That the Husband and Father Committed the Deed.

HE WAS PROBABLY INSANE.

ELLIS, Neb., July 11.—About 4 o'clock Friday afternoon Mrs. Dr. Allen, of Beatrice, came to Ellis on a visit to her brother, John H. Puterbaugh, who lived a mile and a half south of town. She was driven to the farm by Louis Perling and knocked at the door, but receiving no response entered the house, the door not being locked. As she entered she saw her brother on the floor near the door and supposed he was asleep. She spoke to him, but there being no response looked more closely and saw blood and her brother's ghastly face. Mrs. Allen called Perling in, who made an investigation and found a horrible state of affairs. On a bed in the room in which the husband and father lay was the mother with a bullet through her head. In bed with her was a 2-year-old babe, also shot through the head. On a lounge in the room lay a lad of 10 years dead, shot through the head. In the room above was another bed occupied by two young girls, one 13 and one 15, both with bullet holes in their heads. The dead are John Puterbaugh, his wife and four children. How they met their horrible fate is as yet not known, only by surmise. The general belief is that the terrible deed was the work of the husband and father. The motive is not known, as Puterbaugh was a peaceable man in comfortable circumstances, and it is believed no trouble existed in the family.

Coroner Wells, of Beatrice, arrived on the scene shortly after 6 o'clock, and the inquest is in progress. It seems certain that the terrible crime was committed by Puterbaugh. By his side, under his arm, lay a 32-caliber, six-chambered revolver with all the chambers empty. The scene in the house was a horrible one and made the strongest hearted turn away. The faces of the dead, though covered with blood, were calm as though sleeping. No signs of fear were portrayed on any of them and no evidence of a struggle was seen anywhere. All seemed to have been killed while sleeping and all were shot directly through the skull. In every case the pistol was placed close to the head, as powder stain were visible upon the pillows or bed clothing.

Puterbaugh was not a drinking man, and had the reputation of being an honest and peaceable citizen. He suffered from the grip last spring and since then has not been in the best of health, frequently complaining of a pain in his head. He was a man about 38 or 40 years of age, and his wife was a year or two younger. The murdered children were as follows: Carrie, 15 years; Mabel, 13 years; Charles, 10 years; Ralph, 2 years. One son, Allen, 17 years of age, survives. He was away from home at work, having left Wednesday.

We may not have any of your stuck up golden-green bronze breed of turturkeys, but for general usefulness we'll put our gobbler against any bird in America. We missed his familiar phiz from our poultry yard for several days, and while we were tormented with visions of him in our neighbors' grain fields, one of the boys came in one day with the astounding information: "the old gobbler's a settin' !"—and verily it was true. We interviewed him one day on the advisability of introducing a few more eggs under his broad breast—that is, we tried to—but he quickly gave us to understand that the nest belonged to him and he knew as much about setting as any giddy young turkey hen in the yard. Under the circumstances we agreed with him.

WHY IT IS POPULAR.

Because it has proven its absolute merit over and over again, because it has an unequalled record of cures, because its business is conducted in a thoroughly honest manner, and because it combines economy and strength, being the only medicine of which "100 Doses One Dollar" is true—these strong points have made Hood's Sarsaparilla the most successful medicine of the day.

The declining powers of old age may be wonderfully recuperated and sustained by the daily use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

The handsome farm home of T. V. Hoagland was a scene of liveliest enjoyment on Saturday afternoon, July 18th. By invitation of Mr. Hoagland all members of the Hoagland family were invited to gather in a reunion at the old homestead, sixty of whom responded. The shower of the morning cooled the atmosphere for the afternoon, which was pleasantly spent in visiting and renewing old acquaintances, some of whom had not met for many years. The spacious and well-shaded lawn was provided with swings, hammocks and croquet for the amusement of the guests. At the proper time the lunch baskets were brought forth and a sumptuous repast was served, after which a temporary chairman was appointed and an association formed to meet once each year with the following officers:

INFANCY TO OLD AGE.

Nothing is more remarkable than the fact that a medicine which is powerful enough to cure the most horrible form of blood poisoning can be given with impunity to a little child that is ailing; and yet this is the record of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) It is a germ destroyer, a purifier, a great remedial agent; it is powerful, and yet harmless; it is a medicine that contains no mineral poisons; all its results are beneficent; it is compounded from nature's own laboratory, works on nature's lines to cure disease; it restores, revives and reinvigorates the system; it may be used as a tonic by the most delicate woman; it may be given to build up the constitution of a little child, or it may be employed to restore to health the unhappy victim of blood poisoning. In each case it will work wonderful results.

I have not used all of one bottle yet. I suffered from catarrh for twelve years, experiencing the nauseating dropping in the throat peculiar to that disease, and nose bled almost daily. I tried various remedies without benefit until last April, when I saw Ely's Cream Balm advertised in the Boston Budget, I procured a bottle, and since the first days' use have had no more bleeding—the sorness is entirely gone.—D. G. Davidson, with the Boston Budget, formerly with Boston Journal.

Adrian had a lively boom meeting last Friday evening. The prospect of losing the Furniture Company and the Gilliland Electric Company has stirred them up wonderfully. The new move will result in keeping those industries and probably securing more.

An exchange states that brandy cigarettes is the latest device of the devil for ruining the youth. They are made of tobacco that has been soaked in brandy, and the smoker is enabled to be mildly intoxicated without touching a drop of liquor. It is certainly the devil's invention.—Michigan Messenger.

From our special correspondent: We think J. C. Wheaton, of Evans Lake, beats the record. Thursday morning, as the sun was looking up over the hill into Evans Lake, Mr. W. picked up his cradle, spat on his hands, pushed his hat a little to one side, and at noon had cut five acres of wheat. As he is 77 years old, we think there are few to beat him.—Clinton Local.

A few weeks ago it was asserted that the Alliance could never meet with any favor in New England. To-day there are Alliance organizations in that section. The walls around New Hampshire and Vermont have been breached and the next state to be invaded will be Massachusetts. The first national organizer will go into that state to work within the next two weeks.—Michigan Messenger.

Even the veteran "Scof" was seized with the bicycle craze, and really got so that he could ride like a youngster. But for a few days past he has had no fondness for the "masheen." Last Saturday he lost control of a bicycle which he was testing and was carried down the embankment at the east end of Main-st. bridge, his right ankle being sprained and one of his little fingers laid open to the bone nearly the whole length.—Morenci Observer.

The golden harvest is here. Farmers are feeling jolly, and even the fields about Hudson are laughing with the harvest. Hillsdale and Lenawee counties can do much towards supplying that shortage in the grain crops of the old countries of Europe. The yield is so heavy in Southern Michigan that the reapers are being continually broken down in caring for it, and the telephone wires to Jackson, the transfer for machines, have been freighted for ten days with messages for repairs. The telephone operators at Jackson are said to be worn out with the rush of business occasioned by the demand for extras.—Hudson Gazette.

An exchange has this to say of mankind: "None are satisfied. One man is struggling to get justice, some other is flying from it. One man is saving to build a house, another is trying to sell his buildings for less than they cost, to get rid of them. One man is spending all the money he makes in taking a girl to a theater and sending her flowers, in the hope of eventually making her his wife, while his neighbor is spending all the gold he has to get a divorce. The eastern man wants to go west, and the western man wants to go east. The farmer wants to go into the city, and the city man wants to go into the country. The man in trade wants to get out, and everybody not in trade wants to be. The old want to be young, and the young want to be old, and so it goes."

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 23, 1891

Secretary Rusk is expected to be one of the big guns at the G. A. R. encampment to be held at Detroit next month.

Secretary Noble, who has returned to his Washington duties, says he has no notion of retiring from the Cabinet and he certainly ought to know.

The Ohio Democratic platform has the true ring. A tariff for revenue only and free silver coinage will make a strong combination and a winning one.

Ohio stands shoulder to shoulder with the Western states in demanding free silver coinage. Free silver is bound to come, gentlemen. It is only a question of time.

The Ohio campaign this year will be the beginning of the grand final struggle between the people and plutocracy. The Democrats of that State never had a better cause. To deserve success is half the battle.

The people have got cheap sugar, that is true, under the McKinley law, but they will have to pay for the favor, just the same. Louisiana will take $11,000,000 out of the national treasury this year in sugar bounties.

Detroit is having a big season of boom. The Wheelmen's meet last week, the Blue Ribbon meeting this week, then the G. A. R. Encampment, and next the International Fair will keep her citizens all at home during the hot spell.

The Democrats of Ohio did their work well last week. Gen. Campbell was renominated by an overwhelming majority and an excellent ticket was made up. The Cincinnati gang will, doubtless make an effort to defeat him, and herein lies his weakness, but the rural counties will more than make up the Cincinnati defection. It will be a red-hot contest and a close one, with the chances in Campbell's favor.

The Democratic leaders in Washington are figuring that the free coinage plank in the Ohio Democratic platform will get Campbell the support of the Farmers' Alliance of that State and prevent the nomination of a third ticket. Many Democrats do not hesitate to say that without the support of the Alliance Campbell stands very little chance of election. Republicans still express confidence that McKinley will win anyway, but they are not so confident of carrying the legislature, because of the fight the Alliance is making on Senator Sherman.

The campaign of education goes bravely on in Ohio, and the farmers who last year were promised by Major McKinley that wool would advance 3 or 4 cents a pound within a twelvemonth are asking ugly questions. They are getting 2 or 3 cents a pound less for their wool than the ruling prices a year ago. The manufacturers have to pay more for the foreign wool which must be mixed with the domestic article, and the difference is necessarily subtracted from the sum that can be paid for home-grown wool. The tariff debate in Ohio during the coming fall promises to be unusually interesting and instructive.—Mansfield Shield and Banner.

The leading Republican organ in Ohio, the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, sounds the alarm in this fashion:

Let not Republicans be deceived. While here and there throughout the state individual Democrats may sulk or scratch, and while in Hamilton county numerous keen-carving tools may be manipulated, yet the great mass of the Democrats will come gamely up to the mark and will fight for Campbell like Bengal tigers. As a rule, in Ohio, Democratic disorganization does not reach to the polls. There is but one certainty for Republican success—a full Republican vote. Col. Jim Neal, of Hamilton, will again conduct Campbell's campaign. Republicans ought to know from experience that they have in him one of the most adroit and resourceful politicians in the state to combat. Right at the start, Republicans should recognize the fact that they have not got a walk-over, but that they will have to fight their way inch by inch clear up to the citadel, which they must carry by resistless storm. This fall, Ohio will probably have the hottest state campaign it has had since the days of the war.

McKINLEYISM IN FRANCE.

The French Are Making a High Tariff Law—American Corn in France—A Lesson in Trade and Tariffs.

France is now going through the throes of a McKinleyism similar to that with which we were afflicted a year ago. The commission which has for some time been revising the tariff has at length made its report, and naturally enough the McKinleyites of France plead the example of the United States as a reason for reforming their tariff upward. Those people in our country who fancy that we can have our McKinleyism all to ourselves, build up a high tariff wall against outsiders and continue to sell those outsiders our own products in the same quantities as before, will see that McKinleyism is a game which two, and even more, can play at.

At the same time that this report was made public the Paris correspondent of the London Economist notes a piece of industrial news in France which is of interest to our farmers. A few years ago our corn was admitted free into France; then a duty of about 7 cents a bushel was imposed, but last summer, when McKinley was engaged in laying duties on French products, which seemed to threaten the very existence of some of the industries of France, a spirit of retaliation was called forth there, and the duty on our corn was raised to 15 cents a bushel.

Now note the consequences of our McKinleyism. This Paris correspondent calls attention to the fact that the increase of the duty has just had the effect of closing up three large distilleries, two in Marseilles and one of the largest in the country at Bordeaux, all of which used American corn. So great was the suffering which was likely to be caused, to the employes thus out of work that a bill was introduced into the chamber of deputies to appropriate $8,000 to their relief. It is also stated that the increased cost of living resulting from the new French tariff is likely to cause a feeling of jealousy to grow up between the people of the cities and the farming population; which will be but another part of the old war between producer and consumer fought in all lands and in all times.

M. Meline, the French McKinley, made a report in presenting his tariff bill which contains many utterances akin to those of our own McKinley. For instance, he said that the best regime for a nation was, in his opinion, that which secured for it the greatest amount of labor. But M. Meline overlooks, as completely as Maj. McKinley, the very obvious truth that the best regime for a nation is that which secured to it the greatest amount of commodities for its labor, and which saves labor instead of creating it.

In view of the high tariff mania in France at this time it is interesting to note that country's previous experience with tariffs. Sir Joseph Crowe points out that when Cobden, in 1860, negotiated the treaty of commerce between England and France the exports and imports of the latter country amounted to $83,800,000, and in 1880 to $1,700,000,000. Then the French government abandoned the Cobden treaty in 1881. In that year the entire foreign commerce of France reached $1,470,000,000; and in 1885 it had fallen to $1,476,000,000. Like all high tariff plans of the protectionists the French tariff of 1881 was intended to increase the exports of France and thus get what is called a "favorable balance of trade;" but French exports fell off steadily from 1881 to 1885, in which even the Paris exposition caused an increase, but the downward movement has since continued.

WOOL VARIES.

Ex-Consul Schoenhof Writes on the Tariff—Different Qualities of Wool Needed By Manufacturers—Free Wool Necessary—American Labor More Efficient Than That of Europe.

Ex-Consul Jacob Schoenhof, who represented our government at Tunstall, Eng., during President Cleveland's administration, and who had written largely on the comparative cost of production in Europe and America, has begun a series of articles in some of the leading daily papers on the same general subject. Mr. Schoenhof has examined the processes of manufacture minutely in this country and in the various countries of Europe; he has ascertained the rate of wages by the day and by the piece, has found out how long it takes to do the same amount of work in different countries, and his conclusion is that American labor is cheaper than European labor.

While Mr. Schoenhof held the position of consul he was charged by Secretary of State Bayard to make an investigation into the cost of production in Europe. The state department published various valuable reports from him from time to time, but his investigations were not yet fully made public when he was removed from office last summer by President Harrison. His present articles will be in the nature of a continuation of his reports as partly published by the state department.

In his first letter Mr. Schoenhof devotes his attention partly to the question of wool. He shows that free wool is necessary, since the varieties of wool are so great that the manufacturers must have access to all markets in order to get the particular grade of wool best suited to each fabric.

Our own wools show, conclusively, says Mr. Schoenhof, that almost every state of the union produces a different grade of wool. For instance: The wools raised in the far west, in the new territories and states, are considered very inferior to wools raised in the states east of the Mississippi. The pasturage consists of wild grasses, which during the dry season become parched, leaving the dry, sandy soil underneath as a fine dust, or sand, which permeates the fleece, adding much to its shrinkage and changing not only its appearance but the strength of staple, more especially where the soil is alkaline. Such wools lack in luster and spring, and goods made from them show a dead, cottony appearance. They could not possibly be used as an offset in the manufacture of faeries, which we import, amounting in 1890 to $50,000,000, and, adding duties, $35,000,000, represent $85,000,000 American value laid down at the ports, exclusive of freight and other charges.

For the replacing of this vast amount our own wool supply would be entirely insufficient. We raise the corresponding wools in very limited quantities (and, what is more to the point, in receding quantities) in the older states only. Texas and California wools have good felting properties. For combing purposes they are unserviceable. Of combing wools only a limited amount is raised in the states lying east of the Mississippi. But most of the goods used for outer wear are now made of combed and not of carded wool.

The same differences we find in English wools. The Southdown wool is different from the north country wool, the Scotch wool different from the English wools; the Welsh wool different from the English and Scotch. Even in Scotland certain wools are grown in certain parts, so that certain tweeds can only be made from certain Scotch wools. Irish wool is different again. Welsh, Irish and Scotch wools shrink but very little when manufactured into flannels, knit goods, etc., in the washing; German and American wools very much more so. Australian, Cape and Plate wools differ again. But these differences can be made very valuable by adapting the varying qualities to the respective fabrics to which they give their special character.

Mr. Schoenhof says that our wool manufacturers would have been benefited more by the Mills bill than any other class of manufacturers. The Mills bill freed raw wool and gave a protection of 40 per cent. Now, it is well known that the entire labor cost in a pound of manufactured woolens, such as are made in this country, does in very few instances reach as high as 40 per cent. on the cost of a foreign-made article, with which it has to compete. The foreign article not alone covers the cost of the wool, of labor and of the incidental expenses of manufacture, but also the interest of capital and the profits of the manufacturers and dealers handling the goods. The duty of 40 per cent., therefore, covers not alone the cost of foreign labor and the cost of capital and management, but of the freed wool itself consumed in the manufacturing process.

Free wool would have vitalized the whole range of wool manufacture, now in a state of permanent infancy in constant need of sirups and props. The only ones benefited by the wool and war tariff, the shoddy manufacturers, quite naturally have been standing in the breach in defense of the palladium of protection against the enemies of the holy faith. It is not to be wondered at that they put their hands deep into their pockets for the creation of a fund which was to buy an election and a tariff to their liking. But, strange to say, many of those were contributors who could only be benefited by tariff reform, as taken up by the democratic party, downwardly, and injured only by reforming upwardly, as represented by the republican party. The present tariff, the McKinley act, is the outcome of their well considered, deliberate demands. They insisted on obtaining, and they have obtained, a measure which proceeds in a diametrically opposite direction from what their interests actually command.

The McKinley Quality.

One of the absurd promises made by the McKinleyites was that higher duties would not result in higher prices. Some curious instances are coming to light now showing how higher prices are avoided by making a poorer quality of goods and selling them at the old price. McKinleyites thus finding old prices maintained fall to abusing the "mendacious" democratic papers which raised the cry of "McKinley prices."

Some time ago the New York Dry Goods Economist showed how the importers continued to sell a 25-cent stocking by getting an article of a poorer quality.

A similar case has recently been pointed out by Tobacco, a trade journal devoted to the tobacco industry. Tobacco says the refusal of many retail cigar dealers to pay the advanced prices caused by the McKinley tariff has led some cigar manufacturers to adopt a plan which it truly says is "fraught with danger and disaster." They "reduce the cost of production to about the old figures, by using a smaller quantity of leaf per thousand, and thus turn out a cigar which in length and girth pretty nearly the same, is a looser filled, lighter, and practically speaking, a smaller cigar." The manufacturers are thereby enabled to sell at old figures, and the retailers are also able to do so. Such are some of the "beneficences" which McKinley told the country last fall it was now in order to expect from his tariff law.

How the McKinley Wall Works.

The total imports of foreign dry goods entered at the port of New York during January and February amounted to $25,896,000 against $30,155,000 for the corresponding two months last year. The figures for this year show a decrease of $1,606,000 in woolen manufactures, $1,560,000 in cottons, $1,670,000 in silk manufactures and $180,000 in manufactures of flax.

The McKinley law is getting in its work of preventing the American people from getting what they want. Yet McKinley boasted that it was an "American bill."

Cheaper Sugar.

The effect of the removal of the duty on raw sugar has already been felt. Sales of twenty-five ton lots of No. 4 for April delivery have been made in New York as low as 3.40 cents per pound. The tariff seems to be a tax in this case; and when it is removed it seems to be the American consumer who leaves off paying it, and not the foreigner. Free sugar, which was intended to "save the protective system," is going to do just the opposite by teaching the people once for all that the tariff is a tax.

—The barbed wire trust is now under way and prices have recently been "revised." Foreign competition is prevented by a duty of $18.44 a ton.

RECIPROCITY AND THE FARMER.

Agriculture furnishes about 75 per cent of American exports. They are our surplus meats and grains and cottons, the produce of our fields. The remaining 25 per cent are furnished by the "protected" industries in whose behalf the producers of the 75 per cent have been taxed more or less oppressively, from the moderate levy imposed by Hamilton to the monstrous pillage of the McKinley bill.

In spite of the monopoly system of taxes, plundering agriculture at home and discouraging or prohibiting international exchanges, the farmer furnishes this enormous proportion of our exports. What would he not do under favorable conditions? Europe, for instance, takes from us $600,000,000 of agricultural products annually. It is sixty times more than Central and South America take. With access to the markets of the world, on equal terms with all competitors, and freedom to import the commodities for which his own are exchanged, the American farmer would rapidly increase his exportations as well as his net profits. It was ostensibly to help him that reciprocity was devised. If it had been reciprocity with Europe, which wants and takes his products, and not merely with countries which do not want and will not take them, it would have been a relief indeed. But reciprocity in the wrong direction and with the wrong parties leaves him about where it found him—taxed to death at home and shut off from his best customers abroad.

Reciprocity with the Spanish Americas offers no practical relief to our farmer. The monopolists never intended that it should. The farming interest is not one to be "encouraged." The reciprocity which they desire is reciprocity for the benefit of protected manufactures, and that is what Mr. Blaine and Mr. Harrison are accomplishing under the delusive provision of the McKinley bill, so much vaunted as a measure for the benefit of the American farmer.—Chicago News.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years it was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

LORD BOUNTIFUL HATES THE SINGLE TAX.

Lord Bountiful sat in his smoking-room chair,
Discussing economical fax (facts)
"Of all the vile systems that I do abhor,
The older I grow I hate it the more;
It's monstrous," says he, "and it's bad to the core.
I refer to the single tax, my friends;
I refer to the single tax."

"Look here," said his lordship, "now where should we be,
If they brought in this humbugging tax?
Let's examine the question, and what do we see?
(Not that I would care what would happen to me)—
It's my tenants I'm thinking of. How would they gee,
If they brought in the single tax, my friends;
If they brought in the single tax?"

"Now, who would look after them when they were ill—
To think of that my heart racks—
With no Lady Bountiful giving 'em soup,
Or dosing their children when down with the croup.
Could anything ever these poor folks recoup?
For the loss of her kindness? I ax, my friends!
For the loss of her kindness? I ax."

"And how will the peasantry ever learn how (Their principles now are most lax),
To reverence their betters? To whom will they bow,
When those miserable bumpkins that follow the plow
Are allowed to hold land which we occupy now,
Along 'o the single tax, my friends?
Along 'o the single tax?"

And every monopolist there in that room
Gave the system some horrible whacks;
And every one "felt it his duty" to say,
That he looked on a land tax with "utter dismay."
For he knew every good man would long "rue the day,"
If they brought in the single tax, my friends!
If they brought in the single tax!"

Now, a moral there is to this little tale—
A moral dependent on fax (facts)—
Just listen. . . . If spiders now started to rail
At some mixture, which, rubbed on a blue-bottle's tail,
Would make him as tough as a blooming inch nail,
Would you laugh at the spiders or flies? I ax;
At the spiders or flies? I ax.

The moral is coming (it won't gee long),
It's coming in chunks, which I hacks;
Though landlords and other monopolists all,
Live, like spiders, each one in his lordly hall,
There's a mixture I know of, as bitter as gall,
To spiders—the single tax, my flies!
To spiders—the single tax!

DETROIT LAND OWNERS SQUEALING.

The Standard said last week that the holders of acre property in Detroit, Mich., were "bursting with indignation" over the action of the city assessors in raising the assessment on their property to something nearer its real value than had ever been the case before. A late number of the Detroit Journal has come to hand, which not only confirms the report about the "indignation," but tells of one large property owner, Wm. G. Thompson by name, who declares that he is on the warpath, where he intends to stay until he has the political scalp of City Assessor Perren, who is the cause of Mr. Thompson's woes. Thompson is mad clear through. He met Mr. Perren yesterday, says the Journal, and the ex-mayor and land agent began to use unclassical combinations of words:

"Say, see here, Perren," he said, in effect, "you raised the valuation of a certain tract of land $100,000 last year, and now I understand you have tacked on $100,000 more this year? Why——, you know we can't stand that. I'll see that you don't remain assessor long."

"Oh, it is more than $100,000," said Mr. Perren, with his characteristically pleasant smile and quiet manner. "The exact figures are $162,000."

Language is inadequate to express Thompson's state of mind at this frank statement and his threats of vengeance against Assessor Perren. It takes nerve to run up against such aggregations of wealth as the Brush estate, says the Journal, but Mr. Perren is equal to any occasion. He told Thompson that the property was assessed at the same values as surrounding property; that he knew what it is worth, and he guessed there ought to be no objection to the valuation.

The Journal says that Thompson, at the time of this colloquy, did not know the whole truth. There is other property belonging to the Brush estate, and Mr. Thompson did not know when he met Mr. Perren, that that had also been assessed higher than the year before. Thompson was indignant at the hundred thousand increase on one piece of property, whereas the assessment on the entire estate had been raised $300,000 over last year. One piece of ninety-six acres was raised from $88,000 to $154,000; and Mr. Perren thinks it will stand.

The Journal gives in detail the increase in the assessments of a large amount of property in Detroit, and shows that the total increase will reach $12,000,000.

James A. Randall, one of the large property owners affected, takes the matter philosophically. He owns 106 vacant lots, which in 1881 were assessed at $5,000. This year he will without a kick pay taxes on a valuation of $123,760, a jump of 2,400 per cent. in ten years, and it is possible that even this does not represent the full increase in value that has taken place in those lots in that time. It ought to be a great object lesson for the Detroit people.

The trouble about assessments is not all on land; some of it is on the water. Under the law the Detroit assessors have to tax all vessels registered in that port. For some years past this law has been more honored in the breach than in the observance; but this year Assessor Perren, evidently not desiring to be caught by the land owners in an infringement of the law, has put the lake vessels on the tax roll on a basis of 25 per cent. of their value. The ship owners are very angry about it, and threaten to move to a town called Hamtranck, where they will escape local taxation altogether. One man, who owns vessels worth not less than $1,000,000, told Mr. Perren that if he did not reduce the valuation on them to at most $100,000, he would move his vessels immediately and not pay a cent. Mr. Perren said that it could not be done, and as the vessels will go to Hamtranck, Mr. Perren recognizes that Detroit will lose much of its shipping because of its foolish tax laws; he says he would not tax vessels if he could help himself, but "What can we assessors do about it?" The personal property tax advocates ought to see the moral in the assessor's remark.—The Standard.

Single Tax in Missouri.

The single tax men of Missouri are accomplishing wonders in forcing to the front the doctrines that they hold. They have gone about it in the right way. They have not merely lent their aid to the democratic party, but they have procured the nomination and election to the legislature of seven single tax men, of whom one is in the state senate and six in the house. The men thus chosen are not merely members, but leading members, of the branches to which they belong. One of them is speaker of the house, one chairman of the ways and means committee, one chairman of the committee on internal improvements, and another chairman of the committee on manufactures, and others hold places on other important committees. As was shown by an item printed in last week's Standard, the single tax men are pushing the democratic party forward toward free trade, and though they failed in securing an open declaration in accord with their views, H. Martin Williams, says that more than half the members are free traders. Mr. Williams is one of the clerks of the house, and he was appointed to that position with a full knowledge of the fact that he is not merely a single tax man, but the Missouri member of the single tax national committee.

It is not to be wondered at that in a state where the single tax movement is in the hands of such practical men, that the necessity for a state organization is becoming apparent. Whenever the movement reaches that stage, state committees ought to be formed; but, on the other hand, it is folly to form such committees where there is no local activity, and where a new tax on the energies of our scattered people must fail to accomplish any great good, while diverting money and effort from the work already in progress under the direction of the national committee. Let us finish the work on hand, pressing forward to new duties where it is possible, as in Missouri, but in no case forgetting or neglecting the tasks and responsibilities that we have already assumed.

A Comfortable Creed For Some.

Not one in a hundred of those most swift to condemn Mr. George and his convictions know anything at all of the man or his works. I know dozens of educated and able men (that is to say, able to think about bracing their backs against a stone wall) who believe that he is an anarchist, that an anarchist is a communist, a communist a nihilist, and a nihilist a socialist. The general feeling among "men of affairs" is that all these are the same, and that all are strenuously endeavoring to deprive others of their property. They feel that it is their sacred duty (and by a happy accident, greatly to their interest) to maintain "the established order of things"—that is to say, the order of things under which they have succeeded in wresting from their neighbors more than their neighbors have succeeded in wresting from them. The luckiest or most skillful pickpocket is naturally the loudest in praise of the regime of picking pockets, the sincerest in believing it ordained of God and the only possible solution of the problem how to be safe in a crowd.—Ambrose Bierce, in San Francisco Examiner.

Taxing Personal Property.

The committee on legislation of the Real Estate exchange, of New York city, held its first meeting last week, and the president, George R. Reed, in his opening address, discussed rapid transit and other questions likely to affect the price of real estate. He also said that it was to be expected that bills looking to the taxation of mortgages and personal property would be introduced as usual, and that the effect of such taxation would be to drive away from our city capital and business, and thereby ultimately injure the value of real estate. He hoped that the committee would be as successful in defeating such proposals this year as it had been in the past. The intelligent real estate owner who expects to improve land that he holds is beginning to see the folly of taxing personal property as plainly as do the single taxers. He is not likely, perhaps, to become more than a single tax man limited, but that far he is in time sure to come.

"The present revolt in Chili is a protest against landlordism," So says Dr. W. A. Edwards, of Denver, Col., who was for ten years a resident of Valparaiso. "Chili is nominally a republic," says the doctor, "but, practically it has long been an oligarchy controlled by thirty or forty rich and influential landlord families. While the rising is nominally one against the president it is in reality directed against the system of which he is the representative, and while the personal causes for complaint brought matters to a focus they had little to do with the origin of the troubles." For years all legislation has been in the interest of the landlord class, and the people have been as completely ignored as if they had no existence.

THE wide-spreading social evils which everywhere oppress men amid an advancing civilization, spring from a great primary wrong—the appropriation, as the exclusive property of some men, of the land on which and from which all must live. From this fundamental injustice flow all the injustices which distort and endanger modern development, which condemn the producer of wealth to poverty and pamper the non-producer in luxury, which rear the tenement house with the palace, plant the brothel behind the church, and compel us to build prisons as we open new schools.—Progress and Poverty.

WAR REMINISCENCES.

ADVENTURES OF SCOUTS.

The Experience of Two Who Tried to Discover the Enemy.

It was the 20th of November, 1863, and the federal force, under the command of Gen. Meade, was encamped at Mine Run. How large a body of the enemy was near them, and in what direction it was to be feared, were questions yet to be determined. In obedience to the higher authorities, a number of scouts were sent out, in small squads and in pairs. Among the latter, who were of course expected to penetrate deeper into the unknown than the larger parties, were Lee and his friend Knight. In order to accomplish their purpose the better, they had donned confederate uniforms. This, of course, would materially increase their danger in case of capture.

It was late in the afternoon when they rode away from camp, and for several miles no adventure befell them. They had decided to make Orange Courthouse their goal, as the confederate outposts were believed to be just beyond that point. By skillful management, aided by their gray uniforms, they hoped to get in the town such points as would enable them to judge of the enemy's force and exact location. But when they were three miles away, or some half-dozen miles from their starting-point, Knight turned to Lee.

"What is that on that hill yonder?"

"I've just been looking at it," returned the other, "and it looks to me nightily like a battery."

"There's more than a battery there," said Knight, shaking his head doubtfully; "it looks more like a brigade."

"I don't believe there's a brigade of rebs within ten miles," answered Lee, testily, "but let's ride nearer."

Acting on this suggestion, they approached the point where the doubtful body of men were located. They were challenged by a picket. Lee recognized the voice as belonging to an old Richmond acquaintance.

"Why, Burton, don't you know me?" he asked, with great heartiness of manner.

Burton looked hard at him through the gathering dusk of the November afternoon.

"Durned if I do, unless its Lee," replied the picket, who, it is hardly necessary to say, was not aware of the 4th Georgia's loss of a sutler.

"Lee it is," returned the scout; "this is my friend, Mr. Knight. Mr. Burton, one of the honorable class of high privates."

"Same as myself," answered Burton, with a short laugh; "happy to meet you, Mr. Knight."

The federal muttered something which might have meant an acknowledgment of the introduction, and accepted the confederate's proffered hand.

"Many of the boys about here, Burton?" inquired Lee, in an off-hand manner.

"Well, the regular picket-guard; the relief will be here in a few minutes. Hi, Jim! did you know Lee was here?"

Thus summoned, the comrades of Burton gathered about the two federals.

"Fourth Georgia, I s'pose, Mr. Knight?" asked Burton, by way of doing the polite; "didn't know you were in the neighborhood."

"Yes, we've been here—that is, hanging round Meade—for some little time; we've heard of your being here, and Lee insisted on riding over to see some of his old friends."

"Did, eh? Well, I'm mighty glad to hear he remembered us so kindly. Sort o' makes a man feel good, these war times. Say, Lee, if you're anxious to renew old acquaintances, there's plenty more on the road."

"Are there?" asked Lee, with genial interest; "and where may they be now?"

"Well, I reckon they're pretty near all of them at Orange Courthouse by this time. Just about, I should say, for there comes the relief."

"But not all of my acquaintances, I suppose?" asked Lee; "another regiment?"

While Burton and Knight had been talking, he had ascertained that this was the outpost of a regiment of artillery, and supposed that some infantry was coming to support it in case of an attack.

"Another regiment! the dickens! It's old Pap Longstreet's whole corps."

"You are joking."

"No, I'm not; it's so, ain't it, Brown?" turning to a comrade; "they've been getting in all the afternoon, and they're just about settling themselves, to salt mule and chicory now. Have a chaw?"

A glance of quick intelligence passed between the two scouts, then, with the rapidity of thought, each had sprung upon the back of the horse nearest to him, and spurred away. The astonished rebs grasped the situation in a moment.

"Spies! Spies! Yankee spies!" they yelled, and fired hastily after the fast-flying figures. "And then and there was hurrying to and fro," as the alarm was given and the chase began.

The fugitives bent their heads down to their horses' necks, and gave the fleet animals the rein. The bullets whistled about their ears, but still they rode on unharmed; the leaden messengers of death tore up the earth under their horses' very feet; but fainter and fainter grew the yells behind them. Onward, still onward; and now they are out of range; now they approach the federal lines, and at last are safe within them, astonishing Gen. Meade with the news of so large a force scarcely nine miles away.—Blue and Gray.

THE sword which Custer used in his campaigns against the Indians, and which he lost with his life at the battle of the Little Big Horn, is now in possession of a Chicago man. Its battered blade is as flexible as whalebone, and looks as if it had been through many a hand-to-hand encounter. It is covered with innumerable designs of drums, flags, cannon and other implements of warfare.—N. Y. World.

cures sand and quarter cracks, split hoofs, sore and contracted feet, corns and all hoof troubles. Stops cracking, shelling and scaling hoofs. Softens and toughens brittle hoofs. It is better than soaking with oil, meal, etc. Should be used on all horses standing on hard floors or driven on hard roads. It also cures scratches, tetter, galls of all kinds, bruises, etc.

TOLEDO, O., April 6, 1891.
I had a horse in my stables that had hoofs so brittle that it was impossible to keep a shoe on his feet. I have used one can of Marshall's Hoof Cure on his hoofs and the horse has been shod for four weeks and the shoes stay on all right. I consider it the best hoof cure I have ever used.

ON THE TENTED FIELD.

SIX DAYS SOLDIERING BY THE MICHIGAN MILITIA AT CAMP CUSTER.

Some Details of Life in Camp with Special Reference to the Experience of the Tecumseh Boys Who Were in It.

The soldier boys of Co. C always look forward to their week in camp with fond anticipations. True, the week's work is generally a test of their physical mettle, and the daily routine of camp life is no boys' play, but it is a change from the hum drum of home life and besides it is a good practical training in the details of army life that can be obtained in no other way. This year the boys had an extra taste of "soldiering" at the very outset, as they were required to march to Britton and take the train there. Accordingly they set out on Tuesday evening last with nearly fifty men in the ranks and "footed it" from Tecumseh to Britton. They were escorted to the latter place by the Kid band, who furnished some of their best music at intervals along the road. Quite a delegation of wheelmen also followed the boys to Britton. Upon arriving at the residence of Albert Warring, they encountered their first hostile attack. They found Mr. and Mrs. Warring at the gate armed with a big pail of lemonade. This was distributed in glasses where it would do the most good and with three cheers and a tiger to the enemy, the boys wheeled into line and resumed their march. They encountered another obstacle at Frank Davidson's, and grounding their arms they marched into the front yard and surrendered at discretion. Here they partook of a lunch of doughnuts, cookies and genuine cow's milk, which the village boys especially appreciated. After three cheers and a tiger and a salute, the lines were reformed and the march to Britton resumed. It was nearly half past ten o'clock when they arrived at that town, but they found a bon-fire burning and the good people of the village were in waiting to receive them. The most notable incident of the march thither was when one of the drum sticks traveled into the ditch taking Ed. Smalledge with it. As the company approached the village they were welcomed with a salute from the city cannon. They found very comfortable quarters for the night in John Britton's barn. They were out again at four o'clock Wednesday morning, and after an excellent breakfast at the Exelby House, they boarded a special train at six o'clock on the Wabash for Whitmore Lake. Co. B, of Adrian, was on the same train, and at Ann Arbor they took on Co. A, of that city.

The train arrived at the lake about 10:30 o'clock, and at noon the camp ground was reached. Our boys were among the first to arrive, of the First Regiment. The grounds were not large enough to accommodate the brigade properly, but Quartermaster General Wood and his staff, who had been there at work for several days beforehand, had brought order out of chaos and fixed up comfortable and systematic quarters for all.

The First Regiment occupied the Southwest corner of the field and next to the Fourth. No decoration of streets was allowed and police duty was never so promptly executed. The tents and streets were kept in neat military appearance. One circumstance tended to cast a shadow over the camp life of Co. C. Co. B, of Muskegon, which has shared with C for many years the dangers and honors, the joys and sorrows of camp life, was stationed far away on the extreme left. G got left on the camp and C got left on G's hospitality and dry lunches. However, Co. E, of Lansing, filled the place admirably, although they are not up to G in filling canteens. The afternoon of Wednesday was spent in getting the tents in proper shape and the details of camp duty regulated. At five o'clock Thursday morning the musician's call was sounded from Gen. Robinson's headquarters, and the bugles then awakened the sleeping soldiers with the reveille. This was the formal opening of the camp. Gen. Robinson christened it "Camp Custer," in remembrance of that distinguished Michigan soldier, Gen. Geo. A. Custer. The daily routine of camp was very similar each day. Below is the daily program, which, with slight variations, was observed during the five days in camp. We give the official program as announced in General Orders:

REVEILLE.—Musicians' Call, 5:00 A. M. Reveille, field music and band, 5:10 A. M.

SETTING-UP DRILL.—Setting-up Drill, 5:30 A. M. Supervised by a Field or Staff officer and one commissioned officer of each company. Recall, 5:50 A. M. Breakfast Call, 6:15. Sick Call, 7:00.

GUARD MOUNTING.—Musicians' Call, 7:30 A. M. Assembly, 7:40 A. M. Adjutants' Call, 7:50 A. M.

BATTALION DRILL.—Assembly, 9 A. M. Adjutants' Call, 9:15 A. M. Recall, 11:15 A. M.

Dinner Call, 12 M. Orderly Hour—First Sergeants' Call, 1 P. M.

BATTALION DRILL.—Assembly, 2 P. M. Adjutants' Call, 2:15 P. M. Recall, 4 P. M. Supper Call, 5:30 P. M.

DRESS PARADE.—Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Monday.

Musicians' Call, 6:10 P. M. Assembly, [illegible] Call, 6:30 P. M.

On Thursday the Second and Fourth Regiments will form first for parade, after that they will alternate with the First and Third. Guard mount will follow as soon after parade as possible.

GUARD MOUNT—(Evening.) — Musicians' Call, 6:10. Assembly, 6:20. Adjutants' Call, 6:30.

On Thursday the First and Third will form for Guard Mount, after which they will alternate as above. Dress Parade to follow Guard Mount.

RETREAT.—On Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Monday Retreat will be sounded as the last parade is dismissed by the adjutant.

Tattoo, 10:00. Taps, 10:30.

All lights, except in officers' quarters, to be at once extinguished, and strict order and silence maintained throughout the camp.

Special events occurred each day which varied the daily routine somewhat and which were of special interest to spectators. On Thursday evening after supper, the 19th U. S. Infantry gave a dress parade. This is the Regiment now stationed at Fort Wayne, near Detroit. It is deservedly held in high repute and is considered a model for militiamen. On Friday afternoon a sham battle took place between the Second and Fourth Regiments which was witnessed by a large crowd. On Saturday the First and Third engaged in another sham contest which was even better than the one of the preceding day. Co. C had the honor to be designated as the "reserve force" in Saturday's battle, and in this trying position the boys acquitted themselves like veterans. Sunday at 4:30 P. M. came a dress parade by the full brigade under command of Gen. Robinson in person. This was considered by competent critics, who have knowledge of military matters, as one of the most brilliant military spectacles ever seen in the State. It was witnessed by an immense crowd. On Monday the special event was the formal entry into camp of Gov. Winans, as Commander-in-Chief of the State Militia. He was escorted into camp by the Nineteenth Regulars, and was received with the firing of cannon, salutes and other ceremonies.

There was but little sickness in camp and the sick ones were well taken care of. A goodly number of spectators was present each day, and the Sunday's crowd was numbered by thousands. The Y. M. C. A. tent was a prominent feature of the encampment and was extensively patronized by both soldiers and visitors.

But coming from general camp news down to particulars, let us give a little special attention to Co. C. Each company had its kitchen and its staff of cooks and waiters, with a spacious tent and two long rows of tables. The bill of fare was good roast beef, tea, coffee, milk, potatoes and other vegetables, berries and fruit, water melons, ice cream, and pie of more than one kind. Will Ross acted as company quartermaster this year for Co. C, and he proved himself a very efficient man for the place. He was assisted by Eugene Hodges, H. Bice and Friend McNeil. The mess tents were eleven in number and they were occupied by the following officers and privates. Capt. Hayden and Lieuts. Crossman and McClure had a separate tent for their own use.

First Sergeant's Tent.—Orderly Sergt. Farley, Clerk Brown, Ali Heidenrich.

Second Tent.—Corp. Hughes, Comfort Chase, Musician Ed. Smallidge, Sam J. McClure, Will Cadwell, Lynn Hardenburg.

Third Tent.—Harry Spaulding, Vin Benaway, Vern Cook, Ernest Van Winkle.

Fourth Tent.—Sergt. Field, Sergt. Walker, Corp. Waldron, Musician Rowland, Private Gamble.

Fifth Tent.—Musician C. F. Skinner, James Riley, Will Lowry.

Sixth Tent.—Sergt. J. Tansley, Sergt. Harry Tansley, Colonel Harris, Ed. Southworth.

Seventh Tent.—Musician Ed. Gray, Corp. Luther, Truman Crosman, Bert Cook, Frank Purdy.

Eighth Tent.—E. Albaugh, C. Joslyn, Robt. McClure, Nelson Aten.

Ninth Tent.—Corp. Westcott, James Westcott, Mart Crossman, Clem Hardenburg.

Tenth Tent. — Quartermaster Sergt. Ross, Sergt. Bidwell, Corp. Macham, Friend McNeil, Mascot Rowland.

Eleventh Tent.—Corp. Howard, Chas. Bidwell, Fred Boyd, Frank Russell, Harry Martin, Don Bowen.

They broke camp on Tuesday morning and after considerable delay Co. C boarded a train for home. They arrived at Britton about three o'clock P. M. Several companies complimented themselves on a forced march under orders. But when a company is so filled with chivalric valor as to make a forced march of six miles with railroad transportation in their pockets, rather than wait four hours for a train, it displays what we call the highest qualities of pluck and patriotism. That is just what Co. C did. They left Britton at five o'clock sharp and made the six miles to Tecumseh in exactly two hours, with three stops. They were met by the Kid band as they marched up Chicago street, who escorted them to the armory. Within fifteen minutes their accouterments and uniforms were laid aside, the soldier boys were civilians again and the camp of 1891 was ended.

THE TATTOO.

Sergt. Will Bidwell has fallen in love with equestrianism. He took Gen. Wood's horse over for him.

Whitmore Lake will do very well for enlisted men, but it is too conspicuous a place for shoulder straps to "take a night off" in.

We hear that Mart Crossman has been invited to wield the drum major's baton in the 4th Reg. band since his performance at Ridgeway.

Private Gamble at first displayed some college airs about sleeping, but was pacified by being allowed an extra blanket and two coats.

Orderly Sergeant Farley did better duty than ever this year. Perhaps it was because he was so ably assisted by his clerk, Corp. Brown.

The boys are greatly indebted to Hospital Steward Hall for a practical application of his medical acumen on the forced march from Britton to Tecumseh.

Musician Rowland beats a good time, and although the famous Murphy Twins of Jackson are a hard pair to draw to, when they and Gus drummed out the regiment there were "three of a kind."

And the new Quartermaster General himself developed extra abilities for that position. He brought order out of chaos with remarkable rapidity and tact and accomplished this result under many disadvantages.

Theo. Wood did not act as company mascot this year, but he was in camp just the same, filling the position of body servant to Q. M. G. Wood. Gen. W. took Theo. along with him, when he was promoted from the Captaincy of Co. C.

Corp. Waldron will never again sleep with an open mouth. He was nearly choked by flying bundles of bearded wheat while sleeping (?) at Britton in that condition. The bundles were with difficulty removed and restored to their owner.

D. T. Hall filled the position of Hospital Steward again this year and filled it with his usual efficiency. He is a very valuable man in that place. He assisted through the entire course of treatment administered by Surgeon Woodward to Supt. Conner's boy for the snake bite.

Capt. Hayden and Lieuts. Crossman and McClure filled their positions most creditably. Although young in service they proved themselves fully equal to their duties. They have good reason to be proud of their men and the men have equally good reason to be proud of their officers.

If any man in Co. C needs constant doctoring it is Sergt. Field. At least he had a constant yearning for Dr. Gamble's medicine chest. And yet one could hardly decide which school of medicine he favored, for he confined his attention to one drug and took that in allopathic doses.

Talk about discipline and subordination! One would suppose such independent lads as Chas. Joslin and Rob McClure would be incorrigible. But the alacrity with which they obeyed Sergt. Farley's command, "Fall in for dinner!" shows that the proper system of discipline will subdue the most stubborn incorrigibles.

Gen. Woodward, brigade surgeon, was complimented by Inspector General Capt. Gardiner, U. S. A., upon having the most complete department in the camp, and the best conducted hospital he had ever seen at any camp of state troops. Gen. Woodward had a chance to test the efficiency of his hospital corps in a way he little dreamed of when he went to camp. Saturday the 12-year-old son of Superintendent Connors, of the T. & A. A. railroad, was bitten by a rattlesnake. He had been used to handling all kinds of reptiles, and not knowing the deadliness of the massasauga's bite, had picked this one up just back of the head, carelessly allowed the reptile to encircle his leg, and almost instantly was struck by its fangs in the calf of the leg, just below the knee. The Surgeon and his assistants put the boy through a course of vigorous treatment at once and saved his life.

TAPS.

The boys returned dusty and sunburned and tanned, but there was not a sick man nor a sore-head among them. They were gone from home exactly one week to an hour, and they came back highly elated over their experience in camp.

If it is true that "not one American in a hundred knows how to take a vacation" the July number of the Ladies' Home Journal has a distinct educational value, for it quite overflows with new and good counsel for summerings; besides the hints for "The Mother in the Country," to which many clever women have contributed, there are helpful words from Mrs. Margaret Bottome and Dr. Talmage; while in the bright page for "The Woman in the City" the lot of the stay-at-home is shown to be not so dreadful, after all. One Dollar a Year; Ten Cents a Copy; issued by the Curtis Publishing Co., 433-435 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The twenty-sixth volume of the Magazine of American History opens with an exceedingly bright and beautiful July number. Too much praise cannot be accorded this unique periodical, which, in becoming immensely popular among all classes of intelligent readers, has proved itself a veritable educator of the public taste. Its bound volumes are prized in the best libraries of two continents above those of any other magazine extant, and, like good wine, increase in value the older they grow. This magazine is invariably entertaining in every line of research, and as a standard authority no college or school can afford to miss it. Its luxurious printing is a perpetual delight.

State Teachers' Institute.

The Teachers' Institute for Lenawee County will be held at Adrian, commencing at 10 o'clock a. m., Monday, July 27, and closing at 4 p. m., Friday, August 14.

The value of the instruction received at these institutes is being very generally recognized by teachers and school officers. As a rule, it has been the experience of County Examiners and other examining officers, that the most successful teachers are those who have availed themselves of the normal instruction offered by these local Institutes.

The daily sessions of the Institute for this year will, as heretofore, be devoted exclusively to topics of special interest to teachers, presented by persons of extended practical experience as teachers, and who have made a special study of Institute work. The evening lectures will be of a popular character.

The institute law allows teachers, whose schools are in session at the time appointed for the County Institute, held under the direction of the State Superintendent, to close their schools during the continuance of such Institute without forfeiting their wages for as many half-days as they are in attendance at the Institute. This provision of law, and the fact that there will be no enrollment or tuition fee exacted, should insure the attendance of every teacher in the county who possesses the true professional spirit.

Full particulars in regard to board, etc., may be obtained upon application to the local committee.

WALTER HOWARD,
Local Committtee.

The Arena for July.

An admirable full-page portrait of Oliver Wendell Holmes forms the frontispiece of the July Arena. A critical paper by George Stewart, D. C. L., LL.D., the well-known editor and critic of Quebec, treats of the life and literary labors of Dr. Holmes, in a manner at once scholarly and absorbingly interesting. Probably the most notable paper in this issue is Edgar Fawcett's "Plutocracy and Snobbery in New York." In it the weaknesses, foibles, and evils of high life in the metropolis are boldly dealt with in a masterly manner, while Prof. Buchanan's closing paper on "Revolutionary Measures and Neglected Crimes" strikes boldly at the very evils which Mr. Fawcett so vividly depicts. C. Wood Davis appears in this number in a paper on "National Control of Railways." Camille Flammarion closes his brilliant paper on "The Unknown." W. D. McCrackan, whose paper on "The Swiss Referendum" in a previous issue of this review attracted such general notice contrasts in an interesting and instructive manner the Swiss and American Constitutions. With the conspicuous impartiality which has ever marked the management of The Arena the editor this month publishes a reply to his own paper on "Socialism" by the well-known Nationalist and Christian Socialist, Rev. Francis Bellamy. The Rev. W. E. Manley, D. D., one of the ripest Bibical scholars of the day, discusses eternal punishment from the standpoint of a sincere believer in the Bible, but a disbeliever in endless punishment. Prof. W. S. Scarborough, of Wilberforce University, discusses "The Negro Question" from a negro's point of view. The editorials, "An Epoch-marking Drama," "The Present Revolution in Theological Thought," and "The Conflict Between Ancient and Modern Religous Thought in the Presbyterian Church," are bright, vigorous, and suggestive. It will be seen that the present number is marked by a great variety of topics, ably discussed by representative thinkers. The Arena is a library in itself, treating all the great living problems of the hour in a comprehensive manner, and containing a vast amount of entertaining and instructive matter in its stories, character sketches, biographical and critical papers.

State Teachers' Institute.

The State Institute for Lenawee county, under the control of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, will be held at Adrian, beginning Monday, July 27th, and will continue three weeks. It will be conducted by Supt. David A. Hammond, of Charlotte, formerly Principal of the Tecumseh schools. Those who desire to secure board or rooms in the City will learn of the arrangements at the opening of the Institute. Inquiries for further information may be addressed to the local committee.

W. H. HOWARD,
Adrian College.

Miss Gertrude Goodell, who sings at Sutton's opera house Monday and Tuesday nights, possesses a rare soprano voice with an extraordinary range. The Saginaw Herald speaks of her as an artist of great ability, and those who heard her sing Abt's sacred solo "Over the Stars there is Rest," will never forget the sweet bird like notes that captivated her audience, and society lionized.

REBEL FIREBUGS.

They Cause a Holocaust in Santiago, Chili.

The Property Destroyed Was Valued at Between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000—Thirty or Forty Lives Probably Lost.

MANY PERISHED.

NEW YORK, July 20. — Special dispatches received say that Santiago, the capital of Chili, has been visited by a most destructive fire by which between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 worth of property was destroyed. Early in the morning of June 5 the fire broke out in a house on Augustinos street, one of the principal thoroughfares of the city, and spread rapidly. Every available engine and fireman was on the scene, but it was not long before the water supply gave out and then hope was very nearly abandoned. The large Catholic university was one of the first buildings to be attacked. It blazed fiercely and so rapidly that many people were unable to leave the building in time. In full sight of the horror-stricken people they fell back into the flames and perished. The Banco de Santiago and the Banco Popular, the Hotel Hermano and the editorial rooms of El Independiente, in the direct path of the fire, were quickly reduced to ashes. It was at this time that the water gave out. The crowds were immense and soldiers were obliged to drive them back with bayonets. The houses on the opposite side of the street caught fire and all that could be done was to watch them burn. Some of the principal business buildings of Santiago were destroyed and there were many narrow escapes. The most exciting of these was that of Mr. Kennedy, the British minister. Almost before he knew it his residence caught fire and blazed so fiercely that it was with difficulty that he escaped. He was partially overcome by the heat and smoke. The German and Nicaraguan legations are also said to have been destroyed. After a considerable period the water rose sufficiently in the mains to allow of its use by the engines. By this time, too, the flames had spent themselves and were at last subdued. It is believed that between thirty and forty lives were lost. Government authorities believe the fire to be the work of insurgent firebugs.

DOWN ON DRINK.

Doings of the Temperance Leaders at Saratoga Springs.

SARATOGA, N. Y., July 17.—The first business before the National Temperance convention yesterday was the reading and discussion of an essay on "Constitutional Prohibition," by A. M. Powell of New York. The essayist and each speaker who discussed his paper were earnestly in favor of prohibition by constitutional amendments. The distinct third party suggestion ran through the whole line of discussion with but one dissenting voice. Mrs. Helen M. Gougar, of Indiana, said there could be no national prohibition until there is a political party behind it, the same as anti-slavery was never successful until an anti-slavery party succeeded at the polls. The following officers were elected:

President, F. H. Clapp, Massachusetts; vice presidents, Dr. A. G. Lawson, New Jersey; Mrs. Mary C. Leavitt, Massachusetts, and Mrs. F. J. Phinney, Ohio. Secretaries, J. N. Stearns, New York; A. F. Winter, Connecticut; Mrs. Campbell Massachusetts. Executive committee, B. F. Denison, Pennsylvania; S. Dickie, Michigan; J. S. Rowlings, Maryland; Mrs. Burgess, Pennsylvania; Rev. A. E. Winter, Connecticut; Miss A. M. Edwards, Ohio, and J. D. Whiteside, Vermont.

A Florida Bank Fails.

PALATKA, Fla., July 18.—The First national bank of Palatka suspended payment Friday owing to a heavy run made upon it and its inability to make temporary loans in New York. The liabilities are about $200,000 and the assets undoubtedly reach that figure, but cannot be realized on immediately at their full value. The capital stock of the bank is $150,000.

Hartley Clifford Pardoned.

MADISON, Wis., July 20.—Gov. Peck has pardoned Hartley Clifford, serving a life sentence in Waupun for the murder of Capt. Pugh, of Racine. The case has attracted widespread attention, application for a pardon having been made to Govs. Rusk, Hoard and Peck in succession. Clifford is about 38 years old and has served eight years of his sentence.

A South American Blaze.

SANTIAGO, July 18.—This city has been visited with the severest fire ever known in South America, the loss being estimated at more than $2,000,000. The British legation was consumed, including all the archives and personal property of the minister. The fire started in a restaurant.

A Town Without Children.

BIRMINGHAM, Conn., July 17.—The discovery has been made that not a child had been born in the White Hills school district in nine years, and that the youngest child attending school is 9 years of age. The population is about 500 persons, and soon the school will have to be abandoned.

Work of the Lightning.

COLUMBUS, O., July 20.—At Roundhead, a rural village in Hardin county, a fire started Thursday night in Young's livery stable, which was struck by lightning and burned. Hoey & Breen's grocery and their new residence and six other houses were also destroyed.

Wheat Exports.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The total exports of wheat from coasts of the United States (including flour as wheat) during the seven days ended yesterday amounted to 2,220,000 bushels, against 2,000,000 bushels the previous seven days.

BLOWN INTO BITS.

Awful End of a Driver of a Wagon Load of Nitro-Glycerine.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 18.—Two hundred pounds of nitro-glycerine which S. G. Bigley, a torpedo man, was taking to the Mount Morris oil field in a two-horse wagon, exploded near Washington, Pa., about 9 o'clock a. m., Friday, blowing Bigley to atoms, killing the horses and wrecking the dwellings of Lee Minton and Mark Hughes, Sr. The concussion shook every house in Washington and caused great excitement. A singular feature of the explosion is that although there were a number of people in the vicinity at the time, all escaped with slight injuries. Bigley was 40 years of age and married.

Followed in Blondin's Footsteps.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., July 18.—Samuel J. Dixon, of Toronto, Ont., walked across the Niagara gorge over the whirlpool rapids Friday afternoon on a three-fourths inch wire cable. Statistics of the Pauper Population in America.

The Total Number in Almshouses in 1890 Was 73,045, Against 66,203 Ten Years Ago—The Males Predominate.

OUR PAUPERS.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The census office has issued a bulletin on the subject of paupers in almshouses in 1890, which shows a total of 73,045, as against 66,203 in 1880. These are divided according to sex and color as follows: Number of males (white), 37,387; number of males (colored), 3,354; number of females (white), 26,191; number of females (colored), 3,113. In the number of colored persons given above are included 16 male and 20 female Indians, and 12 male and 1 female Chinese. The ratio of almshouse paupers to the total population was 1 to 758. The present ratio is 1 to 857. This is a very marked relative decrease. The almshouse system is not keeping pace with the growth of the population at large. The decline in the ratio is due to the very much smaller number of paupers cared for in almshouses in the North Atlantic division, where there has been not only a relative but an absolute decrease in the number. In respect to nativity, not including the colored paupers, who may all be supposed to be natives except the 13 Chinese, of the 66,578 white paupers, 36,656 are native born, 27,648 foreign born and the place of birth of 2,274 unknown. The numerical order of the states according to the number of paupers in almshouses reported in each of them, is as follows:

New York, 10,272; Pennsylvania, 8,653; Ohio, 7,400; Illinois, 5,395; Massachusetts, 4,725; Indiana, 2,927; New Jersey, 2,718; Wisconsin, 2,641; California, 2,600; Missouri, 2,378; Virginia, 2,193; Michigan, 2,016; Iowa, 1,621; Maryland, 1,599; Kentucky, 1,578; Tennessee, 1,546; North Carolina, 1,493; Connecticut, 1,438; Maine, 1,161; New Hampshire, 1,143; Georgia, 901; West Virginia, 782; Alabama, 603; Kansas, 593; South Carolina, 548; Vermont, 543; Mississippi, 494; Rhode Island, 490; Texas, 464; Minnesota, 365; Delaware, 299; Nebraska, 291; Arkansas, 223; District of Columbia, 221; Montana, 132; Louisana, 122; Oregon, 99; Colorado, 87; Washington, 71; Utah, 62; South Dakota, 53; Nevada, 43; North Dakota, 35; Florida, 24; Arizona, 23; Idaho, 20; New Mexico, 1.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 17.—At yesterday's session of the editorial convention, W. E. Tabor, of Denver, offered a resolution expressing sympathy with all efforts made to preserve the purity of the press and urging the judicious use of the blue pencil on sensational and criminal reports, believing that the purer the tone of the paper the more powerful for good it becomes, and the more effective and exalting its moral influence. A number of papers of interest to the craft were read during the session.

The legislative committee recommended that active steps be taken to secure such legislation as will repeal the present law which permits the government to print return requests on envelopes. The resolutions adopted tendered the thanks of the association to the railway officials, the citizens of St. Paul and all who have taken part in the entertainment of the visitors. The new officers selected are as follows: President, W. S. Capellar, of Ohio; first vice president, B. B. Price, of Wisconsin; second vice president, T. At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

"An almost fatal attack of La Grippe last winter left me with nasal Catarrh and such susceptibility to bronchial irritation that the slightest exposure would develop it, and a very little effort in public speaking would result in a distressing hoarseness so that I had serious fears of permanent disability. Besides, I suffered with dyspeptic troubles—notably what is popularly known as 'heartburn,' from which I found it difficult to obtain relief. I was induced by a friend to try KING'S ROYAL GERMETUER, and it gives me great pleasure to say that its effect has been as magical as 'Koch's Lymph' is reputed to be, which is also a 'germ destroyer,' though taken in a different way. Catarrh, bronchial irritation, and dyspepsia have all disappeared before one bottle of the GERMETUER has been used.

PASTE OR DIAMONDS.

A Necklace That Enabled Mrs. Sykes to Meet the Kaiser.

The Duke and Duchess of Beaumonde were about to receive the German Emperor at their villa at Cowes, and Mrs. Sykes had set her heart upon going. Not only was this to be the most superb event of the Cowes season, but a period had now arrived in the career of Mrs. Sykes at which she felt that in one form or another it was imperative that she should meet royalty. For two years—ever since, in fact, Mr. Sykes had converted himself, as he used to express it, from a tradesman into a gentleman by selling Sykes' Soap Substitute to a limited company—Mrs. Sykes had been steadfastly maneuvering herself into society. By reason of her husband's enormous wealth and her own not over scrupulous astuteness she had succeeded up to a point. But though the circles in which royalty moves are not inaccessible to certain portions of the common herd, the line, which even in these days has to be drawn somewhere, had hitherto been drawn at Mrs. Sykes. She had sustained a severe disappointment in connection with the Marlborough house garden party, but defeat only acts as a stimulant on some natures, and as Mr. Sykes, whose one hobby was yachting, was going to Cowes for the Royal Yacht Squadon meeting, Mrs. Sykes was seized with the inspiration that her failure in London might be retrieved by forcing herself into the Duchess of Beaumonde's entertainment to the English and German royalties in the Isle of Wight.

When she came to consider how this was to be accomplished there was one lady to whom Mrs. Sykes' thoughts at once turned. This was a certain Lady Pall Mall, whose husband was afflicted with a chronic impecuniosity which made it extremely difficult for both to keep up the state and dignity befitting their station. Her ladyship, being a young, pretty and clever woman, was often compelled to practice various stratagems and devices in order to keep her own and her husband's head above the waters of debt, which constantly threatened to overwhelm them. Not the least remunerative of the many avocations pursued by her ladyship whereby she contrived to make her rank and position profitable in a pecuniary sense was that of social sponsor and general guide, philosopher and friend to people who, like the Sykes, were at once wealthy, ambitious, vulgar and generally unpresentable. While Lord Pall Mall borrowed money freely from the husbands of those ladies for whom Lady Pall Mall procured invitations, presented at court, patronized and introduced into her set, her ladyship accepted from the ladies themselves numerous handsome and costly gifts.

All this Mrs. Sykes knew and appreciated, and upon it she formed her scheme. It was a scheme, however, in which her husband's co-operation was indispensable, for, in spite of the fact that Mrs. Sykes enjoyed a liberal allowance, her anxiety to shine in the world kept her in a perpetual state of financial embarrassment. At the present moment, so far from having any spare cash in her pocket, she was very seriously in debt. She was obliged, therefore, to confide in her husband before she could carry her scheme into effect. John Sykes had heard a good deal about the Duchess of Beaumonde's party and had every opportunity of appreciating the depth of his wife's anxiety to get there, but he opened his eyes considerably when he was given to understand that with the view of procuring a card Mrs. Sykes contemplated making a costly present of jewelry to Lady Pall Mall.

"You don't mean to say that you want to offer a bribe to a real Countess!" exclaimed Sykes, a vulgar man, possessed of a simple mind and a limited vocabulary.

"Bribe! What a dreadful expression!" answered his wife. "I propose to make her ladyship a present, John, that is all. To one in her position it would be an insult to offer any thing but diamonds. The only question is what form the present should take. I think a necklace."

"It will cost a lot of money, Polly."

"Not more than we can afford," replied his wife. "It might be fifteen hundred—it might be two thousand; but you never were a mean man, John."

To do him justice, John was not. During the last two years he had, in his own phrase, "stuck at nothing" in the way of expenditure for the purpose of enabling his wife to attain that position in the world on which she had set her heart, though, as Mrs. Sykes very well knew, his wrath would have been great if he had known that she had spent several hundred pounds more than he was aware of. He only needed to be convinced that Lady Pall Mall was amenable to the influence which his wife proposed to bring to bear on her, and that there was a reasonable prospect of her ladyship being able to procure the desired quid pro quo. When Mrs. Sykes, by dint of long argument and expostulation, had convinced him on these points he was ready to go and buy the diamonds at once. But he insisted on buying them himself. Mrs. Sykes had not intended this, but she found her husband firm on this point and was too good a diplomatist to contest it.

"You had better call on her ladyship this afternoon and sound her about the business," he said, in conclusion. "Two thousand pounds is a bit of money, and I don't want to jump before I come to the fence. You can see how she takes it before I get the stones, and mind you do it carefully."

Mrs. Sykes did it—whether carefully or not is a matter of opinion. She succeeded, at any rate, in making Lady Pall Mall understand what she wanted and what she was prepared to pay for it. If Lady Pall Mall had been disposed to resent the fashion in which the transaction was approached the price was too substantial for her to betray her sentiments. By the time the two ladies parted a very definite understanding was arrived at. Mrs. Sykes duly reported the result of her mission to husband, and at luncheon time next day the good man placed in his wife's hands a case containing a diamond necklace which made that lady's eyes sparkle.

In due course the coveted invitation arrived. In due course also Mr. and Mrs. Sykes, who had been in their yacht in the Solent for a week past, found themselves among the proud gathering at the Duke of Beaumonde's. While this was happening Lord and Lady Pall Mall were still in town, detained there by his lordship's somewhat superfluous devotion to his duties as an hereditary legislator. On the night of the Duchess' fete they were engaged to dine with a brother peer, who was still waiting for the rising of Parliament; and while Mrs. Sykes was basking in the sunshine of the German Kaiser and his English relatives, Lady Pall Mall was reaping her reward in the contemplation of her glittering necklace of brilliants. For a week her ladyship had kept the present from the knowledge of her lord and master, having, indeed, her own reasons for so doing. To night, however, temptation was too strong for her, and after much doubt and hesitation she came down to dinner with Mrs. Sykes' diamonds round her neck.

It was astonishing how quickly the glitter of the stones caught Lord Pall Mall's often unobservant eyes.

"Why, where on earth did you get that?" he asked.

"It is a little present that I have had," answered his wife.

"A present! Who the dickens from?"

"Don't be alarmed," said her ladyship. "My admirer was no one more dangerous than Mrs. Sykes—Sykes' Soap Substitute, you know."

"Oh, oh! And what have you been doing for her?"

Lady Pall Mall responded in a whisper.

"What fools these people must be!" exclaimed the peer. "Why, the stones must be worth a couple of thousand."

"Oh, no—not half of it," replied Lady Pall Mall, turning away rather hastily from her lord's scrutiny and changing the subject. His lordship returned to it, however, when they came back from the reception that evening.

"The fact is, Alice," he explained, "that things have been going confoundedly crooked in the city the last day or two, and at this moment I am at my wit's end for—"

"Why will you speculate?" interrupted his wife, impatiently. "Things always go crookedly when you have any thing to do with them."

"It is only a temporary difficulty, I assure you. I can't explain the position—you wouldn't understand it if I did; but I must have £1,000 within the next few days; and, if you would lend it to me, that necklace of yours would just save us from ruin."

"How can you ask such a thing!" cried Lady Pall Mall, the tears starting to her eyes. "It is the only decent ornament I have. Will you leave me nothing?"

"Oh, of course, if you refuse, there's an end of it," replied her husband, coldly. "Keep your necklace, by all means, and much pleasure may it give you."

Lady Pall Mall, with all her cleverness and knowledge of the world had one very soft place in her heart, as his lordship well knew. She stood for a moment looking at her husband's careworn and not over intellectual features; then with an impulsive movement she unclasped the necklace and held it out to him.

"Take it and get the most you can for it," she said, but with rather a husky voice. "I hope it may prove as valuable as you think."

With many protestations of gratitude, and a solemn assurance that the stones should be returned in a week's time at the very farthest, Lord Pall Mall took Mrs. Sykes' offering and locked it up in his desk.

Next morning he was absent from home for an hour or two. On his return he dashed up at once to his wife's room and confronted her with a face expressive of the deepest indignation and disgust.

"Alice!" he exclaimed, "are you responsible for this trickery?"

"Trickery? I don't understand you!" replied his wife.

"Did you not know when you gave me these confounded diamonds that they were paste?"

If he had for a moment thought that she did, the incredulity and amazement which his wife betrayed at the question would have convinced him to the contrary. That the stones were paste was proved beyond all question. The young man at Mr. Melchisedek's, to whom Lord Pall Mall had tendered them as security for an advance of one thousand pounds, had detected their true character in half a moment. The question now was, with whom had the imposture originated? As soon as Lady Pall Mall's first outburst of anger and disappointment had subsided, she and her husband debated this question between them very eagerly.

"I think," said Lord Pall Mall presently, "that I see a way of solving the mystery, and, what is more, of getting you your diamonds, with something handsome beside."

"You do!" exclaimed her ladyship.

"I think that I do. The Sykeses are back in town on their way North. I met him in the city yesterday. Ask them to dinner to-morrow, and then do as I tell you."

The same evening Mrs. Sykes was enchanted by the receipt of an invitation to dine with Lady Pall Mall on the following night—not a formal invitation, but a friendly note which might have come, as Mrs. Sykes observed to her husband, from an old schoolfellow. This was a return, indeed, for the £2,000! Of course the Sykes went, and of course Lady Pall Mall put on her diamond necklace for the occasion—a compliment which the worthy proprietor of Sykes' Soap Substitute fully appreciated, and which, coupled with the remarkable affability of his host and hostess, helped to quickly put him at his ease. Indeed, before the dinner was over Mr. Sykes grew quite confidential and entertained his noble friends with many edifying anecdotes of his early life and adventures in the soap trade. In the course of such conversation the talk somehow turned upon Mrs. Sykes' love of finery.

"Oh, you can afford to indulge these tastes," said Lord Pall Mall, with a glance at his wife. "For my part I am always telling Lady Pall Mall that it is folly to spend a fortune on real jewelry when stones can be imitated well enough to deceive the best judge."

"Couldn't deceive me," remarked Mr Sykes, with a knowing air. "Give me a handful of mock stones and one real gem among them, and I'd wager one thousand pound sterling I'd pick the genuine stone out at the first guess."

"Really, are you so good a judge as that?" queried her ladyship, innocently

"Come now, Sykes, you're joking; I think only a professional expert can detect really first-rate paste. But we'll put you to the test. Look at that necklace my wife is wearing; it doesn't compare unfavorably even with Mrs. Silverhook's emeralds, and yet she tells me she only gave fifteen pounds sterling for it."

Mr. Sykes stared. then burst out laughing.

"So that's the story you've told his lordship," he thought, as he looked sideways at his hostess' blushing face. "Well, mum's the word, but I ain't going to be made a fool of, even by a noble lord." And turning to Lord Pall Mall, he continued: "I should be glad to give her ladyship five hundred pound sterling for it. Those stones are real—every one of them."

"I'm sorry to contradict you," retorted Lord Pall Mall coolly, "but really now you are mistaken. My wife's necklace is only paste. You see, I was not far wrong when I asserted that paste sometimes deceives even a good judge."

"I quite agree with his lordship," interrupted Mrs. Sykes, quietly. "You must be mistaken, John;" and she gave her husband a look that said plainly, "It is bad manners to carry an argument too far."

But Mr. Sykes was not to be stopped.

"Well, my lord," he said, "I'm ready to back my opinion, anyhow. I'll bet you any thing you please that the necklace Lady Pall Mall is wearing is made of twenty-five real stones of the first water—and I ought to know."

"Oh, it's hardly worth betting about," said Lord Pall Mall, indifferently. "I'm very glad the necklace is good enough to deceive such an excellent judge as you, but really I seldom bet."

"Afraid—eh—in this case?" sneered Mr. Sykes, who was losing his temper.

At that moment Lady Pall Mall gave Mrs. Sykes the signal to retire, and the ladies left the room.

"I didn't want to discuss the question farther before the ladies," said Lord Pall Mall, as they settled into their seats again. "But I am as confident as you are, and if you really want to back your opinion I'll take your bet to any reasonable figure."

"Say a couple of thousand, if you like," replied Sykes, bumptiously, "and let's decide it as soon as you please."

"Done with you. If you know any expert in the neighborhood, I will send to him at once."

"Send round to Londer & Rydon's. Mention my name and ask them to send Mr. Agate," said Mr. Sykes, with a chuckle at his own astuteness. It was Mr. Agate who had sold him the necklace.

"So be it," said his host. "Shall we go upstairs?"

Within half an hour Mr. Agate had arrived and by Lord Pall Mall's orders was ushered into the drawing-room.

"Excuse my sending for you in this informal way, Mr. Agate, but we wish you to decide a trifling wager. My dear," added Lord Pall Mall, turning to his wife, "just let Mr. Agate look at your necklace."

Lady Pall Mall at once unfastened the necklace. Mr. Agate carried it to the light and closely inspected the diamonds through his pocket lens. The four onlookers waited expectantly.

"Well, sir, what do you say?" demanded Mr. Sykes. "Stones of the first water—eh?"

The expert laid the necklace down, and the stones flashed in the lamp-light as if to affirm their unimpeachability.

"Every stone in the necklace is paste," he said, quietly.

"Then you are the biggest swindler in London," shouted Mr. Sykes, "for you sold me that necklace not a fortnight ago for £2,000."

"I sold you one somewhat similar to this, but"—the rest of the sentence was drowned in an hysterical shriek from Mrs. Sykes, and for some minutes all was confusion.

"I was right, you see," remarked Lord Pall Mall, when he and his wife were presently left alone. "The lady was the thief. I wonder what he will say to her when they get home."

"I hope," said Lady Pall Mall, "that he will tell her to send me the diamonds."

"And I hope," said his lordship, "that he will send me my £2,000."

Mr. Sykes was honest, with all his faults. He did both.—Jewelers' Weekly.

In Memoriam.

Mr. John R. Smith, of this village, died July 11th, '91. Mr. Smith was born Dec. 5th, 1811, thus having reached nearly the full four-score years allotted to man. His birth-place was Romulus, Seneca County, N. Y., where he lived until about twenty-one years of age, and whence he removed to Milan, in Monroe County, Mich. For nearly half a century he remained in his chosen home in Milan, a faithful, industrious, worthy citizen, doing earnestly and well the work of life. There he was married Jan. 1st, 1840, to Miss Betsey A. Mead, and there he reared and lovingly cared for his family of six children. One of these, a son, and the beloved wife and mother passed before him to the unseen land. Four sons and a daughter, with reverent, affectionate regard, cherish the memory of the departed father. During the thirteen years that Mr. Smith has been resident of our village old age and failing strength have forbidden active labor. But his life has been preeminently one of earnest toil. To him, and to such as he, the pioneers of Michigan, we owe our goodly homes with all their comforts.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

MICHIGAN CROPS.

A Large Increase Over the Wheat Acreage of Last Year.

The number of acres of wheat in the state in May of this year, as shown by returns compiled, was 1,581,774, and multiplying by the estimated yield per acre gives 24,671,558 bushels as the probable total yield of the state. This is an average per acre of 16.27 bushels in the southern counties, 12.40 in the central counties, and 11.27 in the northern counties. The area in wheat this year is more than 140,000 acres greater than harvested in 1890. The number of acres of wheat harvested in 1890 was approximately 1,438,200; yield 22,960,099 bushels; an average of 15.96 bushels per acre.

Work of Forest Fires.

The Metropolitan Lumber Company at Metropolitan lost 7,000,000 feet of lumber and all the logs on the river bank were burned down to the water's edge by forest fires. Their large and well-equipped sawmill was also destroyed. The amount of insurance was not known. Two bridges on the Chicago & Northwestern railroad were also destroyed.

Forest fires destroyed the little hamlet of Whitney, on the Chicago & Northwestern road. Seventeen families were homeless and only one store and charcoal kilns were left standing.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by sixty-three observers in different parts of the state for the week ended July 11, indicated that typhoid fever, inflammation of the brain, diphtheria, pneumonia and inflammation of the bowels increased, and typho-malarial fever, pleuritis and cholera morbus decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at thirty-one places, scarlet fever at thirty-five, typhoid fever at fifteen and measles at twenty-seven places.

Michigan Agricultural College.

The state board of agriculture met at the agricultural college in Lansing and made the following appointments for the institution:

Professor of mathematics and engineering, Prof. Charles E. Wing, of Cornell university; assistant professor of mathematics, Warrer Babcock, Jr., of Milan, Mich.; librarian, Mrs. Linda T. DEATH IN A GALE.

Terrible Work of a Cyclone at West Superior, Wis.

A Number of Buildings Demolished—In One a Large Crowd Had Gathered for Shelter—Five of Them Killed and Several Badly Hurt.

A FEARFUL STORM.

WEST SUPERIOR, Wis., July 17.—A terrible storm of wind and rain struck this city from the northwest Thursday afternoon about 3 o'clock. Several small buildings were blown down, but at one spot the storm left appalling proof of its deadly force. A large three-story frame structure on North Third street, near the barge works, partly completed, was blown down on the heads of about twenty workingmen and a score of other people who gathered within its limits for protection. The alarm was sounded and the fire department responded. It was with the utmost difficulty that the undertaking of getting at the real extent of the disaster was prosecuted. A pair of corpses dragged from the ruins formed the basis of about the first genuine information, and dispelled the first hope that no life had been sacrificed outright. Rescuers were hindered and the misery of the wounded doubly intensified by water-soaked garments. The building was a complete wreck. In spite of the pouring rain the visitors at the scene rushed in and assisted the firemen in the cause of rescue. Men in all professions and walks of life stood shoulder to shoulder and worked with only the thought of humanity's sake. The dead so far as known are: John Laur, Charles Lucius, Herman Paussey, John Schofield and an unknown man.

The wind injured the union depot and upset fifteen small buildings, but without causing further fatalities so far as known.

Lightning struck the new Unitarian church, damaging it slightly. Also the boarding house of Mrs. Fisher, on West Second street. It was burned. The patent iron hoisting and unloading apparatus at the docks of the Silver Creek & Morris Coal Company and Ohio Coal Company was blown down and badly damaged. Loss about $5,000. The shipping business of the two companies will be delayed two weeks.

ST. CLOUD, Minn., July 17.—A severe wind and rainstorm accompanied by considerable hail struck this city Thursday afternoon. The hailstorm only lasted ten minutes, but many window panes were smashed. CHRIST AND NICODEMUS.

LESSON IV, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JULY 26.

Text of the Lesson, John iii, 1-17—Commit Verses, 14-17—Golden Text, John iii, 16—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

1. "There was a man of the Parisees named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews."

He belonged to the most religious sect among the Jews, and we may hope that he was an exception to the description given by the Saviour in Math. xxiii, 5, 28.

2. "The same came to Jesus by night, and said unto Him, Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God, for no man can do these miracles that thou doest except God be with him."

See him now in the presence of Jesus, probably a sincere, upright, religious man, but a man without Life (I John v, 12). But he is interested, and he is thoughtful and inquiring. He has seen some of the wonders wrought by Jesus, and he is persuaded that Jesus is no ordinary man.

3. "Jesus answered, and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

Regardless of Nicodemus' flattering words He sees the need of his heart, and at once tells him the only way by which it can be met; he must be born from above (margin), or anew (R. V.). Not religiousness nor outward reformation, but a new creation (II Cor. v, 17).

4. "Nicodemus saith unto Him, How can a man be born when he is old? Can he enter the second time into his mother's womb and be born?"

This reply proves that Nicodemus is only a natural man; he does not understand spiritual things, they are foolishness unto him (I Cor. ii, 14). He has not yet learned the A, B, C of true religion. There are multitudes now of religious people, members of churches, like him.

5. "Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God."

It is probable that Nicodemus, like Joseph of Arimathea, was one of those who waited for the kingdom of God, or, in other words, like Anna, "looked for redemption in Israel" (Luke xxiii, 51; ii, 38), and because he was a good religious Jew thought that of course he must be a child of the kingdom; but see Math. viii, 11, 12. Jesus now repeats what He had said before, but enlarges by explaining that the new birth is by water and the Spirit.

6. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit."

If a person could be born again in a natural way a dozen times he would be no nearer the kingdom, for ever since Adam sinned all, without exception, are born in sin, and are by nature children of wrath.

7. "Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again."

When God says "must" there can be no other way. He has therefore forever settled it that every soul not born from above is excluded from the kingdom.

8. "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit."

"He bringeth the wind out of His treasuries." "He causeth His wind to blow." "The stormy wind fulfills His word" (Ps. cxxxv, 7; cxlvii, 18; cxlviii, 8). The wind is His messenger, doing His work as pleaseth Him, and is visible only by its effects. So the Spirit of God works in the soul.

9. "Nicodemus answered and said unto Him, How can these things be?"

He is still a natural man trying to see spiritual things; a blind man wondering what the light is like; an earthly man puzzled over heavenly things; an intellectual, religious man lacking the one thing needful; but thank God he is inquiring.

10. "Jesus answered and said unto him, Art thou a master (the teacher—R. V.) of Israel, and knowest not these things?"

As a teacher of Israel he should have known that God regarded the heart more than the outward appearance.

11. "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and ye receive not our witness."

In another place He so speaks of His oneness with the Father, and of the Father's speaking the words and doing the works through Him (John xiv, 10), that I conclude that the "we" here refers to the Father and Himself.

12. "If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I tell you heavenly things?"

The very first requisite to believing heavenly things is to receive Jesus as the Son of God and our personal Saviour.

13. "And no man hath ascended up to heaven but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man which is in heaven."

In chapter i, 18, John spoke of Him as "in the bosom of the Father," and here He speaks of Himself as "the Son of Man which is in heaven." Although now seated at the Father's right hand in heaven, yet wherever two or three meet in His name He is in the midst.

14. "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up."

Here is another "must," and if this "must" had never become an accomplished fact the new birth had been an impossibility.

15. "That whosoever believeth in Him, should not perish, but have eternal life."

Israel murmured at God's way and God's bread (Num. xxi, 4, 5). He then sent serpents that bit them, and much people died. Moses prayed, and at God's command erected a brazen serpent upon a pole, and all who looked upon it lived. The serpent lifted up on the pole would suggest that which had bitten them as dead and harmless.

16. "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Let every one write out this verse, inserting their own name instead of the words "the world" and "whosoever," gratefully receive the glorious fact, and thus by the Word and Spirit be born again.

17. "For God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved."

Reader, are you saved? Are you glad that you shall never perish? Are you thankful to Jesus, who came from heaven and suffered in your stead that you might have eternal life? Do you believe that people in Africa, India, China, Japan and the islands of the sea might have eternal life, too, if they could only hear about this wondrous Love of God and wonderful Jesus? If so, what are you doing or willing to do about it? Tell Jesus.

Sailing in the Air.

The following facts about Prof Bartholomew's ascension from Jackson last Saturday are condensed from the Times: The ascension was made from Jackson Saturday afternoon, at 3:30 o'clock, the balloon containing about 3,000 feet of gas. It shot up with great rapidity, and was carried rapidly to the Southwest by a strong wind. It reached a height of nearly two miles, and was a beautiful ascension.

The ship is constructed of iron and consists of a horizontal rod eight feet long, on each end of which is a screw propeller, which is of tin, stiffened with iron rods. Attached to the center of the rods are pedals which work wheels by means of cogs. A seat was arranged above, and the whole attached to the balloon by perpendicular rods and ropes. For thirty miles he kept against the wind, and by the time he got about over Ann Arbor, he became thoroughly chilled, and tired out, and had to desist, letting the balloon drift with the wind. She went back within eight miles of Jackson, veering to the southwest, settling most of the time. When within a short distance of Wampler's lake, he saw the prospect of getting his whole expensive outfit dumped into the water and rather than do this he determined to sacrifice his steering gear.

Cutting it loose it came down with a crash, just north of Wampler's lake, breaking into a thousand pieces.

He sailed along very evenly then, passing over Sand Lake in a southern direction, and gave cottagers and the hotel people a magnificent sight.

He landed in a large field on the farm of Fletcher Daniels.

That gentleman rushed out, and was hurrying to help him hold the machine down, but it slipped away from the Professor, and again shot up into space, going nearly out of sight.

Mr. Daniels hooked up his wagon, and they gave the balloon a chase of twenty miles, finding it just east of Blissfield. It was taken to Blissfield and billed for Jackson. The Professor was dressed in a wine-colored suit, plug hat, cut-away coat, and the marks of the fall he had in the grass are visible on the back of the coat. His right hand was slightly bruised, but otherwise he was all right. He is confident of success with his theory, and would like to try a trip from Adrian during the county fair.

When a man does his best he is sure to succeed, but one of the hardest things in the world is for a man to do his best.

Mr. M. V. Sickly and Mr. Chas. Butz, having tired somewhat of the washing machine business, made arrangements for a little recreation at the Lakes. Accordingly on Saturday last Mr. S. and wife and Mr. B. and wife set out for the shining waters of the Lake. After arriving there they concluded to try their hand at fishing. Mr. V. introduced himself to the finny tribe (he being familiar with the water, having been in the washing machine business for a year or two). He cast in his hook and out came a fine fellow. By this time Mr. B. became excited and determined to compete with his partner in the washing machine line. He scarcely gave Mr. S. a chance to catch any more, as he did not give them a chance to grow more than two inches long before he had them by the gills. This did not suit Mr. S., so they gave up fishing and came home.

TWENTY-NINE LITTLE CHERUBS.

There are parties and parties. But among all the social events which have brightened the local annals of Tecumseh during the months of recent date, the party given by Percy A. Bowen last Saturday carried off the palm. Percy is a fat, hearty, brown-eyed little shaver who lives with his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. N. Bowen, in West Tecumseh, and last Saturday was the first anniversary of his birth. He conceived the happy idea, or perhaps his mother did for him, that he had better celebrate the advent of his second year on this terrestrial sphere by inviting a lot of his baby acquaintances to participate in a juvenile party on that day. Accordingly the invitations were sent out and when the appointed afternoon arrived, all, who could arrange their affairs to leave home and could pursuade their mamas to go along, responded.

At three o'clock the guests began to arrive and before five o'clock twenty-nine little cherubs had put in an appearance. It was a jolly company truly; it was a good looking company; it was a smart, brainy company. We venture to say that a happier company never assembled beneath that roof, and it contained enough political influence in embryo to elect the next governor. There were blue-eyed babies, black-eyed babies and brown-eyed babies, babies with flaxen hair and babies with dark hair, quiet babies and mischievous babies, babies with teeth and babies without teeth, babies of modest mien and babies of great expectations; but there was not a single homely baby among them, no, not one!

After the company had all assembled, a pair of counter scales was placed on the center table, and an inventory of cherubs was taken, with Mr. Bowen himself as master of ceremonies. The guests were all weighed in the balance and not a chick was found wanting. Tecumseh, Raisin, Clinton and Franklin were all represented in the company and there was quite a strife to see which town produced the smartest and prettiest babies. Our sympathies were naturally with Tecumseh, but for obvious reasons we deem it prudent not to express any decided preference on that point.

About five o'clock refreshments were announced and the tables were soon surrounded by a company of mortals, diminutive enough in size, but extravagant enough in crying for—more.

One imaginative mother called it the "Kid Band," and all the others acquiesced without a dissenting voice.

The oldest baby present was two years old and the youngest only two months, their average age being about one year. It was a remarkably good-natured company, too. There were plenty of smiles but no tears, plenty of friendly kicks, but no squalls. And the mothers! Oh, dear, they were happier than the babies, if possible, and well they might be.

At six o'clock they began to take their departure, for many had come several miles and they must all be home before nightfall. Within an hour the little shavers had departed and Percy's party was over. It was a happily conceived affair and very nicely executed, and as the little guests left for home one could hardly help indulging in a few reflections: Did Percy himself realize the significance of his first birthday party? How many of those little prattlers will be making some home bright and happy a year from now? How many ten years hence? Who will cross the river in infancy? Who will grow to man's and woman's estate? How many will sow to honor in the future years? How many to dishonor? Who will become fathers and mothers? Who will be cut down in their prime? How many will enjoy the sweets of riches? How many will taste the bitterness of poverty? How easy to ask these questions, but no prophet can foretell the answers. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. But we believe that those mothers, who were assembled at Mr. Bowen's that afternoon, will return home more than ever resolved to cherish and protect and educate the little treasures which a kind Providence has given them; hoping for the best and brightest, but prepared to meet the stormy days; resolved to perform faithfully their own part, ever leaning for refuge and strength upon the Good Father, Who doeth all things well.

We append a full list of the guests who were present, with their personal characteristics.

WHY IT IS POPULAR.

Because it has proven its absolute merit over and over again, because it has an unequalled record of cures, because its business is conducted in a thoroughly honest manner, and because it combines economy and strength, being the only medicine of which "100 Doses One Dollar" is true—these strong points have made Hood's Sarsaparilla the most successful medicine of the day.

The declining powers of old age may be wonderfully recuperated and sustained by the daily use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

MERIT MEASURED BY SUCCESS.

The wonderful popularity of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) is the natural result of the tests to which the public has put it. The merits of the medicine have remained the same, but the knowledge of the people with respect to its remarkable curative properties has increased until now there is a demand for it wherever the English language is spoken. S. S. S. was first offered as a specific for contagious blood poison. For that it was, and is, truly a specific. But it is now regarded, wherever its virtues are known, as a true specific for for all forms of blood disease. Whole columns could be filled with testimonials to this effect.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY [illegible] 1892

Michigan is surely a favored State this year. We have abundant crops of all kinds to gladden the farmer's heart, and we are free from the ravages of floods, earthquakes and political campaigns.

Mr. W. F. Thomas, a prominent railroad lawyer of Topeka, Kan., has given it as his opinion that the Alliance would certainly support a Presidential ticket of their own next year and that they would control the State of Kansas.

The latest move on the Ohio checker board, looking to the withdrawal of Senator Sherman as a Senatorial candidate, is looked upon as an acknowledgement that the Alliance opposition to Senator Sherman cannot be overcome.

The farmers of Michigan are now harvesting the finest crop of wheat they have had in years. But when they come to market it, they will find the price fixed in the Liverpool market just the same as it was before the McKinley bill became a law.

[illegible]

The Secretary of the Treasury [illegible] McKinley [illegible]

[illegible]

We don't know how much Sam Small the newspaper man and professional evangelist, knows about politics, but he said to a big crowd in New York: "I want to say that no man with the whiskey record of David Bennett Hill will ever get the vote of the South in the Democratic National Convention."

The farmers cannot hoard all their wheat to force higher prices. Their wheat must be sold to pay their obligations. If it were possible to make an absolute corner on wheat it would stop the wheels of business. The farmers will never find relief from their present condition until tariff taxation shall be reduced.

Even newspaper correspondents are sometimes at fault. When the Desert Lake in Southern California began filling up an enterprising scribe telegraphed that an earthquake had cleft the mountains in twain and let in the ocean. It has since been definitely ascertained that the water comes from the Colorado River.

At this season of the year all Government property, no matter how insignificant in value, that happens to be located in the mountains or upon the seashore, is discovered, by the powers that be, to be in immediate need of official inspection, and it usually takes one or more Cabinet officers and a party of friends to do the inspecting, and Uncle Sam he pays the bills.

Gov. Campbell of Ohio used to be a Republican; so did Gov. Boies of Iowa; so did ex-Gov. Grey of Indiana; so did ex-Gov. Palmer of Illinois; so did John F. Andrew, Josiah Quincy, George Fred Williams and Sherman Hoar, in Massachusetts. These instances show a remarkable revolution in politics and the drift of the political tide is all in the same direction.

John M. Thurston, of Nebraska, one of the best posted Republican politicians in the West, says: "During the last six months I have visited two-thirds of the Northern states, and at every point the people were enthusiastic for Blaine. The entire West is for the Maine man, and with his popularity everywhere else, it means that the next Republican convention will be a Blaine mass meeting."

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

TWO IMPORTANT QUESTIONS.

I am inclined to think that these two questions are the most difficult ones a single tax advocate is called upon to answer:

(1) Are there not unearned increments in other things besides lands?

(2) Can not a tax upon land values be shifted?

When I say these questions are difficult, I mean that it is not always an easy matter to convince, even intelligent people, that buildings, e. g., do not increase in valuation as population increases; or that on land values is unlike most other taxes, i. e., can not be recovered from some person other than the one upon whom it is levied. However plainly single tax men may see these truths, it must be borne in mind that the ultimate adoption of the single tax proposition depends upon the conversion of our opponents, or at least those of them who are thoughtful, to our views. I offer the following suggestions, not as containing anything original, but as possibly helpful in certain emergencies.

In the first place, it ought to be understood that when we assert that there is no unearned increment in anything except land, we are stating a general truth. We are not denying that there are fluctuations in the values of labor products or of land. But while increase of population is accompanied by no increase in number of natural opportunities, it is accompanied by a more than proportional increase of labor products. Consequently, while the price of land tends to rise, that of labor products tends to fall. If a person starts from, say, Portsmouth, N. H., and proceeds to the summit of Mount Washington, he will frequently find himself going down hill before he reaches his destination; but, upon the whole, his ascents will amount to more than his descents by several thousand feet. It seems to me that his progress inland is a fair illustration of the course of land values in most, if not all, civilized countries, and his return to the seashore likewise illustrates the mode of the decline of the values of labor products.

The writer had the following instance brought to his notice as an example of unearned increment in a house:

A man leased a lot of land for a period of ten years at the rate of $100 per year. On this lot he erected a house costing $2,000, from the tenants of which house he received during the first year $250. But population began to increase in that vicinity, and the second year he received $300 from his tenants, and the year after $400. Had not that house increased in value, and was not the increased value due to increase of population? Now, the average assessor and the average real estate dealer know that the house was not worth any more, in fact not quite so much, at the end of the third year as it was when first occupied. They know that if the house had been destroyed during the first year that it could have been replaced for $2,000, unless building materials and the wages of labor had in the interim varied appreciably. They know that no insurance company would insure the house for any more than it would cost to replace it, or if a company did so it would not keep its contract. But there are many intelligent people who have to have these things distinctly pointed out to them. Clearness of statement and frequency of repetition are essential to the removal of doubt in a subject as this. Sarcasm, spoken or printed, does not do one bit of good.

Fred Seligman, I think it was, cited the improvement of wine in quality as it grows older as a case of unearned increment, and I have heard the same citation made more than once since the meeting at Saratoga last September. It does not seem to have occurred to the man of letters, and possibly it has not occurred to others, that he might as well have called attention to a hill of growing corn as a case of unearned increment. The farmer brings certain elements into juxtaposition, and leaves nature to do the rest. It is generally considered that he earns about all he gets out of a cornfield. The producers of wine do precisely the same thing that the farmer does—bring grapes in contact with a press of some sort, the juice in contact with a vessel, and the vessel in contact with a cellar or other storehouse. Labor makes the press, the vessel and the storehouse, the ultimate object of all which appliances is to retain the wine in a position where it may be affected by natural forces or processes. Probably wine producers are of the opinion that their product in the end "costs about all it comes to."

Congressman R. G. Horr recently cited the case of a colt's developing a 2:13 gait as an example of unearned increment. But horsemen know that colts of uncertain pedigree do not often develop that rate of speed, and that the training of a trotter is a task which few men are equal to.

But it is not my purpose to attempt to meet all the instances of alleged unearned increment to which my attention has been called. I merely wish to remark, as in the beginning, that while it may be plain enough to us single tax men that there is no unearned increment except in land, nevertheless, it is not so plain to other people, and it behooves us to deal with every alleged instance of such increment in other things in a careful and thorough manner, above all, avoiding even such faint suspicions of sarcasm as the writer may have already laid himself open to in the course of this article.

As to shifting the tax on land values, it ought to be understood that the proposition that such tax can not be shifted is a general one, as is likewise the proposition that a tax imposed upon an article in the course of production can be shifted. Nobody, so far as I am aware, asserts that under no circumstances whatever can a tax upon land values be shifted, or under all circumstances a tax upon, say, houses can be shifted. The tendency of taxes upon land values is to remain with the person upon whom they first fall, and the tendency of a tax upon houses is to rest finally upon the user of a house.

If a tenant rents a piece of land subject to taxes, he will have to pay those taxes, and if the valuation of even the bare land is raised before his lease expires, he will usually have to bear the consequent increase in taxes. But by taking a lease subject to taxes, the tenant is for the time being the virtual owner of the land. On the other hand a tax upon an empty house can not very easily be shifted, and other exceptions to both propositions might be adduced. But generally speaking, if there is an increase in taxes upon houses, capital employed in building must do one of two things: either itself shoulder the increase, or charge it over to occupants, i. e., consumers of houses. If capital accepts the former alternative it must content itself with smaller returns. But it was receiving, presumably, no more than the average return before, and rather than take less it will look for investment in some other direction. But, if the increased taxation is to be charged over to the consumer of houses, practically the consumption of houses will decrease, i. e., people will try to content themselves with less expensive or narrower quarters.

The first effect of the increased taxation might be, consequently, a rise in the rental value of inferior houses, and a decline in the rental value of superior houses; but upon the whole, there is a decreased demand for houses, and, consequently, capital lacks encouragement to invest in that sort of production. After awhile, the increase of population will have so far outstripped the production of houses, or existing houses will have so far worn out, that house rents will rise, and the owners of houses will begin to collect the increase of taxation from tenants in the shape of increased house rents. Capital will then begin to be invested more freely in the production of houses, because it can now count upon receiving the average return. This same explanation will apply to all other products of labor besides houses. Taxation of labor products discourages production, and decrease in production ultimately causes rise in prices.

Taxation upon land values can not discourage the production of land. On the contrary, it, so to speak, increases such production. It causes some land, at least, which was being held for an advance, to be offered at a lower price, and if the tax were so adjusted as to amount to all, or nearly all, of the annual rental value of bare land, all land now held for a rise would either be improved by present owners or offered for sale.

I am aware that this has been stated before, at least the substance of the preceeding paragraph; but I do not recollect having seen in The Standard any very elaborate attempt to explain just how increased taxation upon labor products in the course of manufacture finally tends to rest upon the shoulders of the consumer in the form of increased prices.—H. J. Chase.

The Pennsylvania Law.

Mr. H. C. Lea, a prominent merchant of Philadelphia, has written a letter to the Pennsylvania legislature vigorously protesting against the passage of a bill to tax personal property. Mr. Lea is a large owner of real estate and a very small owner of personal property, which makes his letter all the stronger. He says:

As a heavy taxpayer I have naturally given the subject of taxation some thought for many years past, and my conviction is settled that real property is the surest and fairest basis on which to levy the public revenue. It can not elude the assessor, as the great bulk of personal property can; its value can be estimated with reasonable accuracy, and is not subject to violent or sudden fluctuations. The difference between land at $25 an acre and $25 a square foot is simply that the latter is surrounded by capital and business, while the former is remote from these sources of value. Of all classes in the community, the land-owner is the one most interested in having capital and business untrammeled to earn the largest profits. He gets, sooner or later, his share in those profits, and it is suicidal for him to drive away that which alone gives his land its especial value over government lands in the territories.

The bill provides for a complete inventory of the personal effects of every person, firm and corporation, including household furniture and tools, and then provides that the inventories shall be printed and distributed to all the taxpayers, so that each one may play the spy on his neighbor and see whether he has made a true return or not. As there are 225,000 taxable persons in Philadelphia, the lists would fill several volumes, so that each person would have a small library presented to him every year at the public expense, consisting of a detailed statement of everybody's assets and liabilities.

Where the Single Tax Would Fall.

One wouldn't think that the area of New York city and Brooklyn was larger in 1880 than that of Arkansas, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska and Kansas combined. Well, it isn't in superficial area, but when it comes to the value of the two areas it is much larger, as is shown by the figures. The total for the two cities in that year was $1,149,406,282, and for the six states $1,101,952,049. This fact was brought out by William Bloch in the Osage county, Kas., Times, to show that the really valuable lands that would have to bear the burden of taxation under the single tax would not consist of farm lands at all, but of the immensely high priced lots in our cities. The new census (for 1890) will probably show that the land values of New York city and Brooklyn have increased in the last ten years sufficiently to necessitate the adding of a couple or three more states to the list prepared by Mr. Bloch.

WHERE do you find land relatively low, will you not find wages relatively high? And wherever land is high, will you not find wages low? As land increases in value, poverty deepens and pauperism appears.

SLAVES OF THE TARIFF.

In a speech in the House of Representatives the Hon. Frank H. Hurd of Ohio pointedly shows the slavery to which victims of protection are subjected. He said:

On what ground shall the Government interpose to help the business of one at the expense of another? For you cannot increase the price of goods of the seller without compelling the man who buys them to pay it. I deny the right of the Government to build up one man at the expense of another. If I am compelled by legislation to pay $150 for that which otherwise would cost me only $100, the seller has been armed with the taxing power of the Government to take from me $50 for his own benefit. I deny the right of the Government to surrender the taxing power to an individual. I deny the right of the individual to exercise it. When a man has earned a day's wages they are his own, and he ought to have the right to expend them where he pleases, and where in his judgment they will do him the most good.

If I have by a day's labor earned $1, it is my own. It represents the toil, the anxieties, the life of one day. It is all that I have in material product to represent that day. With that dollar I go to purchase from a Frenchman an article which I wish. The contract is about to be consummated, but the government of the United States steps in with its power and says: "You shall not buy of this Frenchman; you must buy of an American"—a man say, who manufactures this article at Providence, R. I. I go to him with my dollar and propose to buy the article which for that sum I could have obtained from the Frenchman. "No," says the manufacturer, "I charge more than a dollar for this article; you must pay me $2."

If I would purchase from the American I must go back to my toil, and another day must go out of my life in order to get the additional dollar. I earn it and with it I buy the article from the American.

What is the significance of this transaction? By the power of the law I have been compelled to work one day against my will for the benefit of the American manufacturer. All of my efforts and all of my toil for that day have been made his. In other words, for one day I have become his slave. He might just as well have awakened me in the morning hour and under the whip and the spur and the lash have compelled me to work for him until the setting of the sun as to do what he has done. Every dollar of increase of price which the protective tariff occasions is a day of slavery, and every hour of unnecessary labor that it requires is stolen from the invaluable time of individual responsibilities and duties.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years it was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

A VOICE FROM THE JUDICIAL BENCH.

Judge John Chaney of Osceola, Ia., "I contracted sciatic and muscular rheumatism in the army, and suffered most excruciating agony for years. Dr. James Roberts of Osceola, advised me to take Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. I have used eleven bottles, and find that it leaves me in good health. I cannot recommend it too highly."

"This is very well put," remarked the editor as he dropped the poem into the waste-basket.

Purify The importance of keeping the blood in a pure condition is universally known, and yet there are very few people who have perfectly pure blood. The taint of scrofula, salt rheum, or other foul humor is heredited and transmitted for generations, causing untold suffering, and we also accumulate poison and germs of disease from the air we breathe, the food we eat, or the water we drink. There is nothing more conclusively proven than the positive power of Hood's Sarsaparilla over all diseases of the blood. This medicine, when fairly tried, does expel every trace of scrofula or salt rheum, removes the taint which causes catarrh, neutralizes the acidity and cures rheumatism, drives out the germs of malaria, blood poisoning, etc. It also vitalizes and enriches the blood, thus overcoming that tired feeling, and building up the whole system. Thousands testify to the superiority of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier. Full information and statements of cures sent free.

There is nothing like the Restorative Nervine, discovered by the great specialist, Dr. Miles, to cure nervous diseases, as headache, the blues, nervous prostration, sleeplessness, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, fits, and hysteria. WAR REMINISCENCES.

A LETTER WRITING ARMY.

How the Soldier Boys Remembered the Folks at Home.

It is not an easy thing to go into an encampment and not find men busy, hard at work, and you would always see a number of them writing. There never was such a letter-writing army on the face of God's earth. You never could go into camp without finding the men writing letters on the ground, against the side of trees, from which they had torn the bark, on their knees; and never did we women at home in preparing for the sanitary commission fix up comfort bags in which we did not put sheets of paper, postage stamps, envelopes and the inevitable plug of tobacco.

I remember very distinctly when the army came back from the relief of Burnside at Knoxville. Never was there such a tattered demalion looking set of men in the world. They started out in summer blouses; they came back with their feet bound up in rags, so that as they walked they looked like the most veritable scarecrows that you ever saw in a cornfield. One came out of the hospital more ragged than the others, more thoroughly demoralized in his personal appearance. One of the physicians said to him: "Well, my boy, if you don't need clothes I don't know who does." And the happy fellow, looking at him said: "Well, now, I ain't a hankering for clothes, you bet your life, but I am just dead clean heartbroken for a diamond breast-pin."

The army wasn't a good place to go to talk the blues. It wasn't a very good place to indulge sentiments. You were taken off your feet in no time; you were compelled to know that these men had a high sense of humor about them. Said one fellow, coming out one morning when the reveille was sounded altogether too early for his comfort: "When this cruel war is over and I get home in my own house I am going to hire a fellow to come and sound reveille every morning under my window, simply that I may have the pleasure of opening the window and throwing the contents of the washbowl on him."

They did not even die gloomily. Again and again I have heard men say: "Chaplain, the doctor is mistaken about my case. I am going to die, and not live," and turn their faces to the wall and die. And when one man was not so very sick, but who thought he was, and was becoming a hypochondriac and giving vent to his anguish, which was purely imaginary, while talking with him I saw two-thirds of the men in the beds about slip themselves into clothes that would make them a little more respectable in church about the room, one of them pretending to play the banjo, another the violin, another the flute, another the clarinet, another the double base drum. There was not an instrument there, and it was all done in pantomine, but the mimicry was so perfect, and they went through the movements of playing the various instruments so well that they stopped the gloomy outpourings of the hypochondriacs, who were compelled to join in the laugh.

When I was in Switzerland I was one day standing at the door of a railway station, and at the opposite side of the station I saw a railway porter wearing an artificial leg. As I looked at him carefully I thought he was wearing the badge of the grand army. I stepped back to tell my husband about it.

"Oh," said my husband, "of course you know it can not be the badge of the grand army. It is probably some foreign decoration."

But the man crossed over toward me, and I saw it was a badge of the grand army. I immediately forgot all conventionalities and hurried to him, and in the very best French I could muster I asked him how it came about that he, a Swiss railway porter, was wearing the badge of the Grand Army of the Republic of America?

He said, speaking perfect English:

"Madam, I enlisted in the service in your country in June, 1861, and I was mustered out in October, 1865." [Applause.]

"Where did you lose your leg."

"At Gettysburg, and I still remained in the service, as I wanted to see the end. So I got myself put into the invalid corps, that I might do duty in the hospital, and I was not mustered out until October, 1865."

"Then," said I, "if you have lost your leg at the battle of Gettysburg and fought under my country's flag for four years, you are my brother, and I must shake hands with you."

"Said he, "Madame, your America and my America is a good nation to live for, to fight for, to die for. By and by, when the old farmer and mother pass away, I am going back to my America. My brothers are there with their families. I have no family, and I am here to take care of the old father and mother. I receive a pension from the United States government. I am one of its people, a naturalized citizen, one of you not by birth but by adoption, and I am going back some time. Believe me, America is to be the Messiah of nations." Before God, I had thought that myself, but I had never dared say it."—Mrs. M. A. Livermore.

INSIDE WAR HISTORY.

The Story of a Blockade Runner and Several Missing Millions.

In December, 1864, a very swift and light blockade runner was captured off Wilmington, N. C. It had been built for the purpose of running drugs and medicines in to the confederacy, and had made a great many successful trips, when by a concatenation of circumstances and accidents one foggy morning in December she found herself a long way outside of her intended course, and within three hundred yards of the United States cruisers, who immediately captured her without a struggle or any injury to the beautiful prize. One of the officers who was present at her capture declared that he had never seen in any ship such a combination of grace and swiftness. She was condemned and sold in New York on or about the 10th day of February, 1865. Four men became her owners, three of whom are dead and one is living. They had her in machinery very carefully overhauled, everything put in thoroughly good condition, and selected a captain who was known to them all as not only a thorough seaman but a man who could and would keep a still tongue. He was directed to coal up, proceed to Halifax, and there await orders. When he received a dispatch he said it meant that he was to start for Liverpool and go as fast as steam and wind could take him, and it was estimated that he would make the run in about three and a quarter days. He was given sealed orders and told that he would be instructed by telegraph when to open them. He sailed for Halifax February 18, 1865.

The confederacy was then in its death throes. Hood's army had been driven out of Tennessee with great loss of life. Its destitution was something no man can understand who did not see it. Men were absolutely starving and dying for want of food and clothing. Generals of brigades were half clad and wearing boots and shoes taken from dead Union soldiers' feet. How they lived, who did live through it all, is only known to God and them. It was a time which those who participated in it can never forget. Their comrades' faces were gaunt and haggard with privations and famine, and men had in their eyes the look of those whom hunger has nearly made mad. The few horses that were left were like skeletons. Yet how these men fought Franklin and Duck River will bear witness. There was no word of surrender amid all this starvation and death. They preferred to fight, for in the tents of their enemies they found food and clothing, warmth and the breath of life, and they attacked where they could with the courage of trained soldiers and the fearlessness of men almost mad. Never was there seen on North American soil such splendid contempt for death. Lee's army was in almost as destitute a condition, and any day might see the end of the confederacy. Time went on. February passed away, then March, and the waiting captain got no word. He kept his fires banked and his men on board as he had been told. April came, and at 4:30 on the 9th Capt. Blatch received a telegram containing these words: "Go and execute the orders given you in the sealed writing. Open them one day before you arrive in Liverpool." This was all. At 7 p. m. he steamed out of Halifax harbor, and in three days and twelve hours he was dropping anchor in the Mersey off Liverpool. When he arrived at Fastnet Light, the first light seen on the Irish coast, he opened his orders. They simply directed him to deliver two packages of papers inclosed to the addresses on them as soon as he landed, at day or night, and then to report to a well-known firm of ship brokers for further orders, meanwhile to talk with nobody. He obeyed them strictly.

The end of the confederacy had come. Two great London and Liverpool houses sold confederate bonds short till they had out over thirty million dollars of shorts. At that time there were in Liverpool, London and Manchester nine thousand bales of cotton belonging to the confederate government. A week after the arrival of this swift ship the mail steamers brought the news of the surrender of Lee's and Johnston's armies, the final collapse of the confederate states government, and the flight of Mr. Davis and his cabinet. Confederate bonds fell from thirty-five to forty cents to nothing. The American minister in London, Mr. Charles Francis Adams, immediately directed the United States consuls at Liverpool, Manchester and in London to seize all the confederate cotton in those cities and hold it till further orders. But when these officials attempted to execute these orders not a bale could be found. Three million six hundred thousand dollars' worth of cotton had disappeared, and from that hour to this the United States government has never been able to find a dollar's worth of it. Four persons who owned a swift ship that sailed from Halifax the evening of April 9, 1865, could tell where it went to if they were disposed to do so, and were all alive. But all four who planned this mighty coup are dead but one, who is an old man now in a northern city and rich. Among the four were two men who were noted in those days for their wealth and devotion to the union, and two southern men. One of them held a high confidential position at the confederate capital and the other was a prominent confidential European agent of the confederate government. They made on the short sale of bonds not less than twelve million dollars, and on the cotton about three million six hundred thousand more. In other words, the four "landed" about four million dollars apiece, less the expense, which was not over twenty thousand dollars each for the four. Such is one of the curious inside incidents of the great war.—Washington Post.

The Artists Were Off.

When the Alabama was destroyed by the Kearsarge in 1864, there was, of course, great rejoicing in the Northern states, and complimentary tributes were abundantly showered on Capt. Winslow for his achievement. A large oil-painting of the battle was presented to Secretary Seward. It represented the Kearsarge, with flying colors in the foreground; the Alabama half submerged, in the middle distance. One day, when Capt. Winslow went to call upon the secretary, his attention was drawn to the picture, and he was questioned concerning its nicety in matters of detail. He replied that it correctly delineated the state of the sky and sea on that day, and that the portrait of the Kearsarge was a very good one. Here he paused, and some one asked: "But what else, captain? Is there anything wrong?" "Yes," said the veteran sailor with emphasis. "I wish those artists would not always represent the Alabama as smaller than the Kearsarge. She was as large as my vessel and had as many guns and more men!"—Youth's Companion.

CHRIST AT THE WELL.

LESSON V, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, AUG. 2.

Text of the Lesson, John iv, 5-26—Commit Verses, 13, 14—Golden Text, Rev. xxii, 17—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

5. "Then cometh He to a city of Samaria, which is called Sychar, near to the parcel of ground that Jacob gave to his son Joseph."

After the passover Jesus and His disciples tarried in Judea, and many came to Him and were by His disciples baptized (chapter iii, 22; iv, 1, 2). John hearing this rejoiced greatly and was in no way jealous, for his joy was to have people follow Jesus (iii, 29, 30). Jesus, leaving Judea for Galilee, and passing through Samaria, stops at Sychar. Here was Abram's first resting place and altar in the promised land, and here the Lord appeared to him (Gen. xii, 6, 7). Here also the bones of Joseph were buried (Josh. xxiv, 32). It is about thirty four miles north of Jerusalem.

6. "Now Jacob's well was there. Jesus therefore, being wearied with His journey, sat thus on the well. It was about the sixth hour."

See the true humanity of Jesus. He was a real man; a long walk made Him tired. His body, although sinless, needed food and drink and rest, just as ours do. He was touched with the feeling of our infirmities and can have compassion on us (Heb. iv, 15; v, 2). When you are weary just tell Him, for He has not forgotten how it feels, and He feels for you.

7. "There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water; Jesus saith unto her, Give me to drink."

Jesus knowing all people and all people's hearts, knew just how to approach each of them. He asks this woman to do Him a favor by giving Him a drink of water, while in His heart He thought of the living water which she needed.

8. "For His disciples were gone away unto the city to buy meat."

Although he had fed millions of people for forty years with bread from Heaven, and could have commanded birds or an angel to bring food, as in the case of Elijah, yet we never find Him working a miracle for His own benefit.

9. "The Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans."

The woman is surprised at His request, and gives this as her reason.

10. "If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink, thou wouldest have asked of Him, and He would have given thee living water."

Thus replied Jesus, not heeding her question and statement, but, as in the case of Nicodemus, regarding only her soul and its welfare.

11. "Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep—from whence then hast thou that living water?"

We see here the same blindness that was manifest in Nicodemus, proving that the natural man cannot understand the things of God.

12. "Art thou greater than our father Jacob which gave us the well?"

13. "Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again."

Heedless of her foolish questions He keeps to His subject, contrasting the natural water, of which she knew, with the spiritual or living water, of which she knew nothing.

14. "But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst."

Or, as He said in chapter vi, 35, "He that cometh to Me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on Me shall never thirst."

"But the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

It is Himself, the fountain, that He gives to all who receive Him.

15. "Sir, give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw."

She is becoming interested, she forgets the barrier between Jew and Samaritan; she asks of Him, but she knows not what she asks, for she still thinks only of this water and this well.

16. "Jesus saith unto her, Go, call thy husband, and come hither."

Having asked for the water which He had to give, He will now prepare her to receive it, and the first step must be conviction of sin in order to the acceptance of Himself as God's righteousness.

17. "I have no husband. Jesus saith unto her, Thou hast well said, I have no husband."

She thought to deceive him, she knew Him not, nor for a moment imagined that He could read her inmost thought.

18. "For thou hast had five husbands; and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband: in that saidst thou truly."

All things are naked and opened unto the eyes of Him with whom we have to do.

"Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet."

Her conscience has been aroused, her eyes are being opened; she finds that she is talking with no ordinary man.

20. "Our fathers worshiped in this mountain; and ye say that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship."

She would fain turn away from the subject of her own sin and lead the conversation into another channel.

21. "Jesus saith unto her, Woman, believe me, the hour cometh when ye shall neither in this mountain nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father."

He does not insist that Jerusalem is the place. He directs her away from places of worship to the great and only object of worship, even God the Father. Neither place nor sect are the all important points, but an honest, humble heart.

22. "Ye worship ye know not what. We know what we worship, for salvation is of the Jews."

God was pleased to reveal Himself in Israel and through Israel to other nations.

23. "But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship Him."

Notice the words "and now is" in verses 21, 22.

24. "God is a Spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth."

What a word is here for us, with our fine church buildings, and splendid music, and attractive ritual which we call worship!

25. "I know that Messias cometh, which is called Christ. When He is come He will tell us all things."

Perhaps wondering in her heart, even as she said it, if she had not found Him, for no one had ever talked to her like this.

26. "Jesus saith unto her, I that speak unto thee am He."

Now, it is all told, the Father is revealed in the Son, and she has seen the Saviour, the Christ, the King of Israel. He laid bare all her sin, and yet did not condemn her, for He came to save, not to condemn.

MARSHALL'S HOOF CURE

Stops caking, shelling and scaling hoofs. Softens and toughens brittle hoofs. It is better than scaling with oil, acid, etc. Should be used on all horses standing on hard floors or driven on hard roads. It also cures scratches, cracks, bruises, etc.

Toledo, O., April 6, 1891.

I had a horse in my stable that had been so lame that it was impossible to keep a shoe on his feet. I have used one can of Marshall's Hoof Cure on his hoofs and the horse has been shod for four weeks and the shoes stay on all right. I consider it the best hoof cure I have ever used.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 30, 1891.

IN THE FULLNESS OF YEARS.

The Death and Funeral Obsequies of Dr. Increase S. Hamilton.

Another of Tecumseh's honored citizens and aged pioneers has gone to his final reward. Dr. I. S. Hamilton has been in feeble health for several months past and his demise was not unexpected, either by his friends or by the community at large, and yet his death, as he held so large a place in the affections of so many friends, sent a thrill of sorrow through our village. He had been slowly but surely loosening his hold upon life for the past few weeks and at an early hour on Saturday morning last he gave up the struggle and joined the silent majority. For nearly half a century he had been a resident of this village and for forty-three years he had been an honored and successful practitioner of medicine in this vicinity. A biographical sketch of his busy and eventful life, with fitting words of eulogy in remembrance of his good deeds and noble character, appears in the funeral addresses which are given below.

The obsequies were held on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Baptist Church. Friends gathered first at the residence where a brief service was held and the old familiar song "Jesus, Lover of my Soul," was sung by neighbors who had sung it at his bedside, after which the casket was borne to the church, followed by the mourners and intimate friends. The physicians of Tecumseh were present in a body, forming an escort to the bearers. Jno. Margeson, John Fisher, Zack Cook, Wm. H. Mather, J. H. Bramble and A. K. Waldron, officiated as pall-bearers, all of whom had been life-long friends of the deceased. At the church a large concourse of sympathising neighbors and acquaintances had gathered from far and near to pay the last tribute of respect to one, whom in life they had learned to love. The pew of the deceased was draped in emblems of mourning. The pulpit was trimmed with black and appropriate floral emblems, including a sheaf of ripened grain and a sickle. The singing was by a quartette choir, and was adapted to the general solemnity of the occasion. After preliminary services conducted by the pastor, prayer was offered by Rev. W. R. Northrop, of Monroe. A funeral address was given by Rev. F. Adkins and an eloquent tribute by Hon. Wm. S. Wilcox, of Adrian. A brief discourse by the pastor, Rev. Frank Arnold, closed the services at the church. Rev. F. Adkins' address was mainly biographical, the salient portions of which are given below.

The death of Dr. I. S. Hamilton removes from our community a landmark that has long been conspicious, and terminates the career of a noble and useful life. His death followed upon a long and lingering decline with many weary months of suffering, from which it brought to his worn spirit a happy release. Increase S. Hamilton was born in Cummington, Hampshire county, Mass., Jan. 5, 1809. His father, Obadiah Hamilton, of Pelham, Mass., who was a mechanic, and afterward a farmer, had been a soldier in the Revolutionary war. He was the youngest of nine children, all of whom are now deceased. His father died in Monroe county, N. Y., in 1828. Being at the age of fourteen thrown entirely upon his own resources he learned the carpenter's trade, at which he gained his own support for several years. Eager for an education, such as would fit him for professional life, he worked at his trade during the summer months, and went to school and taught school in the winter time, until he reached the age of twenty-two. This period included a course of literary study in the Monroe Academy, N. Y., where he acquired a knowledge of the higher branches of an education, including an acquaintance with Latin and Greek gained under private tutors. In this way he obtained such elements of general culture as were fitted to lay a good foundation for his chosen profession. At the age of twenty-two he entered upon the study of medicine under the direction of Dr. James Willard, of Painesville, O., afterwards pursuing a course of professional study at the Medical College at Fairfield, N. Y., where he was graduated in 1835. He resolved to seek a location in the then territory of Michigan, and arriving in Detroit May 28th, 1835, proceeded thence on foot to the vicinity of Adrian where he arrived at the residence of a brother-in-law, Mr. Graham, two days later. After prospecting through this and adjacent counties, he was induced to settle in what was named the village of Canandaigua, in Lenawee county, which was then expected to attain to importance. In this new settlement Dr. Hamilton erected the first frame dwelling. There also he opened a school—the first school in the place, which, however, as his profession came to engross his attention, he turned over to his wife who conducted it through the winter. In 1837 he moved to Medina where he grew into a large practice which continued until 1844 when he removed to Adrian and formed a professional partnership with Dr. Cadman. In December 1844 he took up his residence in Tecumseh where he has remained a respected and honored citizen for a period of nearly half a century, being for at least 43 years of this time an active, successful and widely known practitioner, until age and infirmity compelled his retirement some four years ago.

His professional fame was extensive and his activity intense and incessant. He was assiduously and conscientiously devoted to the duties of his profession. He was widely and favorably known and trusted by the medical profession in this State. For many years he was a member of the State Medical Society and also of the Southern Michigan Medical Society, of which he was at one time president. He has represented both these societies as delegate to the National Medical Association, of which he was also a permanent member, and, upon his final retirement from active life he was made an honorary member of both these Michigan societies. In October, 1889, he was made corresponding member of the Detroit Academy of Medicine. These honors and trusts show the confidence reposed in him by the gentlemen of his profession, which includes many of the most eminent men in the West.

During the earlier years of his life in this State he held various positions of public and political trust. He was delegate to the county convention which met in Adrian to consider the action of Congress in regard to the settlement of the famous "Toledo War" difficulties, which resulted in the cession to Ohio of the strip of country including Toledo, and acquiring instead the Upper Peninsula. He was one of the clerks of that Convention. He was a member of the first county convention that nominated officers under the State Constitution. Later he was identified with the Whig party and was its candidate in 1842 for member of the legislature. In 1840 he made the first Fourth of July oration ever delivered in Hudson. During all that period he was widely active in the public advocacy of the cause of temperance, and during the War of the Rebellion he was known as a warm, active and liberal supporter of the Union cause.

Dr. Hamilton's religious experience and convictions began in early life, and during his residence in Medina he became a member of the Baptist church in that place. His connection with the Tecumseh Baptist church began at once upon his settlement in this place in 1844. This was about five years after the organization of the Church, so that Dr. Hamilton's connection with it is almost contemporaneous with the entire history of the Church. He has been a recognized leader in its counsels, and an active, trusted helper in all its work. His wise counsel, his generous giving, his ardent devotion to the true interests of the Church will be cheerfully recognized by all the present members who have any knowledge of the past history of the Church. It was Dr. Hamilton who took the first formal step toward the erection of this beautiful temple of worship. He introduced into the Church a resolution, the adoption of which committed it to the immediate inception and prosecution of the enterprise. He was with the Church in all the struggles of those times, and they were times of self-sacrifice and struggle. When at length the house was ready for dedication, and a certain amount remained to be raised, and the work halted, and it was proposed to defer further effort until the evening service, Dr. Hamilton said "No! this house must be dedicated now," and himself promptly offered to assume all the balance that remained, that the house might at once be dedicated to God's service free of debt.

Dr. Hamilton also exerted a conspicuous influence in the affairs of his denomination throughout the State, being an earnest supporter and trusted counsellor in its missionary and educational enterprises. He was for thirty-five years a member of the board of trustees of Kalamazoo College; was identified with the laying of the foundations of this Christian College, always attended the meetings of its Board, and always contributed largely to its funds, even at great personal sacrifice. No man ever had the interests of the College more at heart, and this active connection with its work continued from the beginning of the Institution until his retirement from failing health in 1887.

Dr. Hamilton was thrice married. April 18, 1834, he was married to Sarah B. Wheeler, of Painesville, O., who died in Medina in October, 1842, leaving two daughters, both since deceased, one of whom was the wife of Dr. Wm. Burtless. In 1843 he was again married to Harriet R. Daniels, who died in Tecumseh in July, 1871, leaving also two daughters, both now deceased, one of whom was the wife of Mr. A. L. Brewer, whose daughter is the only lineal descendant now living. Sept. 5, 1873, he was married to Miss Ann E. White, daughter of Thomas and Sophronia White, of Seneca Falls, N. Y. Hers it was tenderly and lovingly to minister to his latest wants and watch his passage into the dark valley.

Dr. Hamilton was a man of intelligence and breadth of culture. Not only in his profession, but in all departments of literary and social progress, throughout his active life, he kept well abreast of the times. His literary and professional culture was founded on a genuine spiritual culture. He knew the Bible; and the truths of revelation were wrought into the texture of his character and life. His gifts, thus cultured, made him a real element of power in the social and religious meetings of the Church, where it was always his grateful joy to exalt Christ as Lord and Savior.

He was a man of very strongly marked personal peculiarities, and these were of such positiveness as sometimes to provoke antagonisms, and not seldom to become the occasion of grief to his friends. But these tendencies were a source of grief to no one more than to himself, and he was always ready humbly to confess a wrong and to seek reconciliation. And it was usually found that antagonisms were the result of misunderstanding, and that the Doctor was moved at heart by a supreme loyalty to truth and duty.

He was a man of generous impulses, and a spirit of almost unbounded beneficence. He was generous to a fault—and generous oftentimes far beyond his means. In him the poor and afflicted had a generous friend, and all worthy objects of public good a cordial supporter.

Along with a famous brusqueness of manner, there was an underlying spirit of genial companionship, and a rich flow of humor. He was strong and intense in his friendships. No man ever prized a friendship more keenly, and no man was ever more ready to serve a friend, or truer to a friendship.

He was a man of undeviating conscientiousness, and sterling honesty of conviction, and uncompromising in his loyalty to truth. He practiced his profession on sincere Christian principles. And underlying all other qualities was a simple childlike Christian faith. If there is anything Dr. Hamilton would have said to-day, above all allusion to his own life and services, however, he might have been gratified by just recognition of these, it would be to hold up Christ to all men as the Savior of the lost, the Friend of the helpless, the Sanctifier of the redeemed. Let this be the last voice from the lips now sealed in death.

Hon. W. S. Wilcox followed with some personal reminiscences. He consented to speak only at the request of one now bereaved, who had been so much to and cared so tenderly for his revered friend. He had known Dr. Hamilton with some intimacy for fifty years. In his death he felt that he had lost a personal friend. Dr. Hamilton was known and esteemed over a wide region these many years. He had called upon a lady to invite her to come to the funeral from Adrian, who said she was unable to come but she was able to say that she would not be here to-day if it had not been for Dr. Hamilton's professional skill and kindness. Dr. Hamilton was born for leadership. That positiveness of character which sometimes caused antagonisms was an intense loyalty to conviction and to right. He was conscientious in the practice of his profession. No night was so dark or stormy that he would not promptly respond to a call where his services were needed. He was loyal to his profession, loyal to his friends, loyal to his church and to principle, and pursued always a straight course toward an honest end. Mr. Wilcox related incidents illustrative of traits of the Doctor's character, and spoke feelingly, paying loving and touching tribute to his honored friend of many years.

The pastor, Rev. F. Arnold, followed in a brief discourse from 1 John 2:17. "He that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

1. The transitoriness of things of earth. Time mocks man's most earnest attempts to gain immortality. Yet

2. Immortality is attainable. It is realized in doing the will of God. The faithful steward of God forever abides.

(a) In the results of the works wrought by his life.

(b) In the personal character attained.

3. In the application of this to our lives, time is valuable only as it lays hold on eternity. In the life and services of the departed, whose career had been sketched was found illustration of this truth, and events and examples fitted to impress its lessons. The thoughts were fitting the occasion and fitly spoken.

A meeting of the physicians of this village was called on Monday the 27th inst., at 10 o'clock a. m. at the office of Dr. S. Catlin. The meeting was called to order at 10:18 a. m. Dr. L. North was elected chairman, Dr. C. M. Woodward, secretary. Present, Dr's. Samuel Catlin, L. G. North, W. A. Frost, J. F. Jenkins, O. Q. Jones, Geo. Howell, F. O. Teft, C. M. Woodward. Dr. North spoke of the life and services of the late Dr. I. S. Hamilton, in whose memory the meeting was called. Dr. S. Catlin also made some appropriate remarks. Dr. Jenkins moved that a preamble and resolutions be drafted, on the death of the late Dr. Hamilton, which was carried. It was ordered that the Chair should appoint a committee of three to draft such preamble and resolutions. The chair appointed as such committee, Dr. Samuel Catlin, Dr. J. F. Jenkins and Dr. W. A. Frost. It was ordered that the preamble and resolutions be engrossed, a copy sent to the family, and that a copy of the same be published in the village papers. It was also moved and carried that the medical faculty attend the funeral in a body. A motion to adjourn was then in order, which was carried.

C. M. WOODWARD, Sec. pro. tem.

Don't Scold about Unknown "Pension Sharks."

But when you have a pension or other claim to be collected, apply directly, in person or by letter, to one of the offices of that far famed firm of attorneys with a record of more than a quarter of a century. It costs you no more, nor indeed so much, counting the extra bother involving loss of time, as it does to place your business in less experienced hands. To an Ohio man, a Michigan man, or an Illinois man, there is a "home office." You can visit the office at Cleveland, Detroit or Chicago, and find to talk with, not only a comrade, but one thoroughly conversant with the pension business, or you can send a statement of the facts, and prompt and intelligent attention will be given to it. If a question arises in a given case, which could be more quickly solved by a Washington attorney, this firm is there at the Nation's Capitol with their best equipped office. Again—and here is where you should stick the pin—Milo B Stevens & Co., of all the attorneys in the pension claim business, are the most eager to win success for every client, with little or no regard for the possible prospective fee allowed by law. They are the only attorneys, who, since the reduction of the fee from $10 to $2, are reaching out for what is known as straight-increase pension claims.

The Hudson Gazette says that even adversity can be turned to advantage. Elder Palmer, of the Free Methodist church, picked up enough pebbles of hail to freeze a batch of ice cream, and we learn that Mrs. Oscar Foster did the same.

The Jonesville Independent says that there were two men present at the celebration this year that attended the first celebration held in Jonesville 60 years ago. Their names were Dr. Jones, of Brooklyn, and Ira Wight of Allen Township.

A Hudson man has a colony of "beer bees." Placed in a can of water, with a little white sugar, they go to work and in a short time a delicious drink, non-intoxicating, awaits the drinker. The beer is said to have medical qualities. Some of our citizens have derived substantial benefit by the use of this beer.

The Gilliland Electric Works will leave Adrian after all, and will soon move to Chicago. They need more financial aid than can be secured at Adrian, and hence they will pull up stakes, notwithstanding the boom. We look to see this company develop into a very large industry within the next ten years.

A. W. Slayton has just returned from Detroit, and while there he visited Camp Walker, the quarters assigned to our G. A. R. boys. He reports a fine location on the banks of Detroit river, beds all set up and made and two restaurants going into the building, so our boys are well provided for. The fireworks will be in front of Camp Walker.

The choir of the Tecumseh Baptist church is now composed of six young ladies. No young man or old bach need apply, says the Tecumseh Herald. If all old baches were singers like the editor of the Herald, and joined the choir, there'd be no choir, no church, no minister, no congregation, no anything at the first toot of Scove's voice.—Adrian Times.

There, that will do, young man; you can go to the head, now.

The Tecumseh G. A. R. and W. R. C. will send a big crowd to the National Encampment next week.

Joseph Keppler has a grand cartoon in Puck of July 29th, entitled, "They Are The People." Mr. Keppler has lost none of his old-time vigor; his cartoons are as popular now as they were years ago.

The Tecumseh Herald issues on its local page what it claims is a calendar of coming events, but it is no good. It fails to state whether the republicans or democrats will carry Ohio this fall.—Adrian Press.

The Forum for August is an uncommonly rich number. All the topics of current interest are discussed with signal ability, and it is full of intellectual meat from cover to cover. Buy this number and try it.

The foundation walls of the new Lake Shore freight house are about completed and the frame will soon be raised. The new structure will be the same size as the old one but somewhat differently planned.

Heesen Bros. are now getting nicely started in their trade in hollow ware. They have sold about seven hundred pieces up to this time, and orders are coming in very satisfactorily. It was rather slow business getting started, but the superior character of their ware is its own advertisement. Whenever they make a sale, they also make a permanent customer. The outlook is now favorable for working up a large business.

We would remind justices of the peace whose terms began July 4th, that there is an ancient custom which requires them to refund the fee of the first marriage in which they officiate, and that they kiss the bride without expense.—Hudson Post.

That ancient and barbarous custom may still be the practice in Hudson, but it is obsolete in this neighborhood, except in so far as kissing the bride without expense is concerned. She gets kissed and it don't cost her a cent.—Adrian Press.

Philander is a J. P. now himself and he speaks by the card.

G. A. R. and others who attend the annual encampment at Detroit, are cordially invited to call at the Detroit University, 11 to 19 Wilcox Ave. This institution was established in 1850, and has done grand work educating young men and women for usefulness. Over 20,000 students have been prepared here to fill honorable positions—over 1,100 during the past year. This is truly one of the grand institutions of the land that is worthy of and receives strong support. Don't fail to call Lady Macdonald, the widow of the late Premier of Canada, opens the Aug. Ladies' Home Journal with her first contribution to literature, in the opening article of a series which she has written for that magazine, descriptive of "An Unconventional Holiday," which, with a party of friends, and in her private car, she enjoyed last summer through the most picturesque portions of Canada. Lady Macdonald's article is written in that delightfully fresh and unconventional manner of which we see so little in our modern literature, and yet which possesses such a charm.

The venerable Mrs. Applegate, mother of T. S. Applegate, editor of the Adrian Times, and who makes her home at his residence, met with an accident Friday night about 1 o'clock which is of a serious nature. She arose from her bed at that hour, and attempted to cross the room to the commode. She stumbled over some object, fell heavily, and struck her head against the sharp corner of the commode, cutting an ugly scalp wound clear across the top of the head, and another over the left eye. The shock was very severe, and her age makes the wounds more serious. Dr. Hull and Dr. Julia P. Greene rendered all the medical and surgical aid necessary, and she is getting along as well as could be expected.

The August Magazine of American History is a rich midsummer number. This publication improves with age. It seeks and opens new fields of historical research instead of traveling over beaten paths. Every page of the August number is readable and instructive.

The Atlantic Monthly for August has two notable features besides the serial stories by Mrs. Catherwood and Mr. Stockton. Henry James contributes an admirable short story entitled "The Marriages," which will delight his army of admirers; and John C. Ropes, who is peculiarly strong in writing on military subjects, has an excellent paper on General Sherman, awarding him great but not undiscriminating praise.

One of the two articles in the August number of The North American Review to which special attention is called by the typographical arrangement of the table of contents is entitled "The War—Some Unpublished History." The author is Charles A. Dana, the brilliant editor of the New York Sun, who was Assistant Secretary of War in 1863-4. It is truly a romance of the war which he tells in a few pages, and one of thrilling interest, illustrating for the thousandth time the force of the adage that truth is stranger than fiction.

A NEGRO FIEND.

He Kills Three Members of a Kentucky Family.

Another Mortally Wounded—He Horribly Hacks His Victims With a Scythe-Blade—The Murderer Shot Dead by a Neighbor.

AWFUL BUTCHERY.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 27.—Five miles from Paris, Ky., lived Nathan Conway, 61 years old, his wife, about the same age, their sons, Charley and William, 33 and 28 respectively, William's wife and three children and two nieces, Miss Florence and Lucy Leager. As they were all sitting on the veranda Sunday morning a negro named Craig, who had no fixed home, came up and asked for a drink of water. It was given him. He thereupon lifted a rusty scythe blade and asked if it was not a good knife. Charley Conway nodded assent and the negro throwing down the cup of water struck him with the knife, splitting his skull. The rest of the family ran into the house. Craig continued to hack the young man till he thought him dead. He then attacked the father, who had returned, and killed him. Then the mother coming up had her head split open and instantly died. After the negro had insanely hacked her body in a dozen places he attacked William Conway, cutting him in the head and on the body as he ran. He had just struck Conway to the ground when G. W. Bailey, a neighbor, attracted by the screams, came up and shot Craig twice with buckshot. This seemed to have no effect, but other neighbors had come up and a young man shot Craig with a pistol. Craig ran, and, falling beside a haystack, died in a few minutes from the effects of the buckshot wounds. The pistol ball had glanced around his head.

The Conways were from Maysville originally, but came to Bourbon eighteen months ago from T. G. Meggin's farm, near Cynthiana. They were orderly citizens and were held in the highest esteem. Craig said he had killed seven persons and intended to kill that whole family. He is known to have killed his mother-in-law. He has always been known as a desperate fellow, and was a brother of Charlie Craig, now under sentence of death in Cincinnati.

Working in the Hill Farm Mine.

DUNBAR, Pa., July 24.—More than a year ago—June 16, 1890—the outbreak of fire in the Hill farm mine condemned the men working in the depths to death. Thursday the last flickering flame was extinguished. Ever since the disaster laborers have been employed reclaiming the mine and endeavoring to reach the bodies of the unfortunates. The work has progressed until the body of water in the lower heading has been reached, and pumps will now be applied to remove this.

Abundant Crops in Central Illinois.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., July 24.—Such abundant crops of wheat, oats and hay were probably never before seen in central Illinois as those of this season. The wheat harvest turns out from 25 to 30 bushels to the acre and many fields of oats yield 65 to 70 bushels. Buyers are contracting for oats at 30 to 32 cents a bushel, making the return an acre from $10.50 to $22.40.

To Keep Out Destitute Aliens.

LONDON, July 27.—At a crowded meeting held in this city at which the bishop of Bedford presided, resolutions were adopted protesting against the unrestricted influx of destitute aliens into England and demanding that the government take such measures as would prevent the entrance into the country of such undesirable persons.

Many Buildings Burned.

SOUTH HAVEN, Mich., July 27.—Fire Sunday afternoon destroyed twenty-two buildings in this city. The fire was finally checked by tearing down small stores. The loss was about $40,000, and the insurance $10,000. The public library, Grand Army of the Republic armory, Masonic hall and other buildings were also burned.

Shot from Ambush.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 24.—News of the assassination of Rev. Mr. Williams, a Methodist clergyman, near Heber, Ark., has been received. He was shot from Ambush while riding along the country road. A Loss of $600,000.

PHILADELPHIA, July 25.—The immense cotton and woolen mill of Campbell & Elliott, at Washington avenue and Twelfth street, was completely destroyed by fire Friday night. The loss is estimated at between $600,000 and $750,000 and is believed to be covered by insurance.

Death of Hermann Raster.

CHICAGO, July 25.—News was received here Friday night that Hermann Raster, editor in chief of the Illinois Staats Zeitung, died in Cudowa, in the German province of Silesia, whither he had gone in search of health, at 6:45 o'clock p. m. He was 65 years old. Herman Raster was for twenty-four years the life of the Staats Zeitung, whose leading position in German-American journalism is due to his ability. He was a resident of this country for forty-one years and was one of the shining lights of the republican party in the west in that party's palmiest days. His death robs German-American journalism of its leading exponent.

Hanged.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 25.—Charles M. Ozburn was hanged here for the murder of John M. Bradley on May 5, 1890. The drop fell at 12:55 p. m. The execution took place in the county jail before about forty witnesses. Ozburn was a commission merchant of this city. He stood well and was highly connected. He had a dispute with Bradley about a barrel of potatoes which he had sold him and on which Bradley claimed there was fifty-four cents overcharge. Ozburn went to Bradley's store and shot him dead.

QUEBEC, Can., July 25.—A dispatch received from Seven Islands, on the lower St. Lawrence, reports the drowning of seven children, Alfred, Joseph, Marie, Louise and Cecil Montigny and Marmed and Marguerite Fouras. LISTENS TO REASON.

Uncle Sam's Influence with Russia's Ruler.

The Drift of Public Opinion in This Country Said to Be the Cause of a Relaxation of Persecution of the Jews.

A CHECK ON OPPRESSION.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Cablegrams received at the state department Friday brought the important official news that the czar had temporarily relaxed the Jewish expulsion measures. They also brought the gratifying intelligence that he had done this in compliment to the United States and at the instance of this country. While the relaxation was described as temporary and intended by the czar as a respite until he could consult with his political advisers, there is no doubt that it will lead to a permanent modification of the oppressive orders of expulsion. The matter has been very delicately managed in its diplomatic bearings. Strictly speaking the action of the czar in expelling the Jews was a matter of purely domestic concern, with which neither the United States nor any country had anything to do. A diplomatic remonstrance would have been resented, but means were found for putting the matter in its proper light before the czar. President Harrison interested himself personally. Some time ago a delegation of leading Jewish citizens headed by Jesse Seligman, the New York banker, and Oscar Straus, ex-minister to Turkey, waited on him and he assured them that the best efforts of the administration would be used to soften the rigors which the Russian Jews were enduring. Minister Smith succeeded in bringing the subject to the czar's attention in a favorable light in a personal message from President Harrison. After the minister's departure renewed representations were made by Consul General Crawford. He has represented the United States for many years at St. Petersburg and is a great favorite with the Russians. To his tact in great measure is due the willingness of the czar to suspend the anti-Jewish policy of the empire. World-wide interest has been taken in the sufferings of the Russian Jews and it is a tribute to the United States that this influence has been able to accomplish what all the rest of the world could not do.

The Eloquent Pastor of the First Baptist Church of Chicago, Does Suffering Humanity a Great Service by Telling His Experience with a Great Family Medicine. Read:

"An almost fatal attack of La Grippe last winter left me with nasal Catarrh and such susceptibility to bronchial irritation that the slightest exposure would develop it, and a very little effort in public speaking would result in a distressing hoarseness so that I had serious fears of permanent disability. Besides, I suffered with dyspeptic troubles—notably what is popularly known as 'heartburn,' from which I found it difficult to obtain relief. I was induced by a friend to try KING'S ROYAL GERMETUER, and it gives me great pleasure to say that its effect has been as magical as 'Koch's Lymph' is reputed to be, which is also a 'germ destroyer,' though taken in a different way. Catarrh, bronchial irritation, and dyspepsia have all disappeared before one bottle of the GERMETUER has been used.

BEAT YOUR DAD.

Said Adam unto Seth, his son:
"My boy, the world has just begun,
The late unpleasantness with Cain
Gave Eve and me unmingled pain,
And that misfortune with the snake
Was a most bitter pill to take;
But still, my son, the world is new,
And there is work enough for you.
Go in to win, my trusty lad,
Go in and try to beat your dad."

Said Seth to Enos, his firstborn:
"Your young life now is in its morn,
You've scarcely passed from boyhood's stage
You're but four hundred years of age.
I've struggled on with hopes and fears,
And lived a good five hundred years;
And now I feel that there can be
But a few centuries more for me.
My life, a careless summer day,
In idle dreams has passed away;
But you, upon life's threshold glad
Go in to win and beat your dad."

Said Enos unto Cainan: "Boy,
My eldest born, my greatest joy,
Your gifts have surely not been hid,
You are a most precocious kid;
I wonder how a head so small
As yours is now, can know it all.
My form is bent, my head is gray,
I've done but little in my day;
How like a fleeting mist appears
My short life of nine hundred years!
My plans were many 'neath the sun,
But all my work is left undone;
But you, my boy, be brave and glad,
Go in to win and beat your dad."

Said Cainan to Mahalaleel,
"The ghout and rhematiz I feel,
And now I am as old and dried
As father Enos when he died.
And since the era of my birth
There've been strange doings on the earth,
And, though I'm old and blind, I see
Things are not as they used to be.
I gladly tread with yielding breath,
The starless road that leads to death;
But go, Mahalaleel, my lad,
Go in to win, and beat your dad."

Mahalaleel to Jared said:
"My son, 'tis time that I were dead,
I've passed a pilgrimage of tears,
Eight hundred, ninety and five years.
I leave, to my own trust untrue,
The work I should have done, to you;
But though our life's deformed by scars,
Hope is eternal as the stars.
Yes, Jared, boy, be strong and glad,
Go in to win, and beat your dad."

And Jared when his life was done,
The same to Enoch talked, his son,
And Enoch, like a faithful pa,
The same to young Methuselah.
This he to Lamech tells once more,
And Lamech tells the same to Noah;
And then the flood came on to rout
And drown the whole creation out.
The world had grown corrupt and bad,
With each man better than his dad.

The world to-day they say is bad,
But each man tries to beat his dad;
And though the clouds of night draw nigh,
And shut the sun from out the sky,
And though life marches through the gloom
To music of the steps of doom,
This voice comes through the darkness far,
And smites the cloud-rack like a star,
Exultant, hopeful, fearless, glad:
"Go in to win, and beat your dad!"

DID BOTH OVERHEAR IT?

Whispers in Church That Brought About a Reconciliation.

It was nearly service time on Sunday morning, and the church bells were tolling their cheery welcome on the frosty air. Pious souls, clad in furs and velvets and other forms of modern purple and fine linen, were hurrying to reach the scenes of their devotions.

Foster Millard was not a pious soul, and he did not hurry. He was not sure that he was going to church at all, and he sauntered leisurely along, with his hands in his overcoat pockets and his big collar turned high around his throat.

What a world it was, to be sure, and what a fool—but, pshaw!—that was all over now, and he was glad of it.

At this moment he became aware of a slight figure enveloped in furs coming down the cross street, and they met at the corner. She held out her hand with a gesture that bespoke embarrassment and uncertainty, and he took it gravely.

"I believe," he said, "it is quite a year since I saw you last, Edith."

"Yes," she said.

Willard turned and joined her in her walk.

"And I believe," he continued, "that I am very glad to see you."

Miss Arnold was silent on this point.

"You might, perhaps, say as much," suggested Millard.

"Are you going to church?" asked Miss Arnold.

"Well, I don't know, that is, I will go if you will take me with you."

Miss Arnold hesitated a moment.

"Why, of course, if you like," she said.

"Why shouldn't he like," wondered Millard, a pretty girl, good music and lots of people. What difference did it make that once—stuff! He had forgotten all that, and of course she had.

"Have you heard the new rector?" inquired Miss Arnold, evidently with an attempt at conversation.

"No," said Millard. "I have not been there. I am a heathen. You are a missionary. Perhaps I am an angel unawares, though."

Miss Arnold laughed.

"That is a trifle mixed, isn't it?" she said.

"Well, perhaps," admitted Millard. "I'm not up in that sort of thing."

"But you used to go to church?"

"Yes, I did—when you took me. I have degenerated. If your theology admits of backsliding I have backslided. I am now distinctly a heathen."

Miss Arnold laughed again.

"On the contrary I think you have improved," she said.

"Ah!" said Millard, with a faint sarcasm. "I really was not looking for a compliment."

They reached the church and the usher showed them to a seat. Miss Arnold kneeled on the cushion and leaned her head on her little prayer book against the pew in front. Millard watched her silently, as he had done so many times before. She made a pretty picture, dainty, fur-wrapped and devout, and the hand that held the prayer book was very small indeed. One little lock of hair had squirmed away from restraining hairpins and was curling prettily near her pink ear. He felt a curious desire to put it in place, and then he became conscious of two voices speaking behind him in not inaudible whispers.

"Isn't that Foster Millard with Edith Arnold in front of us?" asked somebody.

"Why, sure enough it is!" said somebody else. "I thought she jilted him a year ago."

"Hush, he will hear you!"

"They must have made it up. Queer, isn't it."

The choir began to sing again, and the people all rose. Millard heard no more. Edith held her prayer book up to him, and they read the responses out of it. Like those flashes of previous existence that the philosophers talk about, it all came back to him—intangible, indefinite and yet familiar. How often he had heard that smooth, full voice, reading the same old, sweet words of the Episcopal service. He seemed to take up the thread of life a year back, as if the year just passed had been a dream from which he was now awakening.

The Te Deum was over and they sat down again. Presently the two women behind began to whisper again. Edith was intent upon the service.

"Pretty bonnet she has," said one.

"A trifle too high, I think. They say she threw Howard Gale over, too. I don't see what those men find in her. She is a perfect flirt."

"For that reason, probably, they like her."

"I suppose Mr. Millard took it too easily, and she wants to dangle him again."

"Dangle him?"

"Yes. You know what I mean—keep him around and abuse him."

"Hush! I'm afraid he heard you."

"No, he didn't. It would be a good warning to him, anyway."

Millard moved uneasily, and the whispers broke off suddenly. He wondered if Edith had heard them. He glanced at her, and she looked so unconscious that he concluded she had not.

The rector had commenced his sermon and she was giving close attention. Millard listened awhile, but it did not interest him. He seemed to have heard the same sermon a thousand times, and his thoughts wandered away into other channels. They went back to the old days when he had been wont to read the responses out of Edith Arnold's prayer book, and then he thought of the two women he had heard discussing his case.

He looked at Edith surreptitiously as she sat there listening so intently to the sermon, and he thought she did not look like a girl who would care to "dangle" anyone. He knew he might be mistaken, for he did not claim to know women. No man does who has once thought he did. But certainly she did not look like a girl of that sort. He knew she had never seemed so to him, even at the last. But, then, who could tell? Perhaps she would like to dangle him, as they called it.

He wondered if he would care and concluded that he would not; it might even be pleasant. Something suggested to him that he might let her try, and he favored the suggestion.

They rose to sing the last hymn and then knelt a moment while the rector prayed. The organist played a low, solemn recessional and the people began to file out.

They passed the choir gallery as they went out, and the tenor was helping the alto to put on her furs.

"See," said the alto, "there is Edith Arnold, with Mr. Millard in her train again. They must have made up. You're not looking at all."

"I have something better to look at," said the tenor.

"Oh!" said the alto, and then stopped. Millard turned his collar up again when they reached the door.

"Not a long service," he said, for want of anything better to say.

"No," said Miss Arnold, absently. "Did you like the sermon?"

"Well, I don't know. I didn't hear much of it. I forgot to listen."

"Oh!" said Miss Arnold, very much as the alto had said it a moment before.

"I think the soprano would do better if she would leave out some of those trills and quirls," suggested Millard.

"Do you?" said Miss Arnold. "I don't know. I'm afraid I was not listening."

"Oh!" said Millard.

"I don't think I meant that exactly," said Edith.

"Meant what?"

"What you thought when I said I was not listening."

"I had no idea you did."

They walked along awhile without saying anything.

"Edith," said Millard, at length, "did you hear what those women behind us were saying during the service?"

Edith looked up seriously innocent.

"What women?" she asked.

"In the pew behind us."

"I was listening to the service," replied Miss Arnold, with dignity.

"Except when the soprano sang," commented Millard.

Presently they reached Miss Arnold's home and he opened the little iron gate for her.

"You had better come in and see mamma," she said.

"Well, perhaps I had," said Millard. He wondered if he was beginning to be dangled.

Mrs. Arnold and the little sister looked a trifle surprised as the two entered, but each received him cordially in her own way. Little sister slipped her hand into his and gave it a comforting squeeze. That was her method. They were all alone when she did it, for Edith went to take off her wraps and Mrs. Arnold went somewhere after a few words with Millard. The latter reflected that he had come to see mamma, but he did not say anything.

"Are you and Edith spoons again?" asked little sister.

Millard laughed helplessly, and wondered what to say. Little sister relieved the situation.

"Because," she continued, without waiting for a reply, "because if you are, I am glad. I don't like the others near so well as I do you."

"Don't you? I'm so glad."

"Are you, really? Say, will you keep still if I tell you something?"

"Like the grave," said Millard.

"And never tell anyone I told you?"

"Never."

"Not even Edith?"

"Not even Edith,' said Millard, solemnly.

"Well, then," said little sister, "I'll tell you. Edith's last beau doesn't come here any more, and I guess she wants another one."

"Oh!" said Millard.

"Yes, and I thought perhaps if you knew you would come some more. I do wish you would. You don't snub me like the rest."

"What on earth are you two talking about?" asked Edith, coming into the room at this point.

"Don't you tell," whispered little sister.

"Of course not," said Millard, gravely.

"We were talking about the weather," he continued to Edith. "Your sister says it is not as cold as it was."

Little sister slid out of the room. "That was an awful fib," she said to Millard as she went out.

A couple of hours later Edith lifted her head from Millard's shoulder and looked up at him a trifle uncertainly.

"Foster," she said, "did you hear what those odious women behind us were saying during service?"

"I did, but you will remember that you did not; you were attending to the service."

"Hush! I am in earnest, Foster."

"What is it?"

"What did my sister say to you in here?"

"I promised not to tell."

"Never mind, then. Did you believe those women?"

"No, Edith."

"Did you believe what my sister told you?"

"Partly. Not as she meant."

"You are a good boy. I should have believed them if I had been in your place."

"Why?"

"Because," said Edith, slowly, "because I am not a man."—J. T. Newcomb, in Boston Globe.

THE KISSABLE WOMAN.

She May Not Always Be Handsome, but She Is Always Charming.

Then there is the kissable woman. Her size, age, tints, features, disposition, character—one and all have seemingly nothing to do with her charm. All you are conscious of in her presence is the desire to take her in your arms and kiss her. She may be absolutely devoid of personal beauty, and not young, and yet nine men and a half and seven women out of each ten will want to kiss her if they are in her presence five minutes. Sometimes she is good and kind and unselfish, and possessed of beauty; and then she is always breaking hearts without meaning to do so, and winning love she cannot return, and incurring criticism she does not deserve.

She sees more beautiful women giving more encouragment to men than she gives, and indulging in far more desperate flirtations without causing any such disaster as she causes by one kind, sweet smile; and she cannot understand it all, at least not until she has had all sorts of trouble out of it. But the fact is, that the men who are quite hardened to flirtations with the merely beautiful women, lose their heads in an insane desire to seize the kissable girl in their arms. Women who do not possess this charm, and who play a bold game of flirtation without incurring any such risks and dangers, find it impossible to explain the effect of the kissable girl upon her admirers. They think she must be a very deep and adroit siren at heart, while, in fact, she is often frankness personified. She is inclined to become somewhat selfish, however, as time passes in her love of admiration, and to take as her natural right more love than belongs to her. But she is never malicious or intentionally unkind. She feels sorry for her lovers after she has won them, and she never wounds another woman if she can help it without a too great sacrifice of the love and devotion which is her native element. She is full of love herself, and her friendships are inclined to be as ardent as the loves of the "handsome" woman. Her rejected lovers become her friends almost always, and her husband worships her and finds her a better wife than she was a sweetheart. If she marries a man strong and tactful enough to keep her entire heart she becomes a great favorite with her own sex, for women have always been inclined to adore her when they were not jealous of her influence over men.—Cleveland Leader.

Only One Good Way.

The man who wants more money will find no royal road to the wealth he covets, no patent method for its acquisition. He must give something for it to make it honestly his own, and the man who sets himself earnestly to do this will find that all financial systems will bend to his conquering will. The gambler, whether he plays his game in the exchange, at a faro table, in a policy shop or with smaller stakes in private circles at baccarat and progressive euchre, will find the issue precarious and unrewarding. The way to get more money without any loss of peace or self respect is to earn it by toil of brain or sinew, and the funds thus acquired have no gnawing teeth. All other wealth eats like a canker.—Forum.

—"In Sweden you could get a competent hired girl for fourteen dollars a year," says an exchange. Bring the same girl into the free atmosphere of America and she would soon be demanding four dollars a week and three evenings out.

—Governess—"Now, Pauline, tell your grandmother and me how long it is since Rome was founded." Pauline—"Two thousand six hundred and forty-four years." Grandmother (mechanically)—"Dear, dear, how time does fly!"

—"He is good to his wife, they say." "Yes, he was always selfish." "Where does the selfishness come in there?" "Why, don't you see! He is good to his wife so that she shall be good to him."—Exchange.

Michigan's Citizen—Soldiers.

The encampment at Whitmore Lake last week will not soon be forgotten by those who were fortunate enough to have been present. The pomp and blazonry of war were seen in all their seductiveness, and the splendid, soldierly bearing of the boys won for them the admiration of all who saw them. Eighty-eight carloads of excursionists were brought to the Lake Sunday, July 19th, and too much credit cannot be given the Toledo, Ann Arbor & North. Michigan R'y for the prompt and careful manner in which they were handled. It is a popular road with the traveling public and is becoming more so every year. This is the result of first-class train service and careful and gentlemanly employees, who do everything in their power to please the public; besides this it has the best connections of any road in Michigan, and is the short line between the Saginaw Valley, Grand Rapids, Lansing, Jackson, Battle Creek, Ionia, Kalamazoo, Greenville, Muskegon, and Toledo and Detroit. It is also the shortest route from the South to the squirrel hunting and fishing resorts of Northern Michigan, and if tourists and others will consult their own interests they will see that their tickets read via the T. A. A. & N. M. R'y.

The L. S. & M. S. Railway will furnish special cars from Tecumseh to Detroit direct, without change, on Monday morning, Aug. 3d, providing application is made at once, stating the number of cars required. Beers Post, G. A. R. took the initiatory steps last Monday night to secure this special car service by appointing a committee to secure as near as possible, the number of persons that are intending to go at that time. All persons, whether members of the G. A. R or not, (and especially those who are not) who intend to take that train are requested to report at once either in person, or by postal card to J. W. Wightman or A. P. Coddington. Do not delay, but do it at once. The rate will be $1.65 for round trip, good to return until Aug. 15th.

THE STORM KING.

His Power Manifested in Several Western States.

Great Damage Has Been Done in Iowa, Minnesota, Kansas, South Dakota, Ohio and Indiana—Farmers Suffer Severely.

IN IOWA.

DES MOINES, Ia., July 25.—The storm of Wednesday throughout northwestern Iowa was accompanied by heavy lightning. The Methodist church and three houses at Battle Creek were struck. One house was totally destroyed and the others badly damaged. Two horses were killed at different points. A dispatch from Galva says: "The Maple river is overflowing the lowlands and doing great damage." Another from Storm Lake announces high water which is carrying away all the bridges. The storm in this section (central Iowa) did little damage except to small grain, which was badly lodged.

IN MINNESOTA.

AUSTIN, Minn., July 24.—A terrific hail and windstorm, fully 1 mile wide and several miles in length, visited the north portion of this county in Waltham township Wednesday night and ruined everything in its path. The damage will aggregate thousands of dollars.

IN SOUTH DAKOTA.

ABERDEEN, S. D., July 24.—Reports are coming in of a destructive hailstorm which passed about 25 miles north of here Tuesday. The track of the storm extends from Hosmer, a point 40 miles west of Frederick, eastward for over 100 miles and from 1 to 4 miles wide. In some localities great damage was done, while in others it was slight. Hail stones of immense size fell near Westport, some measuring 14 inches in circumference being picked up after the storm. Marks can be seen in the hard roads where the hail struck. Many farmers lost their entire crops of from fifty to 100 acres each. The crops along the line of the storm were excellent. If reports are not exaggerated the loss will aggregate many thousand dollars, with little insurance.

IN OHIO.

WELLSVILLE, O., July 24.—A terrific wind and rainstorm accompanied by vivid flashes of lightning passed over this city Thursday night. Trees were uprooted and many small buildings blown over and cellars flooded by a rush of waters that exceeded anything ever seen here. The fire alarm and telephone wires are useless and the telegraphic service badly crippled. Many barns in the outlying districts have been blown down and crops of all kinds suffered severely

IN INDIANA.

MITCHELL, Ind., July 24.—A severe windstorm and cloudburst passed over Salem at 8 o'clock Thursday morning. Several buildings were unroofed, store fronts were blown in, and shade trees uprooted. No one seriously injured. The country wheat stacks were blown down and much damage was done to growing crops.

Behring Sea Blockaded.

VICTORIA, B. C., July 27.—Sealing certainly has been stopped in Behring sea and all the Victoria fleet is now sailing homeward. Entrance to the Behring sea is effectually blocked and is now patrolled by five American and two British war vessels. The latter are the Nymphe and the Pheasant. The United States vessels are the revenue cutters Bear, Rush and Corwin and the gunboats Thetis and Mohican.

Condemned Man Said to Be Innocent.

SEDALIA, Mo., July 25.—Startling evidence has recently come to light in the case of Tom Williamson, condemned to be hanged August 21. The evidence indicates that he was not guilty of the crime. A petition has recently been circulated in his behalf praying for the commutation of his sentence to life imprisonment, and to it have been attached the names of 100 prominent men of this locality.

Death of an Inventor.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass, July 27.—A dispatch received in this city from Rangely Lakes, Me., reports the death there Saturday morning of William N. Weeden, who went there nearly two weeks ago for the benefit of his health. He was 50 years old, a native of this city, and was the inventor of the Waterbury watch and the Weeden upright steam engine.

Married Seventy-Two Years.

JEFFERSON, N. C., July 27.—Stephen Osborne and wife, of this (Ashe) county, celebrated the seventy-second anniversary of their marriage. Mr. Osborne is 101 years old and his wife 92. They have twelve children, sixty-nine grandchildren, more than 200 great-grandchildren and nine great-great-grandchildren.

Killed by Mexican Bandits.

CITY OF MEXICO, July 27.—Information from Arizepe, Sonora, says that the Americans recently killed near that place were not the victims of Apaches, but a band of bandits. The military force stationed at that town went in pursuit and in a sharp skirmish killed three out of eight men composing the gang.

Discovered an Ancient Vessel.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 27.—Divers from the torpedo station have discovered in the outer harbor the remains of an ancient sunken vessel, supposed to be at least 100 years old, from which they have taken a couple of guns. They have buoyed the vessel for further search.

Population of France.

PARIS, July 25.—The official census of France shows a total population of 38,095,150. This is an increase since the last census of 208,584. The increase is entirely in the urban population, the rural population having decreased.

Business Failures of the Week.

NOVEL BRIDAL TRIP.

A Newly-Married Chicago Couple's Honeymoon Journey on Bicycles.

There arrived at a hotel in Detroit the other night a couple from Chicago who registered as N. J. Anderson and bride, and whose impedimenta included an ordinary and a ladies' bicycle. The pair went down to breakfast the next morning arrayed in the nattiest bicycle attire, and Anderson confided to the clerk that they had just been married in Chicago and were going to wheel from there to New York city for a honeymoon trip. They left for the east, and started on a rattling gait for their 700-mile trip. Anderson is a smooth-faced young fellow and his bride a pretty blonde.

"JUST AS GOOD,"

Say some dealers who try to sell a substitute preparation when a customer calls for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Do not allow any such false statements as this induce you to buy what you do not want. Remember that the only reason for making it is that a few cents more profit will be made on the substitute. Insist upon having the best medicine—Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is Peculiar to Itself.

He leaves six sisters and three brothers, also his companion and five sons, all grown. Brother Caswell was united in marriage to Betsy Vandeventer March 23, 1852, and settled but a short distance from their present home, residing there until after the war, when they moved out of Lenawee into Monroe, their present home. The deceased, on profession of his faith in Christ, was baptized March 4th, 1849, and received as a member of the First Christian church of Ridgeway, continuing his membership in the church until his death. He was a professer of religion, having been a member of the First Christian church of Ridgeway for a number of years.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS.

On Sunday last at her home in Cambridge, Elvira, wife of Chas. H. Dewey, Esq., passed over to the other shore. An attack of LaGrippe was the cause of her death. She was a most estimable woman and had a host of friends in that township where most of her life has been spent. The funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at two o'clock.

Many gifts were presented, not the least of which was a $5.00 gold piece from her husband.

The citizens living on West Logan Street have been greatly disturbed lately by somebody looking in the windows and walking on the stoop floor between 10 and 12 o'clock at night. The intruders, whoever they may be, had better desist or they will get the contents of a shot gun some night when they are not looking for it, as the people on said street are arming themselves and mean business.

Mr. & Mrs. H. Ballantine, of Bombay, India, were guests of Mr. & Mrs. C. A. Wright over Sunday. He has been appointed special commissioner of the World's Fair for India, and has just been to Chicago, and is now on his return trip to Bombay.

The Department of Promotion of the World's Columbian Exposition have made an arrangement with the North American Review for the publication of a series of advertisements of the World's Fair. The matter for the advertisements is to be supplied every month by the Department, and the series will give to the advertising pages of the Review for some time to come an interest never before possessed by the advertising pages of a monthly magazine. The first advertisement will appear in the September number of the Review.

An esteemed contemporary upon reading in an exchange that a certain ancient sect prescribed kissing a pretty girl as a cure for tooth-ache, sagely observed that it is exceedingly difficult to improve on some old-time methods. The same remark applies to Magic Yeast, now being sold in this town, and advertised elsewhere in our columns, and by the use of which, toothache or no toothache, kisses or no kisses, the pretty girls and their beautiful mothers of to-day are making that prime requisite of health and beauty, good, wholesome, old-fashioned bread, as did their predecessors in the days that come no more.

The family friends have requested us to give the following particulars about the death of Mrs. Philip Totten. She arrived here on the 8th of June and was in feeble health at that time. During her stay of two weeks in Tecumseh she required the attendance of a physician. Feeling anxious to return home she left here on the 23d, going to Onsted, where she visited A. J. Woodard's until the 25th. From there she went to Grand Rapids, stopping over one day for a rest, and arrived at her home in Petoskey on the 27th. On the 28th she suffered a stroke of apoplexy, from which she never rallied, but continued to fail until July 3d, when death relieved her from her sufferings. Her husband accompanied her to Tecumseh and back home again, so she had the very best of care and attention.

A Chapter of Incidents.

Sometimes misfortunes come all in a heap. For instance: Two young men came down from Elkhart last week, hired a rig in the city, and drove to Tecumseh to visit two young lady acquaintances. Learning that one of the young ladies was in Macon, they engaged another rig at Tecumseh and drove to the country. The young men and young ladies were invited to remain over a day or two, which they did, thoughtlessly allowing people at this end of the route to remain in blissful ignorance of their whereabouts.

The liverymen naturally became anxious, and sent officers after their property. It could not be found. Officer Ferguson was detailed to make the chase. He secured a rig at Tecumseh; the horse was fractious, ran away with him twice, pitching him out each time. He received two very bad sprains, and when he arrived at the Lawrence house grew faint from the pain, and was taken home in a carriage.

Last evening the two gentlemen drove in from the country, were collared by the officers, the Tecumseh carriage (in which they intended to send the ladies home) was taken from them, and the young ladies sent home on the train.

The gentlemen settled the matter by paying for the trouble to which the officers had been put, although they felt indignant enough to stay here and fight it in the courts.—Adrian Times.

He: And, darling, what does your father think of my suit? She (sobbing): He thinks it is a misfit.

The State Fair.

The Michigan State Fair, which opens at Lansing September 7th, and runs five days, is in many respects a unique institution. It is not run to make money, but all money collected in excess of what is required for its very economical running expenses, and needed improvements, is returned to the people in the shape of increased premiums on exhibits in the various departments. Thus exhibitors have a direct interest in making the State Fair a financial success, for the management can therefore be more liberal in its expenditures for premiums. Then the management of the Fair is entirely in the hands of the people, for every citizen of the State can become a member of the Society by the payment of the membership fee of one dollar, and the officers of the Society only hold their positions from year to year. The only exception to this is the Executive Committee, which holds over two years, one half changing each year. The Society therefore is entirely in the hands of a majority of its members. Every stock-breeder and farmer should be a member of the Society, visit its exhibitions and contribute his mite towards making them thoroughly representative of the State, and an indication of its prosperity and advancement. It is asserted by exhibitors who have attended many State Fairs throughout the Union, that Michigan's is easily in the first class, if not at the head of all others. It may be put down as a fact that the Fair of '91, the 43d of the Society, will be the equal of any one ever held in the State.

A Tramp Printer.

Sixty-four years old, and for fifty-three thereof a printer! Such was Jerry Ettinger (so he called himself), who worked in this office a couple of weeks as an "extra." The night before he drifted here he reposed in a shed west of town, and one nickel was the sum total of his earthly wealth. Jerry averred that he had once "flown high," but said that now he wasn't "in it," and yet he bore a cheerful mien and manifested an optimistic philosophy. Despite his years he could quite nimbly finger the types and did useful work, being intelligent, industrious and pleasant. Strange that a man of his age should be tramping all over the country, but there seems to be a strong fascination in that kind of life, to one who has followed it, uneasiness soon taking possession of them after stopping awhile in one place; and that fact was illustrated in his case, for after the week's labor was finished, notwithstanding it was Saturday night, he struck out on the road again, going whithersoever his taste or fancy led him. There are tramps and tramps in the printing business, as in other occupations—for the most of such gentry we have no use—but Jerry is an unusual one, and we hope that he may yet find some abiding place, this side of the grave, where he can live happy and contented.—Morenci Observer.

TECUMSEH, MICH., AUG. 6, 1891.

From the present outlook in Ohio it is highly probable that several infant industries in that State will be weaned this fall.

The story of Mr. Blaine's illness is becoming a little monotonous, although the reporters make a new story of it every day.

The high tariff, they tell us, is the cause of the good crops this year. Then the free trade sugar clause, we suppose, must be the cause of the lowness in the price of wool.

It is rumored that Gov. Campbell will challenge McKinley to a joint debate. We hope the report is true. Such a contest would become historical, like the famous Lincoln and Douglas debate in 1858.

Tom Reed has returned from Europe after a four months absence. He sported a London hat and had eight big boxes of "luggage," whereas his wardrobe was contained in two trunks when he left home.

The general industrial situation has been growing steadily worse since the passage of the McKinley law, and the industrial classes are coming to the conclusion that that very law is the chief cause of it.

The resignation of Quay and Dudley from the Republican National Committee indicates that those astute managers do not regard this as a Republican year. They consider prudent the letter part of valor and propose to get in out of the wet in time.

Col. Inger soll thinks that Major McKinley best represents the Republican party and would be its best candidate for President. The suggestion is a good one. Let Major McKinley be nominated by all means, and the people will proceed to make mince meat of him.

A reciprocity treaty has been concluded with San Domingo which will go into effect September 1st. Our trade relations with San Domingo are rather "small potatoes," that is true, but the treaty is all right, just the same. Every reciprocity treaty knocks a hole in the high tariff ramparts.

Secretary Foster has quietly ignored the letter recently written by Immigration Commissioner Owen to Representative Neidringhaus taking the ground that Welch tin-plate workers can be legally brought to this country under contract, and has written another letter stating that the Treasury department cannot undertake to determine in advance of the importation of tin-plate workers the legality of bringing them.

The effect of these big crops of cotton and grain, with short crops of money in the farmers' pockets, will be an interesting thing to observe. Politically, the situation does not promise well for the Republican statesmen who claim that the big crops were sent on account of their influence with Providence. With little money the margin of tax the farmers must pay to protect monopolists on account of McKinley is apt to be closely scrutinized. The result may be another landslide that will bury the party of robber tariffs and financial monopolists out of sight forever.—St. Louis Republic.

Republican reciprocity is better than McKinleyism in that the latter is a tragedy in its effects and the former is a comedy in its non-effectiveness. The new treaty with San Domingo, advertised with a flourish by the protectionists, amounts to no more than any of the preceding ones. From San Domingo we receive sugar, coffee, mahogany and hides. Sugar, hides and coffee entered our ports free of duty before the treaty and therefore we gain nothing on that score. We export to San Domingo principally breadstuffs and provisions and cotton goods. There is no new market created by the treaty, and its every provision is a farce.

If the farmer, when a bushel of his wheat is sold in Liverpool, could take the money and buy there the clothing, crockery, cutlery, etc., that he needs and bring them back home without paying any extraordinary taxes on the way, he might make his family pretty comfortable and have money left over from the proceeds of such a crop as has been made this year. The trouble is that when he attempts to supply himself with cheap goods in this way McKinley catches him by the throat in the custom house and makes him pay 57 per cent. more in order that monopolly manufacturers along the northeast seaboard may revel in wealth and luxury.—St. Louis Republic.

THE SUGAR BOUNTY.

Applications For $11,000,000—Enormous Sums For the Sugar Planters—How Uncle Sam's Millions Will Be Divided—Where Does the Wheat Grower Come In?

The applications for the sugar bounty filed at the internal revenue office in New Orleans offer some highly interesting figures for the taxpayers who must pay that bounty. The number of applications filed is 650, but these represent only 568 individuals or companies, since some planters own several plantations and a separate application must be made for each. These 568 persons expect to produce 551,030,500 pounds of raw sugar, and they are asking Uncle Sam to pay them a bounty of $11,206,100 on it.

If this amount is allowed, each planter will pocket the neat little sum of nearly $20,000. This will be the average of all; but an astonishing result is reached by taking the seventeen largest planters, who propose to make each an average of 5,000,000 pounds or more. These seventeen men ask for a bounty of $2,356,720, an average for each person of $138,600.

There are 162 persons who expect to make from 1,000,000 to 5,000,000 pounds each, and they ask for a bounty of $5,779,280, or an average to each man of $35,670. Next come 268 planters who want a free gift from Uncle Samuel of $2,780,000, which means $10,380. Finally come the small fry to the number of 121, asking for $103,810, or $857 per fry.

Omitting the small fry, there remain in the first three classes 447 persons, and the average bounty asked for by them is about $25,000.

The beauty of this thing, from the standpoint of the planters, is that the billion congress fixed this bounty for a period of fifteen years. If the people should submit to this tax so long the Louisiana planters will in that time make away with about $168,000,000 of money wrung from the payers of tariff and other taxes. This makes no allowance for the increased production, which is sure to follow in the next few years, in order to get the bounty. When we get through with this bounty business it will undoubtedly be found that not less than $200,000,000 has gone into the pockets of the sugar planters.

But why this bounty to the planters? Do they add anything more to the public well-being than the growers of wheat? The price of the best centrifugal sugar in the New York markets is now 3¾ cents a pound, while the Chicago price of wheat is 91 cents a bushel. At these prices a bushel of wheat is worth 27 pounds of sugar. Uncle Sam, therefore, makes a present of 52 cents to the sugar planter for producing 27 pounds of sugar, while the farmer, who produces an equal value in wheat, gets no bounty at all, but on the contrary must chip in his portion of tariff taxes to pay the sugar man his fat bounty.

This thing is not right, however well it may fit in with protectionist ideas of taxation. Uncle Sam has no money except what he gets from the people themselves in taxes, and every penny that he pays the sugar grower must come from the pockets of men who grow other things. The sugar bounty is a piece of class legislation, of favoritism, which shows exactly the nature of protection itself. It robs ninety-five men out of every hundred for the benefit of the other five.

M'KINLEYISM IN KNIVES.

How Prices Have Advanced—Meetings of the Knife Manufacturers' Trust in New York—They Will Reap What McKinley Sowed—The School Boy's Twenty-five Cent Knife Will Disappear.

When the McKinley law was passed it was pretended by the protectionists that it was not intended to increase the prices of any American made goods, but only to enable the manufacturers to hold the home market against foreign competition and at the same time sell their goods at the old prices. Even to this day it is asserted that no advance in prices have been made by domestic manufacturers in order to take advantage of the higher protection given them by McKinley.

This claim is unfounded. The makers of pocket cutlery, for example, have not "lived up to the tariff" by maintaining old prices. The representatives of the American Pocket Cutlery association, or pocket knife trust, told McKinley that the effect of the large increase of duty they asked for "would not be to advance the price of knives to the final purchasers," but they have been industriously engaged in raising their prices abroad ever since the tariff law went into effect.

A large wholesale merchant of New York, one who handles both domestic and foreign knives, was seen several days ago and gave an interesting account of how the pocket knife manufacturers are putting up their prices.

"There are," he said, "about twenty-five manufacturers of pocket knives in this country, most of them in New York state and Connecticut, and they are nearly all members of the American Pocket Cutlery association. Soon after the McKinley law was passed the association began to have frequent meetings in this city, and these meeting have taken place every week or two since.

"The manufacturers have been overhauling their price lists very thoroughly at these meetings. The different members of the association were taken in turn and each summoned to appear before the association at the St. Denis hotel in this city with a full line of samples of his goods. On appearing before the meeting he would be asked to show his knives and give the prices at which he had been selling them. In most cases he would be directed to mark up his prices, but not always. Suppose, for instance, the association had settled upon $4.50 a dozen as the price of a given grade of knives. If any manufacturer had been selling this knife at $3.50, he would be ordered to put the price up to $4.75; but if he had been getting $4 for it he would be told that he might keep that price or reduce it to $4.25, as he chose."

At this point the speaker reached for a large book in which were pasted his bills of recent purchases from the factories.

Selecting a three-blade knife, which has had a large sale in the west, he turned the pages and read off the prices he had paid for this knife since last year.

"Here is a domestic made knife," he went on, "which we were buying under the old tariff law at $4.25 a dozen. On October 18 it was advanced to $5.20; in January to $6; and we are now buying it at $6.70. At the old price it retailed for 75 cents; now the retailer will not be satisfied with less than $1."

"Here is another, No. 7991, a cheaper knife. A year ago we bought this knife at $3.10; on October 18 the price was raised to $3.80; in January to $4.05, and in June to $4.40. That knife was sold at 50 cents by the retail merchant; at present prices he will charge 75 cents. Of course these advances have not yet reached the retail trade to any great extent, as many retail merchants, particularly in the west, laid in large supplies of cutlery last fall in anticipation of higher prices."

Here the dealer produced four foreign knives. "These," he said, "are some of the cheap knives made in Solinger, Germany, that the domestic manufacturers had so much to say about during the tariff hearings. The importation of this particular grade of knives has been completely stopped by the McKinley law. Under the old tariff we imported it at $1.50 a dozen, including the duty, and were able to sell it to the jobbers at $2. It reached the consumer as a 25-cent knife, and a very satisfactory knife for the money. Being cheap, and a very neat little knife, it was a great favorite with school boys and girls. But very soon they will find that they can no longer buy this knife at all; they will not even see it in the hardware stores. The reason is the increased cost under the present tariff. It would now cost us $2 to import; we should sell it to the jobber at $2.30; he to the retailer at $2.75; and the retailer would no longer be able to sell it as a 25-cent knife. It could not be sold as a 50-cent knife; and at any price between the sale is spoiled.

"We have not ordered any of these knives since the new tariff came in, and there is no American knife to take their place. The domestic manufacturers do not even try to make a knife of this kind which will retail at 25 cents. It can't be done here. They have tried to make a knife similar to the largest of these four which you see in my hand, but they found that they could not do it for less than $1.90 a dozen, and they quit making it, as at this price the knife could no longer retail at 25 cents."

The old duty on pocket knives was 50 per cent. McKinley retained this 50 per cent. duty and added a specific duty of 12 cents, 50 cents, $1 and $2 per dozen, according to value, making the duty equal to from 74 to 116 per cent.

A DELUSION.

The Plea That a Tariff Increases the Prices of American Wool a Delusion and a Snare.

Domestic wool prices have continued to decline in a most melancholy way to the politicians who hoped to make capital among the growers out of McKinley's increased wool duties. Here is a comparison of prices in the Boston market after a lapse of eleven months:

	Aug. 7, 1890. Cents.	July 7, '891. Cents.
O. and P. XX and above	33 to 34	30 to 31½
Ohio X and above	32 to 33½	29 to 30
Ohio No. 1	32 to 33½	34 to 35
Michigan X	28 to 29½	25 to 27½
Michigan No. 1	33 to 33½	34 to 34
Mich. fine clothing	22 to 23	20 to 21

"Prices," says The American Wool Reporter, "are now at the lowest point of the year," and it adds, "there is as yet no evidence of stiffening in prices."

The same journal, although an advocate of protection, makes the following pungent remarks on wool prices in its editorial columns:

"The wool growers who have been looking to the tariff as the panacea for the evils which have beset them are most woefully disappointed. High tariff on wool has done them no good, and those who were the most clamorous for the enactment of the tariff law, the Ohio and Michigan wool growers, have been the least benefited. It has worked, in fact, to their detriment.

"It is easy enough for high tariff advocates to figure out what the course of the market ought to be, but the test of experience has demonstrated that consumers of wool are buying it on its merits. They will continue to buy foreign wool even at a higher cost per scoured pound than domestic fleeces, for the reason that ultimate results are more profitable and satisfactory. A mixture of Australian wool with territory yields better results to manufacturers of fine goods than domestic fleeces, and while this continues to be the case importations of Australian wool will not be checked by high tariff laws. The latter, as far as wool is concerned, have been demonstrated to be a delusion and a snare, deservedly involving those who were the most instrumental in securing their enactment."

Let Them Explain.

A London market report says that a sale of American sugar has just been made there at from 3 to 3 2-5 cents a pound for refined white. This is about one cent below the wholesale price of similar sugar in New York. The sale of American sugar in London is now a thing of frequent occurrence, and the prices over there are always considerably below our home market wholesale prices.

Does not this mean that our refiners make a special discount for export? Those republican organs which waxed wroth last year and denounced the "export discount" charge as false ought to turn their attention to this matter. Let them explain, too, why we need a duty on refined sugar.

Our barb wire manufacturers who recently formed a trust and advanced prices, do not confine themselves to the home market. In a single week recently about fifty tons of barb wire went off from New York for Australia. The trust is protected $13.00 a ton on wire. What is that duty for, considering that the trust can export wire? Is it to make prices higher in the home market than abroad?

Tin-Plate and Contract Labor.

It is stated that the authorities at Washington are to "review" Immigration Superintendent Owen's opinion that there is no legal impediment to the importation under contract of skilled tin-plate workers. Section 5 of the contract labor act reads in part as follows: "Nor shall this act be so construed as to prevent any person, or persons, partnership or corporation from engaging, under contract or agreement, skilled workmen in foreign countries to perform labor in the United States in or upon any new industry not at present established in the United States; provided that skilled labor for that purpose cannot be otherwise obtained." If there is no tin-plate industry in the country at present nor supply of skilled labor wherewith to initiate it the Superintendent has apparently a solid basis for his opinion. But in order to make this quite clear it will be necessary for those seeking permission to import foreign tin-plate workers to prove the nonexistence of tin-plate factories here, and also the incompetency of American labor to accomplish the work of "tinning." According to statements made by these same people before the ways and means committee and in Congress during the late tariff discussion, and frequently reiterated since, we have both a native tin-plate industry and native labor capable of handling it. Now that these assertions are likely to prove serious obstacles to the confirmation of the superintendent's opinion, it will be interesting to see how they are treated by their authors, as, possibly, in the disposition thereof, there may be dissipated much of the mystery now surrounding this "infant industry."—New York Commercial Bulletin.

Makes the Weak Strong

The marked benefit which people in run down or weakened state of health derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla, conclusively proves the claim that this medicine "makes the weak strong." It does not act like a stimulant, imparting fictitious strength from which there must follow a reaction of greater weakness than before, but in the most natural way Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, purifies the blood, and, in short, gives great bodily, nerve, mental and digestive strength.

Fagged Out

"Last spring I was completely fagged out. My strength left me and I felt sick and miserable all the time, so that I could hardly attend to my business. I took one bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it cured me. There is nothing like it." R. C. BEGOLE, Editor Enterprise, Belleville, Mich.

A REAL LUXURY!

Looking out over the many homes of this country, we see thousands of women wearing away their lives in household drudgery that might be materially lessened by the use of a few cakes of SAPOLIO. If an hour is saved each time a cake is used, if one less wrinkle gathers upon the face because the toil is lightened, she must be a foolish woman who would hesitate to make the experiment, and he a churlish husband who would grudge the few cents which it costs.

If your grocer sends you anything in place of SAPOLIO, send it back and insist upon having just what you ordered. SAPOLIO always gives satisfaction. On floors, tables, and painted work it acts like a charm. For scouring pots, pans, and metals it has no equal. SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

IS DON M. DICKINSON A SINGLE TAXER?

(The Standard.)

In a recent speech before the legislative committee of the lower house of the Michigan legislature, ex-Postmaster Gen. Don M. Dickinson laid down certain principles which will be pleasant reading to single taxers generally, and which show that the gentleman is very close to our ideas. In his address Mr. Dickinson endeavored to show that the failure to tax land values resulted detrimentally to the interests of the city of Detroit, for which city he was speaking. Said he:

As our population increases, as the commercial importance of a city grows, as all influences, including, as a great factor, economical, just and fair local government, add to the desirability of a city for the objects of business and homes, so real estate values increase, and so taxation increases, going hand in hand with the needs of progress.

Like Henry George, Mr. Dickinson calls it a "natural law," by which taxation increases as land values increase. It "makes area important," and "unnecessary land holdings are sold to those who will utilize the space for new and competing business purposes, and thus holdings become smaller, population becomes denser and diversity of trades, manufactures and occupations widen, all tending to, and evidence of, prosperity and greater wealth." "Henry George himself," says the Detroit Journal, "doesn't state the principle as tersely, and it is a principle which all can test by observation."

Then Mr. Dickinson proceeded to show how a violation of this natural law operates in Detroit. We quote from the review of his speech in the Journal of that city:

When the land isn't taxed at all, as in the case of the railroad property in this city, it can be held in large tracts. In this case "holdings" do not "become smaller;" population does not "become denser;" and there is not that diversity of trades and manufactures which Mr. Dickinson thinks necessary to wealth and prosperity.

In proof he presented an elaborate statement showing that the railroad companies of Detroit use 107 acres of business land for their business purposes, to say nothing of large holdings in the suburbs, but within the city limits. Of this 107 acres, 38 belong to the Michigan Central; 23 to the Detroit & Milwaukee and Grand Trunk; 40 to the Wabash, and 6 to the new union depot.

That these land holdings are largely speculative, and are possible only because of their exemption from taxation, Mr. Dickinson makes very clear, by a comparison with cities in which railroad property is taxed for local purposes. Thus the Dearborn street depot in Chicago, which has nearly as many trains per day as all of the Detroit depots combined, occupies only 5¾ acres of business land; the Canal street depot, only 8¼ acres. The Grand Central depot in New York occupies only 6¼ acres; the Boston & Albany depot in Boston, 6.12 acres.

The reason of this wonderful contrast is the one item of taxation. In New York, Boston and Chicago the railroad land is taxed, and hence the companies hold as little area of land fit for business sites as possible. Their yards and freight houses are on cheaper land, far from the center. So it would be in Detroit with a wise system of taxation, and the city's business would have more of a chance to expand.

Mr. Dickinson said "that for years and years Detroit was accounted slow." He thinks this is true in spite of her geographical position, which invites an influx of population and capital. It is this "violation of laws of natural growth," which has retarded Detroit's prosperity, the same violation which "has permitted low taxation on great tracts of real estate held in families." And with all due reverence, the speaker added: "God and the more equitable assessments for taxation have removed some of the stones upon its head; help us to remove this one"—that is the exemption of railroad property.

The Journal endorses Mr. Dickinson's position, and practically places itself in line with the single tax movement in the following words:

The principles which Mr. Dickinson presented in his masterly argument will in all probability ultimately govern our system of taxation. Even the farming community, which has been esteemed an opponent, is changing its opinions. At any rate, the Farmers' Alliance and Jerry Simpson are advocating the single tax. By placing state, county and municipal taxes wholly upon land values, the best and most productive use of land would necessarily follow. Speculative holding of land would be discouraged, and the city would have a healthy boom. It is foolish to tax houses and furniture, because the city wants more houses and furniture. Why discourage the making of what we all need? But we don't need land monopoly and speculation; we should seek to discourage the holding of land out of use or in inferior use, and hence it should bear the burden of taxation.

The bill for which Mr. Dickinson was addressing the legislative committee was introduced by Senator Park, and provides for the repeal of the special charters and general railroad laws that exempt railroad property from local taxation. The measure originated with Mayor Pingree, of Detroit, soon after his election, when he called on the people of his city to sustain him in a fight he was about to begin which would compel the railway companies to pay a just tax on the large amount of land owned by them, and on which they paid no taxes. The common council have stood by the mayor and the bill, its latest act being to pass a resolution which was ordered forward to the legislature, that in the judgment of the council the passage of the bill "is a matter of vital importance, not only to the people of this city, but to all the people" throughout the state. Business is meant by this common council, for it has called for "the co-operation and influence of every city, village and township in the state," and has ordered the city clerk "to mail a copy of the resolutions to every member of the legislature, to the mayor of every city, to the president of every village, and to the various supervisors of all townships throughout the state, so they can aid by their influence with their various representatives in securing the passage of said bill."

It is hardly necessary to speak of the other work that has been done by Mayor Pingree. The action of his assessors in the matter of assessments in Detroit is still fresh in the minds of Standard readers. The mayor, common council and assessors of that city were elected as republicans, and they and Mr. Dickinson, who is a democrat, are doing great work in advancing our cause.

How the Personal Property Tax Works.

The following item was clipped from the San Francisco Chronicle of February 27:

Very recently several million dollars of certificates were received at the subtreasury in this city, but they have all disappeared. The cause of the sudden demand for government notes lies in the fact that on Monday next the state and municipal assessments will be levied, and the banks are anxious to get rid of their money "on hand." Within the past week the sub-treasury has received over $3,000,000 in gold from the banks, giving notes in exchange not subject to taxation. In round figures the amount of money which will escape taxation by this artifice will not be less than $5,000,000. The state and county will lose $100,000 in taxes.

Having been an employe of the assessor's office for some years past, and having had access to all statements filed, I am in a position to vouch for the truthfulness and accuracy of the above article.

The assessment laws of this state provide that a sworn statement of all personal property in one's possession at twelve o'clock noon on the first Monday in March in each year, shall be made and filed with the assessor of each county; and every year, at just about the aforementioned time, all our banking institutions find it convenient, and, I dare say, deem it proper and in keeping with the principles of good government, to convert their money into government notes, and thereby escape taxation. Not only is this practice carried out by our banking firms, but our large mercantile houses, wholesale and retail, consider it to their interest to deposit in bank all their money on hand, thus shifting their responsibility and feeling assured at the same time that the banks will not be caught napping.

While our mints are running to their full capacity, and placing in circulation vast amounts of money, yet it is a matter of record (vide assessor's personal property roll) that the amount of "money on hand" grows beautifully less yearly.

In striking contrast to this palpable evasion of the law by the rich, the poorer and middle classes are forced, under penalty of the law, to file a sworn statement, setting forth all their earthly possessions, and are closely and rigidly questioned relative to the value of their belongings, and should the assessor be in doubt as to the contents of an affidavit, he forthwith sends his deputy to summarily and arbitrary assess the unfortunate individual. In this manner is the law vindicated. What a howling farce such a system is, indeed.—W. C. McClosky, San Francisco, Cal., in The Standard.

The Single Tax in England.

An English friend writing to Mr. George says: "The English Land Restoration League has adopted a very effective method of carrying the gospel of 'The Land for the People' into the rural districts of England, which have long been regarded as almost inaccessible for such work. A van has been fitted up, with convenience for sleeping and cooking, and in this—at once a traveling home and office for the league's missionaries—the secretary and others have been traveling from village to village in Suffolk, holding a meeting every evening, distributing literature and collecting information on the social condition of the people. In this campaign the league is working in the closest possible co-operation with the Eastern Counties Labor Federation—a young and vigorous organization, which, starting as an ordinary trades union, has rapidly come to the conclusion that the labor question is insoluble except through the land question. Crowded meetings have been held in every village, and the federation has been considerably strengthened by the addition of new members and of new branches. The laborers in this district are paid about $3 (twelve shillings) or less per week. Much of the land is out of cultivation; most of it is 'labor-starved.' A wretched cottage rents at $23 a year. Some of the cartoons on the land question which appeared in the Standard and in the Toronto Grip have been greatly enlarged, mounted and framed, and these, displayed on the sides of the van at each meeting, are found one of the most effective means of educating even the most ignorant.

Again, a Single Tax Mayor!

Len W. Hoch is the new young man mayor of Adrian, and his biography may be read to children as a receipt by which to make their lives sublime and leave behind them tracks in the sands of time, as it were. He is but thirty-one years old and has risen to political and business prominence simply by lifting himself by his own boot-straps. What he is he owes entirely to his own efforts, without assistance. He was born in Coldwater, and spent the first thirteen years of his life in Adrian. His parents were not rich, and when very young Mr. Hoch made the great stroke of his life and joined the journalistic profession as devil in the Adrian Times office. He learned the trade and worked in numerous and divers places, always saved his money, and finally drifted back to Adrian in 1885 and began the grocery business with his brother. The business grew and now their sign is written over two big stores. He is a democrat, a single tax and Henry George man, and widely posted on economic notions.—Detroit Evening News.

CHRIST'S AUTHORITY.

LESSON VI, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, AUG. 9.

Text of the Lesson, John v, 17-30—Commit Verses, 24-27—Golden Text, Matt. xviii, 18—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

After the last lesson we see Jesus at Cana again, whence He healed the nobleman's son at Capernaum. In the regular narrative of His life there would then come in, probably, the call of the four as they were engaged at their work by the sea of Galilee, the Sermon on the Mount, a number of miracles at Capernaum, and the call of Matthew. We now find Him again at Jerusalem, at one of the feasts of the Jews, and He heals a helpless man, who had been a sufferer for thirty-eight years, on the Sabbath day, commanding him to take up his bed and walk. Therefore did the Jews persecute Jesus, and sought to slay Him, because He had done these things on the Sabbath day.

17. "But Jesus answered them, My Father worketh hitherto, and I work."

The oneness of the Father and the Son is a truth much dwelt upon in this gospel, and constantly emphasized, and that all the words and works of Jesus were not His but the Father's.

18. "Therefore the Jews sought the more to kill Him, because He not only had broken the Sabbath, but said also that God was His father, making Himself equal with God."

Observe the significance of the relationship of Son and Father as here brought out—it is not inferiority, nor descent by generation, but equality, oneness of character.

19. "The Son can do nothing of Himself, but what seeth He the Father do; for what things soever He doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise."

Thus replied Jesus, prefixing His double verily, or Amen, Amen, reminding us of Isa. lxv, 16 (R. V., margin). Seeing Jesus, they saw God the Father; hearing Him, they heard the Father; in all His works they saw the Father's works (chapter i, 18; xiv, 9, 10). What a field for meditation is here for us, and what great reason for the deepest humiliation on the part of every believer!

20. "For the Father loveth the Son, and sheweth Him all things that Himself doeth; and He will shew Him greater works than these, that ye may marvel."

As to the Father's love to the Son, consider these wondrous words in reference to us who believe: "As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you;" "The Father Himself loveth you."

21. "For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them, even so the Son quickeneth whom He will."

The word "quicken" is sometimes used in reference to bringing life to a soul dead in sin, as in Eph. ii, 5; Col. ii, 13; and sometimes in reference to bringing to life a dead body.

22. "For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son."

Here is the great fact that all judgment hath been committed unto the Son.

23. "That all men should honor the Son even as they honor the Father. He that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father which hath sent Him."

And yet there are many who say they believe in God, and trust in Him and worship Him, who will not acknowledge the Divinity of the Son, or, in other words, His equality with the Father; but all the while they insist that they are true worshipers of the true God. With this verse before us what conclusion can we come to but that all such are fearfully deceived.

24. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth My word, and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life."

So also in chapters iii, 16, 36; vi, 47. Not will have when we die, nor will have if we are faithful, nor will have if we add so many good works, but simply and emphatically, "He that heareth and believeth HATH." "This is the record that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in His Son. He that hath the Son hath life" (1 John v, 11, 12).

"And shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death into life."

To the believer there is no future judgment for sins, for all were laid on Jesus, and we have the assurance of Him who cannot lie that they shall be remembered no more (Isa. liii, 5, 6; xliii, 25). But there shall be a judgment for service for all believers.

25. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live."

As in chapter iv, 21-23, so here and in verse 28 our Lord uses the word "hour" in reference to an indefinite period of time. The hour of this verse still continues, and will till the hour of verse 28, and probably till the end of that hour, when the judgment of the great white throne shall be set. To prove that all who have not yet received Jesus are dead read I John v, 12; Eph ii, 4, 5; I Tim. v, 6; Rev. iii, 1.

26. "For as the Father hath life in Himself, so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself."

Even science has proved that there can be no life apart from pre-existent life. If this is true of natural life, can we for a moment question the fact that there can be no spiritual life apart from God.

27. "And hath given Him authority to execute judgment also, because He is the Son of Man."

This emphasizes verse 22, but brings out a new thought, "because He is the son of man."

28. "Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear His voice."

If the hour of verse 25, which now is, and still continues, has already lasted over 1,800 years, it will not be strange if the coming hour shall last at least 1,000 years. Then shall His voice reach even the bodies of those whose spirits have been called from earth.

29. "And shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation."

Here are two resurrections, one to life and one to loss eternal.

30. "I can of mine own self do nothing."

Let us therefore abide in Him, that we speak His words and do His works by His spirit dwelling in us.

"As I hear I judge, and My judgment is just, because I seek not Mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent Me."

His judgment is just or right cons because He judges not according to the appearance, which also he exhorts us not to do. Let our words and works testify that we delight to do God's will and seek only His glory, and then we shall stand approved in that day.

CUPID'S CONQUEST.

The Satterthwaite homestead on Railroad street was the scene of a most happy social event on Thursday evening last. At that time the popular landlord of the Lilley House, Mr. Charles Francis Patterson, led to the marriage altar Miss Alice J. Satterthwaite. A large and brilliant company gathered to witness the nuptials and offer their congratulations to the young couple who were about to embark on life's uncertain voyage. Promptly at 8 o'clock Rev. J. Phelps led the way to the parlor. He was followed by Master Donald James, son of S. A. James, of Detroit, and little Allie Satterthwaite, a niece of the bride; then followed the bride and groom, who took their place in front of a canopy of evergreens and flowers in the south parlor. Mr. Phelps read the marriage formula from the Episcopal ritual, which made the twain one. The usual congratulations and hand-shaking were bestowed upon the happy couple. After which the guests partook of a wedding luncheon. The interim, between refreshments and the arrival of the train, was passed in social converse, music and mirth.

The principal rooms of the house were a veritable bower of evergreens and flowers. The balustrade of the hall stair-way was wound with a rope of arbor vitae twigs and branches of the same were placed above the doors opening into the parlors. In the south front parlor, in which the ceremony was performed, the bridal party stood in a bower of evergreens, dotted with open white water lillies. Suspended from the ceiling above them was a cupid's bow of fine white flowers, its arrow of white pansies piercing a heart of scarlet blossoms. Ferns and palms covered the open piano and the mantel was banked with scarlet. White camelias hung above the pictures and two piano lamps in white and gold and scarlet completed the decorations. The north front parlor was adorned in yellow, blossoms of varied shades covering the tables, book-case and mantel, the whole lighted by a standing lamp shaded in yellow. In the two large rooms at the rear end of the hall the collation was served. In each of these stood a table spread with refreshments. One of these tables, in addition to the eatables, held a cake of ice surrounded with greens and scarlet berries, and the same covered the mantel. A large shaded lamp of scarlet added to the pleasing effect. In the other collation room the mantel was banked with pink blossoms interwoven with branches of feathery "smoke." A center piece of pansies and some loose blossoms on the table turned their wondering faces towards the guests, as if to bid them welcome. The lawn in front of the house and the porch were tastily decorated with Chinese lanterns, while settees and rugs were scattered about in profusion. The old mansion was nicely equipped to entertain its guests and a happier company probably never assembled within its walls.

A large room upstairs was devoted to a display of the bridal gifts, of which there was a beautiful and costly array. Articles of household furniture, books, silverware and bric-a-brac of various kinds made up an assortment of mementoes, both useful and ornamental, which told the story of their friendships more loudly than words can express.

As the hour approached for the Jackson train the entire company escorted the bridal couple to the depot, and amid a shower of rice and hand-shaking and music by the band, the happy pair took the Lake Shore train for a few days' trip to Detroit and Mackinaw.

The following guests from abroad honored the occasion by their presence: Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Pardington, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Koch, of Toledo; Mrs. Eva Satterlee, of Kansas City; Mrs. S. A. and Mrs. A. W. James, of Detroit; Dr. E. B. Hause, of St. Paul; Fred Quine, of Toledo; Mrs. E. C. Baird, of Dayton, Ohio; Harry Dunn, of Chicago; Mrs. Anna Newbern, of Cleveland; Miss Nelson, of Ithica; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Norris, of Toledo; Mrs. James Wilson, of Detroit.

The young couple, who so auspiciously start upon their matrimonial journey together, have always lived in Tecumseh, and the friendships that have grown up during their youthful years cluster around them. They will not leave our village to find a distant home among strangers, but will begin life's earnest work among their old associates here. Among all who bid them God-speed at this joyous season not one will do so with a warmer grasp of the hand than the HERALD. May their lines fall in pleasant places and their lives be illumined with the sunshine of prosperity.

BOUND FOR DETROIT.

Tecumseh was stirring bright and early Monday morning. The G. A. R. Post and W. R. C. Corps were booked for Detroit that morning via a special train, and the Kid Band also was to be in the party. The Jackson Branch train contained three extra coaches and they were all overflowing when the Tecumseh contingent were safely on board.

The train passed through here promptly on time and at Lenawee Junction met the regular Detroit train. This was divided into two sections of seven cars each, one going over the Dundee branch and the other via Monroe. The cars containing the Tecumseh crowd were attached to the Monroe section, although a few uneasy bodies got off at the Junction and went over the Dundee division.

After leaving the Junction the train made good time to Monroe. It was crowded to suffocation and even standing room was at a premium, but it was a delightful morning and a good-natured crowd, and hence the trip to Detroit was a very pleasant one. The Tecumseh crowd was numerous enough, so that we felt quite at home. The members of Beers Post predominated, but there were many others on board also. Below is a partial list of the Tecumseh contingent.

Capt. A. D. Lawrence, S. P. Hosmer, Wm. Smallidge, L. Q. C. Rising, Jno. Thurlby, Lon Pennock, Geo. Snell, W. C. Heck, Tom Hanley, A. P. Coddington, Ell Gray, S. W. Temple, Bert Garlinghouse, S. P. Sheldon, Chas. McNeil, H. J. Sweet, E. M. Camburn, Chas. Wiley, Art Brezee, Wm. DeMott, Geo. Swartz, Geo. VanTine, Chas. E. Barry, Sam Brangan, Dr. Woodward, Alva Spayde, J. D. Shull, Jno. Frost, S. M. Smith, Chas. Davis, J. M. Ingersoll, Wm. Steinhoff and wife, Wm. Messler, Jno. Fisher and daughter, Dr. L. Barnes, L. B. Thompson, W. S. Morse, H. H. Westcott, H. W. Stevens, Eugene Hodges, Horace Burgess, Jacob Woodbeck, Wm. Chidester, Geo. Chidester, R. P. Butrick, Thos. Langton, B. F. Lamkins, Jehiel Davidson, Al Morseman, Delos Love, Rev. J. S. Joslin, Chas. Joslin, J. W. Wightman.

The following members of the W. R. C. were on board: Miss L. Loana Stacy and Mesdames Sheldon, Hanley, Coddington, Messler, Smallidge, Rising, Woodbeck, Heck, Ingersoll, Campbell and Barnes.

The Kid Band cut a pretty good swath in the crowd also, with the following roster: Prof. C. F. Skinner, Leon Green, Jas. Rogers, Robt. McClure, Clarence Lewis, S. E. Frankenfeld, W. J. Ingersoll, Martin Gray, Jas. Elliott, Cleo Hall, C. Sweet, W. Stevenson, Joe Lomax, Charley Skinner, Will Skinner, Chas. Green, Claude Hubbard, Peter Ridgeley, Edgar Coddington, Robt. Haney and Martin Crossman, Drum Major.

Upon arriving at Monroe the venerable E. H. Custer, father of Gen. Custer, got on board. He was immediately taken in charge by Ell Gray, who had already provided comfortable quarters for him in Detroit. On the Toledo part of the train, which joined us at Monroe, was ex-President R. B. Hayes, of Ohio. Surely we had our share of distinguished passengers.

The train pulled into Brush street depot at about eleven o'clock, with ten overflowing coaches, and already there was an immense crowd about the grounds. The G. A. R. boys and band marched up to Jefferson Avenue and thence out to Camp Walker, where their permanent quarters are located. The ladies of the W. R. C. went to the High School building, where all the W. R. C. delegates met to register, and the other Tecumseh people were soon lost in the crowd. At noon on Monday Detroit contained the lagest crowd we ever saw within the city, and heavy trains of excursionists were arriving all that afternoon and through the night until Tuesday morning.

Camp Walker, where the Tecumseh vets were stationed, is about two miles east on Jefferson Ave. It is a nice location and afforded excellent quarters for the boys. We returned home Monday evening via the Wabash and Mackinaw roads and hence failed to witness the great parade on Tuesday. Thirty thousand vets were in line and as many more were outside of the parade, among the spectators. The City was profusely and grandly decorated, from Belle Isle to the Exposition grounds, and the proceedings of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday were an unqualified success throughout. We shall give a condensed report of the entire encampment meetings in next week's HERALD.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS.

It has been said that skilful advertising will accomplish wonders, and this is partly true, for it is no uncommon thing to see various nostrums achieve a brief notoriety in this way. But they do not outlast the notices that herald them. Thus it is that the mercurial and potash remedies are constantly appearing before the public in new disguises. Advertising, however, will not account for the popularity the S. S. S. has enjoyed for fifty years, nor for the fact that it has become a household remedy; nor will advertising account for the thousands of testimonials that the people have given in its behalf. Only the most substantial merit can account for the estimation in which this wonderful medicine is held.

A SHOCKING ACCIDENT.

A heartrending accident occurred in Tecumseh last Saturday night by which Frank Manley lost his life. Mr. Manley has been running the stable on the corner north of Marsh's meat market. Saturday night he hitched up a horse and buggy at a late hour and took Pat Hendershot home. Upon his return, which was after one o'clock at night, he encountered a special freight train going south over the Jackson Branch. It seems likely that he had fallen asleep or in the darkness did not realize the close proximity of the train. While attempting to cross the track south in front of the Central Hotel, the horse ran against the train and a freight car struck the buggy, overturning it, and throwing Frank out upon the track. The caboose ran directly over his body, mangling him in a shocking manner. The brakeman felt the shock and knew the car had struck something, halted the train, went back and discovered the body. As soon as help and a physician could be procured, the remains were taken in charge by Mr. Kinney and conveyed to his store.

The next morning Justice Wightman empanelled a jury and an inquest was held, the following persons constituting the jury: Chas. Bidwell, C. E. Williamson, J. H. Aten, Henry Keyser, Harry Wood, and Chas. Albaugh. Eight witnesses were sworn, viz: Conductor Fuller, two brakemen, Will Skinner, Ernest VanWinkle, Comfort Chase, Dr. O. O. Jones, H. W. Stevens. As no one actually saw the accident, the circumstances attending it were largely a matter of conjecture. After hearing the testimony the jury rendered a verdict that the deceased came to his death on August 2d, between the hours of one and 2 o'clock a. m., by coming in contact with a Lake Shore & Mich. Southern freight train; that the Railroad company and their employees were exonerated from all blame as to the cause of his death.

The funeral services were held at three o'clock Monday afternoon, at the family residence on R. R. street. Mrs. Vincent Wood officiated and gave a beautiful address full of comfort to the mourners. Mr. Manley was a hard working man and a good citizen. His sudden and awful death shocked the community. He leaves a wife and four children who have the sympathy of all in their dire affliction.

Journalistic Ethics Again.

We venture a final word on the subject of "Journalistic Ethics." The Messenger states that we are mistaken in charging it with neglecting to mention the HERALD'S new dress, and republishes the favorable notice it gave at the time. We accept its statement as true. This is petty business to get into a wrangle about, we admit, and we should take no further notice of it, but for the fact that some people might accuse us of misrepresenting the Messenger. A few words will reveal the exact status of the controversy.

In our issue of May 7th we donned our new suit. In our issue of May 21st we published a batch of complimentary notices, clipped from exchanges, in relation thereto. Two days later, on May 23d, the Messenger also had a very nice little notice, but owing to its tardiness in appearing it escaped our observation entirely. If we had followed Brother Grandon's rule we would have raked him down in our issue of May 21st for violating journalistic ethics. It would have been such a grand chance to draw an invidious comparison between a cold-water saint and the common herd of sinners. Now, why was the Messenger so tardy in its notice? Perhaps the editor was absent from home a few days just at that time; perhaps his wife was away on a visit and the editor himself had to cook his own hash; perhaps a rush of extra work caused him to neglect his County exchanges; perhaps a notice was actually prepared and then crowded out by more important matter. Whatever the cause, we haven't the least idea that it was designed as a slight. All of which goes to show that little slips of this kind are liable to happen in the best regulated newspaper offices; that they are rarely due to intentional discourtesy, but almost always to inadvertence or oversight. We would bet dollars to doughnuts that the ethical editor himself, since he has cooled off, would privately own up that his hasty attack on his County contemporaries was a bad breach of "Journalistic Ethics."

Rec. Sec.—R. Holdway.

Bert Tribou now has a desk in the office of the National Loan and Investment Co., at 174 Griswold St., Detroit. We gave him a short call Monday and found him as healthy and hearty as of yore. He evidently enjoys life and is pleased with his business situation.

The Prairie Side Celery Co., is the name of the firm now running the Dr. Stewart celery farm. The young men composing the company, J. M. Bittman, L. E. Stewart and P. W. A. Fitzsimons, make a strong team and the farm is being well managed this season, under their charge.

While in Detroit Monday we gave Judge Andrew Howell a short call. Found him at his desk in a cosy little office on the fourth floor, surrounded with books and manuscripts as usual. The judge is enjoying a lucrative practice now. He and his family are delighted with Detroit as a residence.

Three wheat stacks belonging to Horace Parker, who owns what is known as the Prosper Davis farm, one-half a mile southeast of Deerfield, burned last evening. The fire is believed to have originated from a grandson, who is about knee-high, and who was smoking cigarettes in the early evening about the stacks.

During our brief stay in Detroit, Monday, we dropped in to see S. A. James & Co., and found Sam and Alf both at home. Alf spends most of his time on the road but is at home this week. They have six traveling men now on the road and expect to put on two more soon. They will sell about 25,000 dozen gloves during the year 1891. Their business is continually growing, having more than doubled, up to July 1st, over last year. They are well satisfied with the outlook.

Dr. D. D. Meeker, who has been afflicted with a tumor for several months past, was relieved from his earthly sufferings on Monday last and entered into eternal rest. His demise has been expected for some time. He had more than filled the allotted span of life, being nearly 77 years old. The funeral services were attended at the Presbyterian church yesterday forenoon. A fitting tribute to his memory will appear in a future issue.

Our special 20 per cent discount sale closes Wednesday, Aug. 12.

The Teachers Institute at Adrian is well attended this week. Prof. Hammon, the conductor, made a flying trip to Tecumseh one day last week.

Mrs. E. E. Koch, of Toledo, who came here last Thursday to attend the Patterson-Satterthwaite nuptials, is remaining a few days to complete her visit.

Tom Hunter, formerly of Adrian, is now on the staff of the Rocky Mountain News at Denver, and is attending the Detroit encampment in the interest of that paper.

The third annual meeting of the Michigan Produce Shipper's Association will be held at Lansing next Tuesday. C. E. Williamson is President of the Association.

We acknowledge the receipt of a complimentary ticket to the first Dundee fair. It will be held Sept. 8, 9, 10 and 11 and the new association are making special efforts to get up a fine exhibition.

Remember the Patrons' picnic at Holloway to-morrow. Hon. A. S. Partridge is booked for an address and there will be other short speeches, vocal music, etc. There will be a basket dinner in Doty's grove, and the exercises will be held immediately thereafter.

Card of Thanks.

A MYSTERY SOLVED.

The Story of a Michigan Murder Cleared Up.

Leading Citizens Are Implicated—Story of the Career of the Murdered Man, Who Was the Son of King William.

AFTER MANY YEARS.

PETOSKEY, Mich., Aug. 3.—The prosecuting attorney of Presque Isle county has issued warrants for the arrest of the following men for the murder of Albert Moliter and Ed Sullivan, of Rogers City, sixteen years ago: Herman Hoeft, Andrew E. Banks, John Bauder, Redmond Bruder, Frederick Bruder, August Groseman, Carl Vogeler, Gottlieb Menda, Charles Weissengert, August Sorgenfry, August Furman, Fred John Henry Jacobs and the confessor, William Repke. Two are dead. There is great excitement in Rogers City over the arrests, as the men are all prominent and some hold public offices. Herman Hoeft, one of the oldest and wealthiest citizens and for several terms the county treasurer, was, it is claimed, one of the ringleaders in the conspiracy to murder Moliter and Lark, but Lark was not conveniently around on the evening fixed for the shooting, and the young clerk, Ed Sullivan, fell a victim instead. The confessor, Repke, states neither Hoeft nor Banks were with the gang in the evening of the shooting; that Banks remained at home and Hoeft alleged he was obliged to leave on business and took the boat during the afternoon, but he had promised if the killing was successful the men were to receive the reward agreed upon, and that it had been deposited at some place known to them. A German woman by the name of Kraus, who is now living near Bank's house, having seen frequent gatherings there became inquisitive, and on one occasion crept into an addition adjoining the house and overheard the whole conspiracy. She has mentioned this, but fearing bodily harm might come to her if she divulged too much, never gave any names, but her story is now confirmed by Repke. She removed to Detroit last fall, where she and her daughter now reside. August Groseman, of Bismarck township, for many years the supervisor and holding the position now, and Henry Jacobs, of Belknap and ex-supervisor were also of the leaders, and Repke says the latter is one of the two who fired the fatal shots according to a preconcerted arrangement by lot. John Bruder, Ferdinand Bruder and Frederick Bruder were also of the crowd, and at least two of them now live in Wayne county.

The confession of Repke brings with it the stories of Molitor's life. It appears that he was a natural son of old King William of Wurtemburg, and came to this country when quite young, being banished for trying to steal a plan of the fortifications at Uhlan. After coming here he enlisted in the army and soon rose to a place on Gen. Siegel's staff. After the war he went to Detroit, married and formed a partnership with a man named Rogers. They came to this county and built a mill, importing Germans and Poles to work it. The burning of the mill caused Rogers to draw out. He left Molitor without money. By his influence with the Germans Molitor got himself elected treasurer of the county, and it is said that by manipulating the money and juggling with the funds rebuilt the mill and acquired a great deal of money. He refused to make any accounting and ruled the people with a rod of iron, bringing upon himself, so many people say, the fate he met. A queer part of the case and the confession is the remarkable series of hard blows which have followed Repke. Two years ago his house barned, and since that time has experienced many misfortunes. His horses died in the fields, two of his children were drowned, his wife was the only one that died of the grip in Presque Isle, and two of his tenement houses burned. It was this hard luck and the fact that he could not sleep nights for thinking of the crime that led to the confession.

KILLED BY FIENDS.

Drunken Italian Laborers in Wayne County, W. Va., Murder a Husband, Wife and Their Five Children.

CATLETTSBURG, Ky., Aug. 3.—Wayne county, W. Va., was the scene of a series of murders on Friday night. Mr. Brumfield, his wife and five children were murdered in a most horrible manner and their bodies consumed by fire. About midnight fifty Italian railway laborers became drunk and started on a tour of devastation. The Brumfield family were thought to have considerable money. The Italians went to Brumfield's residence and were refused admittance. Doors and windows were then forced open. Mr. Brumfield, with his two half grown sons, fought with desperation, but were finally murdered, their throats being cut from ear to ear and the bodies repeatedly stabbed. Mrs. Brumfield and her three little children were next killed by the drunken Italians, who then searched the house for money and set it on fire. Mr. Brumfield was influential and wealthy. Two or three years ago while county commissioner he opposed the building of a new court house and thus made many enemies. The court house was built, and it is thought that Friday night's work was the result of the old feud, and that Brumfield's enemies plied the Italians with liquor and then pointed out the path to the residence.

GORED TO DEATH.

Mrs. William Brown, the Wife of a Rich Cherokee, with Her Two Little Girls, Gored to Death by a Mad Steer.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan., Aug. 3.—Mrs. William Brown, the wife of a rich Cherokee living in the strip south of this city, with her two little girls, was gored to death by a mad steer. Mrs. Brown was riding several miles from her home when a drove of range cattle came up. Several of the steers charged the light vehicle in which the woman and her children were riding, and the wagon was overturned by a steer, which gored the horse and then killed Mrs. Brown. A cowboy with the drove rode up hurriedly, but before he could shoot the frenzied animal had unseated him and pierced him through. The children were caught under the overturned wagon, and the mad animal crushed them with his feet. Brown is one of the wealthiest of the many rich cattlemen on the strip. He is at present somewhere in the east. The cowboy, a man named Dalton, was formerly a herder for Brown and was a cousin to Mrs. Brown.

A LIFE JOB.

Murderer Elliott Secures One at the Hands of an Ohio Jury.

COLUMBUS, O., July 29.—William J. Elliott, the former proprietor and editor of the Sunday Capital, who, with his brother, P. J. Elliott, killed Albert C. The trial has been in progress since May 11. The crime was the direct result of personal journalism. By the laws of Ohio murder in the second degree is punishable by life imprisonment, the court having no alternative in the matter. Notice of a motion for a new trial was made and so sentence was not passed.

SIGNED THE TREATY.

The President Affixes His Signature to the Reciprocity Treaty.

Sugar, Molasses, Coffee and Hides to Be Admitted Free by America—Scores of Articles, Flour Excepted, Exempted.

SPANISH RECIPROCITY.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The president Friday night issued his proclamation announcing the completion of a reciprocity treaty with Spain as to certain products of Cuba and Porto Rico and the United States.

The treaty contains two distinct provisions: 1. For the transitory schedule from September 1, 1891, to July 1, 1892. 2. For a definite schedule of goods to be reciprocally exchanged after that date.

The products to be imported from Cuba and Porto Rico are those provided in section 3 of the McKinley act, viz.: Sugar, molasses, coffee and hides. The products and manufactures of the United States, which are to be admitted free, or at greatly reduced rates, are set forth in long schedules.

The formal correspondence between the two countries which preceded this proclamation is of the most friendly character. The details of the negotiation have been under the supervision of Hon. John W. Foster, former minister to Spain. It is to be noticed that there are some restrictions, due to the international obligations of Spain; and some conditions imposed by the provincial laws and customs, and others out of regard for the agricultural interests of Spain. The condition as to United States flour is one of these.

The Spanish minister in his concluding communication says: "The benefit in the reduction of duties granted to American wheat and wheat flour shall not take effect until the first day of January, 1892. Flour shall be excluded from said reduction, and shall not therefore share in it, which, on its departure from the posts of the union destined to those of Cuba and Porto Rico, may be favored with drawbacks or other tariff advantages."

This restriction was deemed necessary by the cabinet of Spain in order that the Spanish farmer and miller might have some slight advantage over the United States in the matter of export flour. Cuba has been the chief market for Spanish flour; and it has been made so on account of tariff negotiations which discriminated in favor of Spanish flour. American manufacturers, by better methods of manufacture, better quality of produce and cheaper transportation, may be able to overcome the slight discrimination that is still retained in favor of the Spanish farmer and miller.

The maintenance of the municipal duties is another reservation. As to these the Spanish minister says: "Respecting the North American articles of food, drink and fuel specified in the annexed transitory schedule, which were imported into said islands, the government of Spain, with restricting the rights of the municipal councils, will seek to have the latter impose upon them no greater municipal duties than those which national product pay, and that they shall not materially increase the price of said articles."

This means that the government of Spain will not attempt to abolish these ancient municipal duties; but the influence of the Spanish cabinet will be exerted to prevent these local taxes from adding to the price of the imports.

No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault.

"An almost fatal attack of La Grippe last winter left me with nasal Catarrh and such susceptibility to bronchial irritation that the slightest exposure would develop it, and a very little effort in public speaking would result in a distressing hoarseness so that I had serious fears of permanent disability. Besides, I suffered with dyspeptic troubles—notably what is popularly known as 'heartburn,' from which I found it difficult to obtain relief. I was induced by a friend to try KING'S ROYAL GERMETUER, and it gives me great pleasure to say that its effect has been as marked as 'Koch's Lymph' is reported to be, which is also a 'germ destroyer,' though taken in a different way.

WHO IS THAT OLD JAY?

A Chicago gentleman of wealth and position was walking upon one of the ultra-fashionable thoroughfares arm in arm with an old man who wore clothes that can only be purchased at a country store. He was one of those kind faced and vigorous old men, and the atmosphere around him suggested the scent of clover fields. In the vulgar parlance he was a "jay." An acquaintance of the Chicago man, seeing him in company with this suburban individual, in a facetious manner asked: "Who is that old jay?" The following is the answer he received:

Who is that old Jay? Well,
It won't take very long to tell.
Did I get him out of a grab-bag? No;
I made his acquaintance years ago.
It was over there in the Buckeye state
That he and I became intimate;
By Jove! It's thirty-five years to-day
Since I was introduced to that old Jay.

Yes, his whiskers are cut a little queer,
His clothes look rather awkward here,
There is a contrast between his and mine.
Well, style never was much in his line;
Yet somehow, I'm kind of fond of him.
Yes, I know he's a farmer, while I'm in the "swim."
I'm showing him all the sights to-day,
And having fun with that old Jay.

The first I remember of him, way back,
He whittled for me a jumping jack.
I thought it the funniest kind of thing;
It was ecstacy to pull the string;
And then we'd sit by the big woodfire,
And he told me of David and Goliah;
I've spent many happy hours that way,
Being entertained by that old Jay.

Then I've often leaned on his good wife's knee,
And been told of Him from Galilee.
"Suffer little children to come unto me,
For of such is the Kingdom of Heaven," said He.
The gates of Heaven were opened wide,
And Jesus beckoned her to His side.
I shed many, many scalding tears that day,
As I stood at her coffin with that old Jay.

Time flew fast and years rolled on,
A birthday came, I was twenty-one,
I thought life on the farm too slow,
So I determined that I would go
To some great city and be a swell;
The neighbors said I was going to—well,
Of course the neighbors would have their say,
But one had faith; it was that old Jay.

I left with his blessing and dollars, too,
That blessing was luck and the dollars grew
Heap upon heap until my fortune was made;
I owe it to him and the wise things he said.
I know he looks sort of awkward and queer,
But if it wasn't for him I wouldn't be here,
Let me introduce you. Oh! don't hurry away,
He is my father, is that dear old Jay.

FEROBIA'S FAILURE.

It Was One of the Successful Kind, Anyhow.

"You're a stannin' in yer own light, Feroby."

Timothy Filbert shook his head solemnly as he spoke. He was a large man, with small, light blue eyes, and a chronic stoop in the shoulders, suggestive of a too steady application to the plow.

"You're a stannin' in yer own light," he repeated, impressively.

"Nebbe you're right, Timothy," admitted his sister, meekly. She was not naturally of a meek disposition, but there are times when the most spirited person feels crushed by circumstances, and such a moment had come to Miss Ferobia. Timothy felt somewhat placated by the unexpected admission.

"Tain't too late yet," he suggested, briskly, taking his seat at the breakfast table, where his sister was already pouring the coffee. "You just say the word, Feroby, an' I'll give Jason Smallweed a hint that you've changed yer mind."

His pale blue eyes glanced inquiringly at his sister, but Miss Ferobia's momentary meekness seemed to have vanished as unaccountably as it had appeared.

"I haven't changed my mind," she retorted, with much asperity. "I won't marry Jason Smallweed, nor nobuddy else. I'll stay right nere an' keep house for you the balance of my days."

Timothy wriggled uneasily. He had his own reasons for not appreciating the generous offer. To fortify himself for the disclosure which must be made he swallowed half his coffee at a gulp.

"I—I—the truth is, Feroby," he stammered, with a crimson countenance, "I felt so sartin I was a-goin' to lose you, I—I asked Nancy Garget, an' she said she'd have me."

The cat was out of the bag now, and Timothy mopped his face with his handkerchief and breathed a sigh of relief.

But Miss Ferobia, like a sensible woman, bore the shock bravely.

"And how soon am I to give up my situation?" she asked.

Timothy grew uncomfortable again.

"Hey? Oh!—why—you needn't to be in a hurry. It won't come off fur a week yet," he hastened to explain. "An', of course, you know I wouldn't hev nothin' agin yer stayin' right along, same as ever, only Nancy, she—"

"You couldn't hire me to stay," was the reassuring answer, and Timothy congratulated himself on having the matter so easily settled.

"It puzzled me consider'ble to know why Timothy was so sot on me changin' my mind," reflected Miss Ferobia, as she washed up the breakfast dishes and polished the knives and forks. "But it's plain as a pikestaff now. I might o' knowed he was sayin' one word fur me an' two fur hisself."

Miss Ferobia was as unlike her brother in appearance as she was in disposition.

While he was stoop-shouldered she was straight as an arrow. And though, as she admitted, she was "getting along" in years, her bright eyes and fresh complexion contradicted the assertion.

At her brother's request she remained at her post until the wedding was over and the bride installed in her new home.

There was very little congeniality between the two women, and Mrs. Timothy Filbert was disposed to triumph over her sister-in-law.

"I s'pose you wasn't a-countin' on your brother marryin'," she remarked, disagreeably, as she combed out her ink-black tresses before the square-framed looking glass in the best room.

"He had a right to please himself," rejoined Miss Ferobia, composedly.

"But what are you going to do?" persisted the bride. "As I told Timothy before I promised to have him, the house wa'n't big enough fur two families, an' you couldn't expect to stay after I come."

"An' as I told him, I wouldn't stay if he paid me for it," retorted Miss Ferobia, emphatically.

"Oh, you're mighty independent," sniffed Nancy, tossing her head. "I suppose you're a-calculatin' to take up with Jason Smallweed. You wouldn't ketch me marryin' a widderer," she added, maliciously. "If I couldn't be the tablecloth I wouldn't be the dish-rag. But I s'pose he's Hobson's choice with you."

The truth was that she was afraid her sister-in-law might still manage to retain a place in the household by hook or by crook, and she was determined to provoke an altercation in order to prevent such a sequence.

But Miss Ferobia was not to be drawn into a quarrel.

"He may be Hobson's choice, but he is not mine," she returned, coolly.

Nancy, however, was as persistent as a gnat or a gadfly.

"I don't doubt but what you'd rather have Felix Byefield," she suggested, slyly, "but you needn't to count on gittin' him, fur he's a-keepin' comp'ny with the Widder Cheeseman, an' everybuddy says they're a-goin' to marry after harvest."

It was a random shot on Nancy's part, but her black eyes sparkled with malicious triumph as she saw by her sister-in-law's burning cheeks that the poisoned arrow had struck home.

Miss Ferobia deigned no reply, however, but went coolly about preparations for her own departure.

She had rented a small cottage and a few acres of ground a mile or two from the old homestead, and Timothy could do no less than get out the spring wagon and drive her to the new home.

It was yet early in the springtime and the wild plum trees were white with bloom. The tall maples and elms by the roadside swung their light tassels in the soft breeze and myriads of buttercups and purple-hued pansies dotted the grass-grown lanes.

"I dunno what you wanted of so much ground 'round your house," remarked Timothy, reflectively, as the wagon rolled easily along. "Half an acre would of been enough, I should say."

"No, it wouldn't," maintained his sister, stoutly. "I'm a-goin' into the gardenin' business, to raise truck for the markets."

Timothy whistled.

"You'll make a failure of it, sure as guns," he declared, ruthlessly.

But Miss Ferobia was not to be discouraged.

"There's plenty of men make a livin' at it, an' why not me?" she asked. "I've got a little money laid by to start on. An' I've got a stout pair of arms, an' never was sick a day in my life; so why should I make a failure of it?"

But Timothy only shook his head and remarked, vaguely, that it was "onpracticable, and she would find out," and declined to commit himself further. And the conference was cut short by their arrival at the cottage.

It was a lonely place but Miss Ferobia was blessed with strong nerves and solitude had no terrors for her.

She had accumulated a few odds and ends of furniture from time to time, the gifts of various friends and relatives, which went a good way toward furnishing her diminutive dwelling.

And when they were arranged to her satisfaction and a square of bright rag carpet tacked down in the center of the room Miss Ferobia felt as happy as a king.

She was too tired after her day's work to do more than take a cup of tea and retire to rest. But a comfortable night's sleep on the old-fashioned, square-posted bedstead restored her energies, and for the next few days she was as busy as a nailer over her preparations.

Lem Dodson was hired to plow the "truck patch," a cow with a young calf was bargained for and a few fowls of the Plymouth Rock and Dorking species were purchased and were soon cackling vigorously around their new quarters.

After a little more help from neighbor Dodson and a vigorous use of the hoe on Miss Ferobia's part the ground was in readiness for planting and the ambitious market gardener sat up till long past her usual bedtime looking over her stock of seeds and selecting those requisite for immediate use.

There might still be late frosts, she reflected, and such tender plants as beans and cucumbers, summer squashes and nutmeg melons, would be better out of the ground than in it for a few days to come.

But beets and lettuce, spinach and marrowfat peas and rutabagas would stand anything short of a regular freeze, and might be safely planted at once.

And, late though she sat up, the first pink flush of early dawn did not find Miss Ferobia napping the next morning, nor for many mornings to come.

She was up with the birds, and after a hasty breakfast out she sallied, and hoed and raked, weeded and transplanted, till her back ached and her fingers grew sore and her nose freckled and her cheeks tanned. But gardening is hard work, at best, and though Miss Ferobia labored with a will, the grass and weeds would creep in here and there in spite of her vigilance. The purslane—"pusly" she called it—and horse-nettles grew faster than her butter-head lettuce or white spine cucumbers.

Then the weather was not always propitious, and her first planting of sugar-corn and early rose potatoes rotted in the ground.

But Miss Ferobia, nothing daunted, replanted the vacant rows with later varieties, and in due time the seed sprouted and gave every promise of a luxuriant crop.

But from that time on it was, as the little woman declared, a "tussle" between herself and the weeds.

While she was hoeing her cabbages and kohl robies and weeding her silver-skin onions, the cockle burrs and wild morning glories were flourishing among her sweet corn and potatoes.

She worked early and late, however, to eradicate the tenacious interlopers, and finally succeeded in accomplishing her task. When lo! one unlucky night Farmer Nubbin's pigs forced their way through a broken panel of the fence, and played havoc among the growing crops.

Small wonder, indeed, if our heroine lost her temper at last and pelted those pigs with clods, or whatever came handiest, and even whacked one of them across the snout with the hoe-handle.

But with all her efforts it was late in the day when the last one of the marauders was disposed of, and the fence patched up after a fashion.

Miss Ferobia's workmanship, if not exactly artistic, was sufficiently ingenious to prevent further inroads in that direction.

But for some reason from that time on the fates seemed to turn a cold shoulder to her efforts.

The rabbits feasted on her early York cabbages and marrowfat pease, the striped bugs worked destruction on her cucumbers and Cassava melons, the Colorado beetle devastated her potatoes, and the squash-bugs ate up her Boston marrows and patty-pan squashes. The foxes, minks, owls and hawks, to say nothing of opossums and weasels thinned the ranks of her young Dorkings and Plymouth Rocks; and, to make matters worse, her cow turned out to be a "jumper" and brought disgrace on herself and trouble to her mistress by daily raids on Farmer Nubbins' corn field.

This was the last straw, and, like the mythical camel, Miss Ferobia broke down under it.

"There ain't no use a-tryin', as I see," she lamented, dolefully, as she set out her one cup and saucer in readiness for her tea. "A lone woman don't have no chance at all.

"An' here I've spent all my money an' my garden ain't wuth shucks. And Timothy, he'll say he told me how 'twould be, and that I'd better o' married Jason Smallweed. And I almost b'lieve—I—would— No, I wouldn't, either. I won't take up with a crooked stick, if I be nearly through the woods—"

"Evenin', Miss Feroby," interrupted a cheery voice, and there, framed in the doorway, stood Felix Byefield, a smile brightening his honest, sun-browned face.

Miss Ferobia shook hands with her visitor, and drew forth a chair for him, with a secret fluttering at her heart as she remembered her sister-in-law's insinuation.

But Felix was evidently bent on making himself agreeable.

"An' so you've struck out for yourself," he observed. "Gittin' along first rate, I opine. You must show me your garden."

"I haven't got any garden, and you sha'n't see it," declared Miss Ferobia, inconsistently. "It's all choked up with weeds—I couldn't keep them out. An' what with the bugs, an' the rabbits an' pigs, I ain't got a cabbage-head left, skeercely."

"Sho', now, you don't say! Why, if that ain't too bad," responded Felix, sympathetically.

"An' the varmints has took all my young chickens," continued Miss Ferobia. "An' Farmer Nubbins is a-goin' to shoot my cow, an', an'—"

The thought of her woes was too much for her, and she began to sob hysterically.

"Don't cry, Miss Feroby; please don't," urged Felix. "He sha'n't shoot your cow, I promise you."

But Miss Ferobia shook her head, and dried her eyes on the corner of her apron.

"I'll sell the cow," she declared, soberly. "An' I'll go an' hire out somewhere. I can cook if I can't make garden."

"No need to hire out," put in Felix, eagerly. "I—I want somebody to cook for me. Say you'll marry me, Feroby!"

But Miss Ferobia in her surprise stared at him, then hung her head, blushing like a girl.

"It's so—sudden," she whispered.

"What's the odds?" asked Felix, boldly. "I wanted you long ago, only I couldn't somehow git the courage to ask you. Say yes, won't you, Feroby?"

And after a little more urging Miss Ferobia did say yes, and felt very well contented with her future prospects, in spite of her weedy garden.

"Timothy will say the truck business was a failure after all," she reflected, as she washed up her supper dishes at night, with a very light heart, "but he can't say it wasn't a successful failure, anyhow."—Helen W. Clark, in Leslie's Newspaper.

WHEN MEN SEE SNAKES.

The Appearance of the Reptiles Is Due to Congestion of the Eye-Veins.

The cause of persons whose nerves are excited by protracted and excessive use of stimulants seeing the shapes of animals passing before them is not due wholly to the imagination. In fact the fancy only operates to induce a belief that what is seen is alive and hideous.

The eyeball is covered by a network of veins, ordinarily so small that they do not intrude themselves visibly in the path of the light that enters the sight, but in the course of some diseases these veins are frequently congested and swollen to such size as to become visible, and when this happens the effect generally is to appear as if there were an object of considerable size at a distance from the eye.

Of course, this vein is generally long, thin and sinuous like a serpent, and the figure seen is frequently startlingly like a snake. That they seem to live is due to the fact that they are often not in perfect line with the direct front of sight. They are either to the side, up or down from the focus; therefore, when discovered, the victim naturally turns his eyes toward the effect, and the effect, of course, moves away.

The eye follows, and thus a continuous and realistic motion is got. Now, if the eye be returned to the front again quickly it will see another snake, which, if watched, will glide away in the same manner. The writer of this is afflicted by malarial disease, and after his eyes are thus congested many strange shapes and clouds pass within his vision, which, if he were in a state of nervous collapse, might easily be all that are seen by those suffering from delirium tremens.—N. Y. Times.

Mrs. Fenn's horse became frightened at the merry-go-round Tuesday and ran into Peter Kishpaugh's yard. It was stopped there and no damage was done.

The merry-go-round, after several "positively our last appearance" advertisements, left town Wednesday. In the minds of many it is "good riddance to bad rubbish."

George Cooley, of Florida, was the guest of his sister, Mrs. Mary Burroughs, last week. Mrs. Burroughs expects to dispose of her household goods at private sale as soon as possible, and make Florida her home.

The Congregational and Methodist societies spent a very pleasant day at Wampler's Lake last Thursday. It was marred by but one accident. The wound was sewed up and the horse taken home. He is getting along nicely.

Will Hayden, of Tecumseh, and Sheriff Baldwin, of Adrian, were in town Monday, and as they started for home their horse caught the line under its tail and commenced to run. Mr. Hayden could not extricate the line and as they crossed the bridge by the M. E. church the horse began to kick. He finally succeeded in reining it into Frank Wallinger's yard, where it stopped, after they had both jumped out. Sheriff Baldwin sprained his wrist, but excepting that no serious damage was done.

Around the County.

The Petersburgh Bulletin after a rest on account of the sickness of the editor, has appeared again.

A trotting matinee will be held on the new track of the Dundee fair grounds on Saturday, Aug. 8th.

A Post office has been established at Whittaker's saw mill, in Rollin. Mrs. Whittaker is the saw mill post master.

The new Toledo & Western Railway seems to be a fixed fact. Morenci will surely be one of the points on the new line.

E. E. Smith, of Clayton, is quite a bee man. It is said that his bees have gathered nearly 3,000 pounds of honey so far this year.

Geo. Calhoun reports a yield of 38 bushels of wheat per acre, and thinks the extra yield is due to the fact that he put on 300 pounds of salt per acre.—Clinton Local.

The east side "water works" is an assured thing. We understand some $650 in stock has already been subscribed and the balance needed will be forthcoming in a few days. Charley Phillips has the matter in hand.—Blissfield Advance.

The Monroe Stars came over to Dundee, Tuesday, and played a game of base ball. They got scooped by a score of 19 to 11. It was the most orderly and respectable game played here this season. A comfort to witness such games.—Dunday Reporter.

The sale of the Cincinnati, Jackson and Mackinaw will probably occur some time early in October. A reorganization will then be effected, and the road will be leased to the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad company. It will not be purchased by the C. H. & D.—Toledo Bee.

Frank H. Miller, living on Swamp road two miles north of the village, reports his wheat yield to be 41 bushels per acre. That is the kind of crops land along that street produces. With such a crop, he thinks he can afford to take in the Detroit encampment next week.—Dundee Reporter.

A large barn belonging to S. H. VanKirk, of Wheatland, was set on fire by lightning and consumed Wednesday p. m. together with vehicles, farm tools, hay, grain etc., to the value of nearly one thousand dollars. As the building had just been completed and had no insurance, the loss is a severe one.—Addison Conrier.

When will people learn that it is absolutely necessary that their signature accompany all communications to a newspaper? We have received several items this week through the mail, but as there was no signature to vouch for the authenticity of the matter, we were obliged to give it a resting place in the waste basket.—Brooklyn Exponent.

Riley Carmon, of Petersburgh, kept his saloon open on the 4th of July, and did a rushing trade in that which "biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." It is understood now that Rev. Mr. Curtis has entered a complaint against him. The elder is a spiritual man, and he will brook no swindling competition.—Adrian Press.

A Hudson youth was strolling along Church-st., Tuesday afternoon, when he stopped; and ah! what do I see? He looked around and then cautiously stooped—to conquer? No, he stooped to pick up what he supposed was a $20 bill. Wasn't he warm, though, when he found it to be only a fac-simile with a Beecham's pill advertisement on one side.—Hudson Gazette.

C. A. Smith has purchased over seventy thousand pounds of wool thus far this season and has more coming in. Among the exceptionally fine clips, Mr. S. names those brought in by O. C. McLouth and Eli Beal, of Rollin, also W. W. Sanford, of Woodstock. The last mentioned lot weighed 991 pounds and brought 25 cents per pound without any discounts. Those expecting best prices should follow the example of these men and put their wool up in prime condition.—Addison Courier.

It's a nice ride from Hudson to Prospect hill, eighteen miles north of the village. So say a party of Hudson's young people who took a drive to this delightful place the first of the week. The route lay over rolling country and among many romantic scenes between the lakes. Twenty-one lakes are visible from the summit of Prospect hill. Jackson city can be plainly seen with the naked eye, and Hudson and Adrian with a field-glass.—Hudson Gazette.

E. J. Smith, the jovial editor of the Adrian Press, has commenced his duties as justice of the peace. His first job was to marry William Snow and Hattie Bennett, both of Springville.—Clinton Local.

O, no, bless your heart! He was old in the business, before William and Hattie stood up before him. The ink was not yet dry on the certificate of a previous couple, when the young people from Springville came in and swore to support the constitution of the United States and the McKinley bill. Marriage is no failure around this office.—Adrian Press.

If any of farmers feel uneasy about the largeness of the present wheat crop and the danger of low prices, let them banish all fear. A writer on crop statistics has gone over the field carefully, and he estimates that the United States will have of its present crop of wheat 140,000,000 more than it can consume. The failure of the crops in Europe will demand at least over 356,000,000 bushels. As this country cannot supply one-half the amount required there seems to be no immediate danger of very low prices. The chances are that the market may be somewhat overloaded with wheat as soon as the crop is threshed as so many will be compelled to realize, but those who can afford to hold for a better mark will get a fair price.

Mrs. D. W. Grandon and children, returned Friday morning from Parkersburgh, West Va., where they have been spending a few weeks with friends and relatives. She was accompanied by her sister, Miss Jennie Dakin, who will spend the heated term in Michigan. On the way here at Springville, Ohio, they had quite an experience, which occasioned a delay of many hours. The heavy rains of the night before had washed up the track for a long distance, and in crossing a bridge surrounded by water they could feel the bridge sinking under the train and just after the cars passed over it went down. It was an experience they don't want to encounter soon again.—Michigan Messenger.

Shot His Brother's Murderer.

Dan Dunn, who shot Steve Harcourt at Seney about a month ago, was shot dead at Trout Lake by James Harcourt, a brother of the man shot by Dunn. Dunn had his examination and was discharged at Manistique. He had sworn out a warrant for the arrest of James Harcourt for threatening to kill him. The sheriff had Harcourt under arrest and was on his way to jail with him when they met Dunn. Harcourt pulled his revolver and fired. Dunn died almost immediately.

Free Fight at a Wedding.

The Finn settlers held a wedding a short distance out of Negaunee and all the Finns of the neighborhood were invited. They had plenty of beer and whisky, and before midnight got to quarreling. Jacobson, the father of the bride, tried to stop the noise and fight, and for so doing was set upon by seven of the invited guests and beautifully carved. He would die. The seven assailants were in jail.

Fortune for a Veteran.

John Zimmerman, an inmate of the soldiers' home at Grand Rapids, received notification from the German consul in Chicago that a fortune of $68,000 awaited him in the old country. He forwarded his identification papers to Chicago and was awaiting a remittance to enable him to start for the old country. He said the money came through an immensely-wealthy great-aunt. He is 68 years old.

Over 5,000 of the Sons of St. George gathered at Houghton and had a parade and jubilee.

Hot Weather is the very best time to try Pyle's Pearline. Then the wash is largest, and a saving of time and toil is best appreciated. Think of doing a large wash with little or no rubbing. Consider how much longer your delicate summer clothing will last if not rubbed to pieces on a washboard. A saving is a gain. You'll be surprised and pleased with the cleanliness, satisfaction and comfort which comes of the use of PEARLINE. Simple—any servant can use it. Perfectly harmless—you can soak your finest linen and laces in Pearline and water for a month, with safety. Delightful in the bath—makes the water soft. Perhaps you have been using some of the imitations and have sore hands and find your clothing going to pieces. Moral—use the original and best.

Sold everywhere. 91 Pearline is manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

On Friday evening the Rappleye sisters entertained upwards of fifty of their friends at their home. The lawn was lit up with gasoline burners where the young people enjoyed a game of croquet. Refreshments of ice cream, cake and bananas were served and not until the hour of midnight drew near was the hour of parting thought of, as the time had passed so pleasantly and swiftly away. In behalf of the friends present we wish the young ladies many happy and pleasant gatherings.

On Wednesday night, about 11 o'clock, the cry of fire rang out on the night air, and on going upon the street it was learned that George Pocklington's house, east of the village, was on fire. On reaching the scene of destruction we learned that the cause of the fire originated by gasoline escaping from the stove, and when Smith Pocklington came home he struck a match to light a lamp, as the others of the family had retired for the night, and in an instant the room was ablaze. He woke his parents who barely escaped being burned with the house. The parlor furniture was all that was saved. Mrs. Pocklington was sleeping up stairs and her husband went up to wake her and was cut off from returning, and threw her out of the window and then jumped out himself. The loss is nearly $1,000, and was insured in the Farmers' Mutual.

The social held last week under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. was a success. They opened their mite boxes, that go to build the temple at Chicago, and had $16. It happened to be a warm evening and the ice cream went like hot cakes.

They go fully equipped with a full set of hands and a house on wheels, provided with provisions and cooking utensils, dining and sleeping under canvas.

The credulous claim that 80 bushels of wheat to the acre "looks a little fishy." Why, bless you! that wheat was six feet deep all over the two acres, and stood shock upon shock, necessitating backing into the field for the first load. Now, seriously, we frequently read of wheat going 75 bushels to the acre in old England, with ordinary tillage and good seasons, and why not in proud America, on rich bottom lands of first tillage with an extraordinarily good season, excel those figures? Of course the yield and area in this case is somewhat approximated, but we venture the assertion that it will not vary five rods either way from two acres, or five bushels from 160 bushels. It was of the Clawson variety, very thick and tall, heads from four to six inches long, well filled, and weighs 62 lbs. to the bushel. Samples for seed or "keeps" are in great demand.

NORTH-EAST FRANKLIN.

Oh, for an iceberg or two at control!" Not broken up into hail, though. We've had that kind.

Mrs. Elma Falley, of Marshall, Ill., spent a day or two with Franklin friends last week.

The State Fair.

The forty-third annual Fair of the State Agricultural Society opens on the grounds of the Society at the State capital on September 7th, and continues in progress five days. For forty-three years the Michigan State Fair has fairly represented the growth and advancement of the industrial interests of the State. Its yearly exhibits have been a most powerful influence for good in connection with Michigan's agriculture, and in an educational way have been of inestimable value. The exhibition of 1849 fairly represented the position of the State at that early date in its history, and the magnificent exhibition of 1890, with its full representation of whatever was of value in improved live stock, machinery, implements, manufactures, farm products, fruits, etc., etc., so varied in their character, exhibited clearly and fully the development reached by the Michigan of to-day. The Fair of 1891 bids fair to more than equal in every respect the finest one yet held in the State, and should draw out the people in greater numbers than ever before.

Examination for West Point.

On Thursday, the 27th day of August, 1891, at 9 o'clock a. m., in the Court House, (Supervisors' room,) in the city of Adrian, there will be held a competitive examination of candidates for appointment to a Cadetship in the United States Military Academy at West Point. Each candidate for appointment must be a resident of the district composed of the counties of Monroe, Lenawee, Hillsdale and Washtenaw; unmarried; between seventeen and twenty-two years of age; at least five feet high; free from any infectious disorders, deformity, disease or infirmity, which might render him unfit for military service; and must submit to a rigid physical examination by some competent physician, whom I shall hereafter appoint, with two other gentlemen, to act as a Board of Examiners, and be examined in arithmetic, grammar, geography, history, reading, writing and orthography. Special attention will be given to natural ability, and manifest aptitude for acquiring and applying knowledge, rather than mere scholastic finish and readiness to answer.

Odd Fellows Picnic at Ogden.

Pursuant to notice given and invitations received from Fairfield Lodge No. 269, I. O. O. F., six hundred came together in the grove at Ogden Center on the 22d ult. At 11 o'clock the procession formed in the hall, with Bro. Bailey as marshal, going down into the street where the Metamora Cornet Band of sixteen pieces received it. The chaplain and orator of the day then joined with the parade with one hundred men in line.

A fine program was given, then dinner, and then another program of music and literary exercises. A splendid address was given by Col. O. A. Janes, of Hillsdale.

The executive committee met to complete the organizing of an annual picnic association of Odd Fellows of Lenawee county. The following officers were then elected:

President—H. R. Myers, Lodge 269.
Rec. Sec.—Geo. S. Poucher, Lodge 8.
Treas.—J. F. Wotring, Lodge 269.
Cor. Sec.—J. A. Fowler, Lodge 361.

The following vice presidents were then elected:

Adrian, No. 8, George C. Brown.
Blissfield, No. 258, R. B. French.
Riga, No. 361, W. H. Stillwell.

The secretary was then instructed to correspond with the remaining lodges of the county that were not represented requesting them to name each a vice president to represent their lodge in the association so that by the next annual meeting the organization would be completed. The time and place for holding the next picnic was left for a later announcement.

Moved and carried that a report of the proceedings be handed to the county papers for publication.

Around the County.

The Hudson Band give Saturday evening Concerts every week.

A Corps of workmen from Paulding, Ohio, are cutting railroad ties in the vicinity of Addison.

Dr. J. B. Haynes and family of Dundee, started Tuesday, for an overland trip to Grand Rapids, for a few days visit thereat.

Ex-county treasurer Moran severed his connection with the county treasurer's office on the first of August, having been with Treasurer Wiggins since Jan. 1st.

Addison Lodge, No. 382, I. O. O. F., was well represented at the Odd Fellows picnic Thursday. The attendance was good and details satisfactory to all. —Addison Courier.

Henry Hanford, of Hudson, has an old coin, bearing date 1787. On one side is this motto: "Mind your own business." As the motto would indicate, the coin is a great rarity.

The small boy's harvest is here. He is busily engaged picking cucumbers at ten cents per bushel. It is more profitable than sparrow heads at 3 cents each. —Brooklyn Exponent.

Miss Edna Beardsley, who has been an employee in the Herald office at Tecumseh for the past few months, is making her Brooklyn friends a farewell visit before going to her home in Elgin, Ill.—Brooklyn Exponent.

The M. E. church at Allen raised $400. in about half an hour two weeks ago. It was a rather exciting time, and caused the brethren to wake up, rub their eyes, scratch their heads, and dive down into their pockets in dead earnest.—Addison Courier.

C. D. Bill's, the noted horseman of Tecumseh, was in town Tuesday, taking a look at the fair grounds and track also some of the fast steppers. Took a whirl upon the track with his goer and pronounces the track one of the best. He will have one or more horses in the races to-morrow.—Dundee Reporter.

This is generally conceded to be a dull season of the year in trade, but the truly progressive merchant redoubles his efforts to promote business, and usually names bargains in his newspaper advertisements which he will not at any other time of the year: therefore all such as wish to invest their money to good advantage should read our advertising cards closely each week and see if in a pecuniary way it is not profitable.

It is the little things of life that tax one's nerves the most, as a stalwart youth of Kansas found when he accepted a wager that he could not stand a quart of water dropped into his open hand drop by drop from a height of three feet. Before 500 drops had fallen into his hand he almost cried with pain and said he had enough. After a little water had fallen each drop seemed to crush his hand, and a blister in the center of it was the result.

Cook's flower gardens, north of Rollin village, are often visited this summer, by those who appreciate beauty. The grounds about the house, laid out in shady nooks and flowry bowers, must be seen to be appreciated, and the visitor always leaves the pleasant surroundings with regret, invariably carrying away, however, a handsome boquet, selected from the wagon loads of flowers which grow so profusely about the grounds.—Hudson Post.

The new game law will not be in force until October 1. The open season for woodcock will commence under the present law Sept 1, and will end under the new law December 15. The new law makes the open season from August 15 to December 15, instead of from September 1 until January 1. Partridge, under the old law from September 1 to October 1, and then after a close season of 30 days' under the new law from November 1 to December 15.

The celebrated drain case, in which about a hundred indignant farmers are protesting against being taxed for a drain because one man wants to improve his property by having Posey lake lowered three or four feet, occupied the attention of the probate court at Adrian last week. T. J. Hiller and Grant Fellows were attorneys for the anti's. The case resulted in a disagreement of the jury, seven voting against the drain and five for it.—Hudson Gazette.

The Rocky Mountain News comes to us from Denver, Colo., containing an account of a railroad track war out there between the Denver, Golden & Western railroad and the Electric road, regarding a crossing. The country between Golden and Denver was patrolled by armed men, and T. M. Hunter was sent out to write it up, at midnight, one week ago Sunday night. He was stopped, loaded guns placed at his head, and held against a wall for an hour or two, until friends came along to identify him. It took considerable diplomacy for Tom to save his neck, but he got there.—Adrian Times.

Mayor Len. W. Hoch returned last week from Muskegon, where he spent a day looking over the boom of that growing city. In an interview since his return he says that there is no question but the boom will be permanent and profitable. The first sale of lots aggregated over $400,000. The profits of this sale were expended in public improvements, all of which went to help build up the value of the unsold lots. These lots are now being placed on the market at a big advance, and the profits of these sales will go into the pockets of the speculators who engineered the boom, brought in ten great factories, and have put several thousand men to work. Adrian's mayor very wisely favors a boom for this city, which can be made just as successful, but on a different basis. He believes that the boom ought to be so engineered that instead of the benefits going into the hands of a few land speculators, they would be used for the benefit of the whole city.—Adrian Messenger.

THE GRAND PARADE.

IT WAS THE FEATURE OF THE SILVER ENCAMPMENT.

THIRTY THOUSAND MEN IN LINE.

The March Reviewed by the Commander, Secretary Proctor, Gen. Miles, R. B. Hayes and Others.

At 10:45 Tuesday morning the Michigan, lying at anchor at the foot of Woodward avenue, fired a salute announcing the start of the big Grand Army parade and the biggest procession ever seen in the streets of Detroit, or ever likely to be seen there, got under way. A finer day for such an event could not be desired. The sun shone brightly, and a cool breeze from the lakes made even the arduous exercise of marching most agreeable. The streets through which the men marched were lined on both sides by thousands of spectators, many of whom were seated in grand stands erected for the occasion. It is estimated that the line, which took nearly five hours in passing a given point, contained 30,000 men, and it is within reasonable bounds to say that 300,000 spectators witnessed it. The start was made from Grand Circus Park, the several departments forming in the streets adjacent to the park, and falling into line in accordance with a well-arranged programme. The line was led by Chief of Police Starkweather and a staff of mounted police. Two bands, the Fourth Regiment and the Nineteenth United States Infantry Band, followed. Then came Detroit Post, Gen. Veazey's honorary escort, clad in neat Prince Albert uniforms, with white ties and gloves, and carrying canes. Among the men who marched with this post were Mayor Pingree, Maj. Hopkins and Col. Henry M. Duffield. In fact, one of the most noteworthy pictures of the parade was the number of eminent men who marched in the ranks. Generals, colonels and captains walked along side by side with privates, and such men as ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes and Gen. Russell A. Alger thought it an honor to walk through the streets with the comrades. Of course their presence created great enthusiasm, and the crowds along the way made the air ring with applause as each well-known favorite came in view. Another feature of the parade that provoked the loudest cheers was the queer habits of famous battle flags that were carried by some of the posts. In many cases little more than the flag staff was left, while in others the original colors had been decorated by souvenirs from the enemy's guns, and pierced and torn by shot and shell. Such sights were calculated to arouse the patriotism of the beholder to the highest pitch. Here and there in the line was a comrade limping and halting under a wound received in his country's cause, while some few had the hardihood to march with the aid of a crutch, having given a limb to stay the destructive career of the enemy's bullets. For these maimed veterans who desired it a comfortable place was provided where they could view the parade without an effort, but those who were in the line received continued and unstinted applause.

The Department of Illinois followed behind the commander-in-chief and his escort. The George H. Thomas Post, of Chicago, turned out over 500 members, and presented its celebrated "Living Flag," composed of red, white and blue umbrellas. This was perhaps the most showy of all the effects of the parade and won general applause. The Farragut Post, of Englewood, Ill., was headed by a stuffed goose, hung exceedingly altitudinous, with an inscription, "Everything is Lovely and the Goose Hangs High."

The veterans of the Badger State followed a veritable badger, stuffed and mounted on a pole. But the war eagle which was carried beside the badger was the center of attraction to those who knew its history. It was the mortal remains of "Old Abe," the bird of freedom which perched on the banner of the Eighth Wisconsin Regiment and added its screams to the noise of the musketry in every engagement of the regiment upon the southern battlefields.

Pennsylvania came next with two small mounted cannon in addition to the marching posts. The department officers were followed by the James M. Lyle Post, with five tattered battle flags, some of them so dismembered that they had to be carried furled and securely tied to the staffs. Post No. 2, of Philadelphia, turned out in style. Its members wore "drum major" hats, white coats and blue trousers. Three battle flags were also borne by this post, and many posts which followed carried similar tattered emblems.

Next came the Ohio Department with more men in line than any other department, save that of Michigan. Ohio had many handsome posts in line, those from Cleveland and Toledo being especially noticeable. The James A. Garfield Post, of Mentor, of which the martyred President was a member, turned out a score of men. The Buckley Post, of Akron, furnished a miniature army and bore two enormous banners, supported on frames and carried by half a dozen men each. Fifteen survivors of the Ninety-ninth Ohio carried their two remaining battle flags, one consisting of nothing but the staff and a few shreds of ragged cloth.

New York followed with fourteen posts in line. The One Hundredth and Twenty-seventh New York Infantry was in line as a regiment and carried its old battle and corps flag. The Seventy-ninth New York Highlanders elicited much applause as they swung into line as a regiment, preceded by their corps of Scotch pipers. They all wore the Scotch cap and carried the flag which they defended so nobly over a quarter of a century ago.

It is impossible to deal with each department in particular, but the names of those following are: Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maine, California, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Vermont, Pennsylvania, Washington, Virginia, Maryland, Nebraska, Iowa, Indiana, Colorado and Wyoming, Kansas, Minnesota, Delaware, Mississippi, Oregon, Kentucky, West Virginia, South Dakota, Tennessee, Florida, Washington and Alaska, Arkansas, New Mexico, Louisiana, Mississippi, Montana, Texas, Utah, Georgia, Alaska, North Dakota, and Dakota. Michigan followed by the National Association of Naval Veterans and the Sons of Veterans. The following posts marched in the Department of Michigan:

TIN PLATE AND SHEET IRON.

The Prime Object of the Tin Plate Duty Is to Help the Sheet Iron Men—Testimony of Eminent Tariff Makers.

There are in the United States twenty manufactories of sheet iron and steel, with a capacity of 220,000 tons per year. The greater part of these sheets are used for roofing and other building purposes, such as artistic cornice work, shades, etc., and for manufacture into pails, coal scuttles, refuse cans, and for other domestic purposes.

It is for just such purposes as these that terne plates are used. The great fall in terne plates abroad has during the past ten years stimulated the use of such plates for the purposes just named. As a result, even under a duty of one cent per pound, terne plates are cheaper than galvanized and often sheet iron, and have begun to drive out the use of such iron; since, besides being cheaper, terne plates are better.

The sheet manufacturers long since recognized the competition between their products and the imported terne plates. For combine as they would they could not sell their galvanized sheets at high prices when consumers could get terne plates. Thus in 1882 they persuaded the tariff commission to fix the duty upon terne plates at 2.2 cents per pound, and congress refused to ratify this action.

In 1888 they tried it again when the Mills bill was sent to the senate, and persuaded Senators Aldrich and Allison to put a duty of 2.2 cents per pound on the imported article. The strongest reason which Senator Aldrich could offer for his action was, as he says in his report: "The free admission of all thicknesses and widths, coated with tin or lead, would cause a substitution of imported tin or terne plates in most cases for roofing and other building purposes and for domestic uses where galvanized or other sheet iron or steel is now used."

He meant that he imposed the duty of 2.2 cents per pound on tin plate to prevent the farmers from using it, and to compel them to use galvanized iron. Had he introduced a bill to compel the wheat growers to give up using the harvester and to go back to the use of the old-fasioned cradle, or even the sickle, and had he offered as an excuse for so doing that harvesting machines were destroying the manufacture of cradles or sickles, this eminent protectionist statesman could not have acted more reasonably than he did in the matter of the tin plate duty.

How long will it be before the farmers will wake up to see the truth that protection is old fogyism run to seed?

THE WOOL DUTY.

Sharp Denunciations of the Duty on Wool —What Protection Organs Say.

McKinley's wool duty continues to provoke criticism; and even among protectionist and republican papers there are sharp denunciations of the duty on wool. That stanch defender of protection, the Boston Commercial Bulletin, has recently said that the McKinley wool schedule "was framed by men grossly and crossly ignorant of the ordinary conditions of the market, and indeed of everything except the belief of the ignorant that legislation is a cure for every ill."

And now the Philadelphia Telegraph, an independent republican paper, frees its mind in this style: "While the manufacturers are threatened with financial loss or ruin by the new tariff schedule, while the wages of employes are reduced a third, and while the public is compelled to buy shoddy and cotton for wool, the owners of the sheep, even in Mr. McKinley's state, do not appear to be the richer for it." These remarks are made in view of the following quotation from the Chicago Herald: "Ohio fine delaines, which brought last November, just after the higher duties of the McKinley bill had gone into force, from 36 to 37 cents a pound are quoted now at 35 to 36. Extra wool which was 32 to 33 cents a pound is now 30 to 31, and double extra, which was 34 to 35, is 31 to 32."

On the other hand the American Economist, the organ of the Protective Tariff league, has its own peculiar way of treating the wool situation. It quotes figures from the Boston Commercial Bulletin to show that the prices of Wyoming wools are from one to two cents a pound higher than last year; but it adroitly suppresses the first part of the sentence stating the fall in price of Ohio and Michigan wools.

But it is a well known fact that the prices of Wyoming and other so-called "territory wools" have been maintained solely by reason of the very large importations of Australian wools, since they are found to be well adapted for mixing with these latter wools.

Adding to the Cost.

Here is a bill which shows how the tariff adds to the cost of clothing bought abroad. The bill was for two suits of clothes bought in London by a gentleman in New York:

The price paid in London for both suits was	$84.54
There were other items for packing case (38 6d.), consular certificate (12s.), freight and insurance (11s.) on the two suits	5.49
	$90.03
The tariff taxes, levied at the New York custom house, were 60 per cent. on 186	51.60
19½ cents per pound on 12 pounds weight	5.94
Then the fees for passing the case through the New York custom house were	4.70
	$152.27
Cost in New York York of each suit	76.18
Protection afforded by the McKinley tariff, including freight and ensuing additional cost to be paid by the consumer on each suit	33.86

Few people buy such expensive suits; but this bill may serve as an object lesson in tariff duties on other things.

—Says the New York Dry Goods Economist: "Binding twine is from 20 to 25 per cent. less in price than a year ago; that is, farmers are paying 12 cents and 8¾ cents for manilla and sisal, against 15 cents and 12 cents respectively a year ago." Meanwhile the trust has not died, as it said it would if the duty was lowered ever so little. Lowering and removing duties are a good medicine for those high-handed trusts.

THE FUNNY MAN.

What a Comic Tariff Talker Says About Window Glass.

Mr. R. G. Horr, the comic tariff talker, says in the New York Tribune that "the price of common glass has been cheapened in this country, so that the window glass for a cottage or ordinary house does not cost one-half what it did in former years."

Just what Mr. Horr means by "former years" he does not explain; but if we go back to 1860, the year before the duty on glass was raised to a highly protective point, we shall doubtless give him a long enough time in which to make good his claim. If there has been a fall of more than one-half in the price of glass in these thirty years of high protection the fact can certainly be shown by comparing current market prices with those of 1860.

Here is such a composition:

Sizes.	Quality.	Price Per ½ Box of 50 Ft. 1860	1890.
8x10 inches	3d	$1.95	$1.90
8x10 "	4th	1.80	1.805
10x14 "	2d	2.40	2.01
10x14 "	3d	2.10	1.90
12x18 "	1st	3.00	2.75
12x18 "	3d	2.40	2.35
18x24 "	2d	3.60	3.13
22x28 "	2d	3.60	3.42
Total 8 boxes		$20.85	$19.125

The price has fallen only 8 per cent. during the past thirty years of continued high protection; and there is no ground whatever for the boast of the comic tariff talker. His boast was evidently made without any acquaintance with the facts and from mere force of the old protectionist habit of claiming everything.

Mr. Horr has a great deal to say about glass, but he maintains a death-like silence about the great glass trust. If he had told his readers something about that child of the tariff his article would have lost value very perceptibly with his protectionist readers.

WHY POTATOES ARE TAXED.

A Protection Organ Gives It Away—It Was to Reduce the Price of Our Potatoes.

The average protection organ has a hard time of it grinding out matter suitable for consumption in both city and country. In trying to convince one part of the public that the high McKinley duties were imposed for the purpose of increasing prices and another part that they were to reduce prices, such organs have a very delicate task to perform.

No wonder that they often print tariff fancies for the city public which would not be relished among farmers; and that they try to stuff the farmer with cheap and easy proofs of how the McKinley agricultural duties will help him by raising the prices of what he produces—all which would be very unpopular talk in the large cities.

Thus one of the readers of the New York Press, who is a city working man, writes to that protection sheet asking to be enlightened about the potato duty. As we did not raise enough potatoes last year for our own use it became necessary to import considerable quantities from Scotland, Canada and other countries, before the present crop came upon the market. McKinley raised the duty of potatoes from 15 cents a bushel to 25 cents; and our city workingman points out how he has had to pay higher prices for his Scotch potatoes by reason of the duty. He therefore asks the Press: "Wherein am I and other wage earners benefited by protective duties on our food supply?"

In reply to this the Press asks: "Have we had one full farming or potato season since the McKinley bill became a law last October? Of course not. How then can you reasonably expect an increased duty, intended to increase home production and reduce prices, to do its work before the first harvest under the new law?"

Listen, oh ye farmers! The duty on potatoes was intended to reduce the prices of your potato crop! That is what they tell the city people. Do they dare to tell you the same?

Helping Beet Root.

Under a decision of the treasury department, beams, columns, etc., forming a necessary part of the machinery of beet sugar factories, are entitled to free importation. This is in accordance with that provision of the McKinley law which puts beet root sugar machinery on the free list.

But how is this? It is the foreigner who pays the tariff tax; and yet, to help the American beet sugar makers McKinley gives them free trade in their machinery. If the foreigner has already paid the duty why exempt the American buyer of the machinery? If "British free trade" is such a ruinous and wicked thing, why should McKinley try it on this infant industry?

What does that man McKinley believe, any way?

—In his work on "Economic Changes," Mr. David A. Wells shows that, taking the comparative prices of iron and steel in Great Britain and the United States for the ten years from 1878 to 1887, the total cost of these two metals during the period in question to the consumers of the United States over and above that paid by consumers in Great Britain was $560,000,000, or at the rate of $56,000,000 per annum. The entire accuracy of these conclusions has never been impeached.

—The French assembly has just refused by an emphatic majority to imitate our McKinleyism in taxing wool. In the tariff revision now going on at Paris there has been a decided tendency to copy the freaks of American McKinleyism, and when the wool question came up in the assembly the extreme high tariff deputies did their best to get a duty put on wool, but the vote showed a large majority against that policy, and so wool remains on the free list.

—Asbestos is on the free list, but manufacturers of that material pay a duty of 25 per cent. In order to carry out the full purpose of the protection given them the leading manufacturers of asbestos goods have combined into a single company. This is a growing habit with tariff protected industries.

THE FIVE THOUSAND FED

LESSON VII, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, AUG. 16.

Text of the Lesson, John vi, 1-14—Commit Verses, 11-13—Golden Text, John vi, 48—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permisson of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

1. "After these things Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias."

According to Matthew, Mark and Luke this was shortly after the beheading of John the Baptist, and also the return of the twelve apostles from their missionary tour. The disciples of John, having buried his body, went and told Jesus. The apostles, having returned, gathered themselves together unto Jesus and told Him all things, both what they had done and what they had taught (Math. xiv, 12; Mark vi, 30; Luke ix, 10).

2. "And a great multitude followed Him, because they saw His miracles which He did on them that were diseased."

There were so many coming and going that Jesus and His apostles had no time to eat, therefore He said to them, "Come apart into a desert place and rest awhile." So they departed by ship privately, to cross the sea to a desert place belonging to the city of Bethsaida (Luke ix, 10). But the people knew it and ran afoot out of all the cities and outwent them (Mark vi, 31-33).

3. "And Jesus went up into a mountain, and there He sat with His disciples."

4. "And the Passover, a feast of the Jews, was nigh."

It is most interesting to notice that His teaching in the fifth, sixth and seventh chapters of this gospel is associated with three different feasts of the Jews (chapters v, 1; vi, 4; vii, 2). When they were first instituted they were called "Feasts of the Lord" (Lev. xxiii, 2, 4, 37, 44), but now the Lord is so completely left out that they are only "Feasts of the Jews."

5. "When Jesus then lifted up His eyes, and saw a great company come unto Him."

The testimony of the other three gospels is that He was moved with compassion toward them, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd; that He healed their sick, and that He received them and spake unto them of the kingdom of God.

"He saith unto Philip, Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?"

Philip was of Bethsaida, and Bethsaida was the nearest city (John i, 44; Luke ix, 10). This may have been one reason why he asked Philip. This apostle is mentioned in the other gospels only once in each, in connection with the choosing of the twelve; but he is mentioned by the writer of this gospel four different times (chapters i, 43-48; vi, 5, 7; xii, 21, 22; xiv, 8, 9).

6. "And this He said to prove Him, for He Himself knew what He would do."

Having chosen us to be His, He lovingly tests or tries or proves us day by day to fit us for better service. After many testings it is written in reference to the hardest yet "God did tempt (or try) Abraham (Gen. xxii, 1). And concerning Israel it is written that the Lord their God led them so as to humble and prove them and do them good at their latter end (Deut. viii, 2, 16).

7. "Philip answered Him, Two hundred pennyworth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little."

8. "One of His disciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith unto Him."

Andrew was one of the first to follow Jesus, and he was also of the city of Bethsaida (John i, 40, 44). He was one of the four who privately asked the questions which drew from our Saviour the great discourse on last things, which is recorded in Mark xiii, Matt. xxiv and Luke xxi.

9. "There is a lad here which hath five barley loaves and two small fishes, but what are they among so many?"

After healing and teaching the multitudes, the day being far spent, His disciples asked Him to send them away into the villages round about that they might buy themselves bread; upon which He said, "They need not depart, give ye them to eat." Then He asked how many loaves they had, and told them to go and see (Matt. xiv, 15, 16; Mark vi, 35-38). It was after that that Andrew reported the amount on hand, with the remark, "What are they among so many?" Impossible! was evidently the thought of each disciple.

10. "And Jesus said, Make the men sit down. Now there was much grass in the place. So the men sat down in number about five thousand."

Mark says they sat upon the green grass in ranks by hundreds and by fifties. He who teaches by His Spirit through His servant to "Let all things be done decently and in order" fails not to set us the example Himself, for "God is not the author of confusion, but of peace" (1 Cor. xiv, 33, 40).

11. "And Jesus took the loaves."

He had said, "Bring them hither to Me" (Matt. xiv, 18), reminding us of "Come unto Me," "Bring him hither to Me," and of Elisha's "Let him come now to me" (Matt. xi, 28; xvii, 17; II Kings v, 8). Without Him we can do nothing (John xv, 5).

"And when He had given thanks."

The other three say that He looked up to heaven and blessed them. In all things He acknowledged the Father; even He testified, "I can of mine own self do nothing" (chapter v, 30). "The Father that dwelleth in Me, He doeth the works" (chapter xiv, 10). Do we not see here wherein our great failures lie?

"He distributed to the disciples, and the disciples to them that were set down, and likewise of the fishes as much as they would."

12. "When they were filled, He said unto His disciples, Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost."

"They did all eat and were filled," so say Matthew, Mark and Luke. They had not "each a little," as Philip had thought might possibly be accomplished if the two hundred pence had been forthcoming and the bread obtainable, but all had "as much as they would" (verse 11). When teachers and preachers receive the living bread directly from Him the people will never go away with just a little, but will be filled for the time being and want to come for more.

13. "Therefore they gathered together, and filled twelve baskets with the fragments of the five barley loaves, which remained over and above unto them that had eaten."

Twelve baskets over and above! What a contrast to the five loaves and two fishes with which they started! And 5,000 men had been abundantly fed, besides women and children (Matt. xiv, 21). Is it still possible to do much good with small means, and yet have more left to do with than when we started? Yes, surely!

14. "Then those men, when they had seen the miracle that Jesus did, said, This is of a truth that prophet that should come into the world."

Thus they in some sense believed in Him and would have by force made Him a king, not knowing that His kingdom is not of this world, it is not from hence (verse 15 and chapter xviii, 36).

MARSHALL'S HOOF CURE

cures sand and quarter cracks, split hoofs, sore and contracted feet, corns and all hoof troubles. Stops cracking, shelling and scaling hoofs. Softens and toughens brittle hoofs. It is better than soaking with oil, meal, etc. Should be used on all horses standing on hard floors or driven on hard roads. It also cures scratches, tetter, galls of all kinds, bruises, etc.

TOLEDO, O., April 6, 1891.
I had a horse in my stables that had hoofs so brittle that it was impossible to keep a shoe on his feet. I have used one can of Marshall's Hoof Cure on his hoofs and the horse has been shod for four weeks and the shoes stay on all right. I consider it the best hoof cure I have ever used.

A DAY AT HOLLOWAY.

Last Friday was the first good, genuine hot day of the season. It was the day appointed for the P. of I. picnic at Doty's grove, near Holloway. Whether that was the cause of the sultry weather we cannot say, but certain it is, they came simultaneously on the same day. But we had decided to attend that picnic and we did not propose to be bluffed off on account of the weather. Taking the Lake Shore morning train we went to Raisin Center, and then over the Wabash to Holloway, arriving in the village about nine o'clock in the forenoon.

Two hours or so were very agreeably spent in circulating around the burg. Mr. Osgood is very nicely situated in his present location. The old foundry has been put to good use. The west half of the building below has been transformed into a roomy, convenient store, while the east half and the entire second story are used for a dwelling. Thus Mr. Osgood's domicile and business are all under the same roof. He is very nicely fixed and is evidently enjoying a good trade. The postoffice is in his store.

Floyd Florence runs the drug store opposite. He also deals in notions, confectionery, soft drinks, etc., and likewise keeps a barber's chair. Rather a peculiar combination, but Floyd makes it work to a charm.

We called to see Ben Kelly but he was not at home. Dr. Begel was away also. They are generally away when we happen around.

L. C. Winship is erecting a fine new sawmill on the lot south of the store. The building is already enclosed and the machinery and power will be put in within a few weeks, to be ready for business with the opening of winter. A grain house has also been erected north of the depot by Jerome Palmer. These two new business enterprises show that Holloway has felt the spirit of progress and is moving along to the front.

About eleven o'clock the Britton band came along, bound for the picnic, and we caught a ride with the boys down to Doty's grove, about one mile distant from the village. Upon arriving there we found a large gathering already assembled and teams continued to stream into the grounds until afternoon. Promptly at twelve o'clock dinner was announced. The multitude was well provided for and several baskets full of fragments remained after the feast. It is needless to say that this portion of the program, which was in charge of the ladies of South Raisin, passed off without a hitch.

At one o'clock the audience was called together at the platform to listen to the literary exercises of the day. The meeting was called to order by George Holloway, who officiated as chairman. The Britton band opened the program with a fine selection, after which prayer was offered by Rev. J. DeHaan.

Levi C. Chase was then introduced and gave a very candid and forcible half hour's talk. His topic was the value of organization among the farmers and he handled it as one thoroughly posted upon the subject. His remarks were impromptu but they were right to the point and gave excellent satisfaction.

The Britton band gave another piece of music, and then S. C. Stacy made a short speech. Minor T. Cole, of Palmyra, was then called out, and although he had not expected to speak, he gave a few remarks in a very pleasing manner. Mr. Cole is an easy, fluent speaker and always commands attention. Another selection by the band closed the exercises.

Most of the crowd remained on the grounds for an hour or two longer enjoying themselves. Two large swings had been put up, which were well patronized, and the lemonade stand did a land office business all day. The crowd at two o'clock must have numbered nearly five hundred. Several families were there from Tecumseh and Macon, while Raisin, Palmyra and Deerfield were well represented. It was a very enjoyable gathering. Much good seed was sown and doubtless a portion of it fell upon fertile soil.

About five o'clock we took a pleasant drive back to the village in Geo. Holloway's new farm wagon and at six took the Wabash train into Adrian and thence home on the Lake Shore. Notwithstanding the heat, we had a good day's outing and renewed acquaintance with our many Holloway friends to good advantage.

Cheap Reading.

We have made arrangements whereby we can furnish the HERALD and Detroit Weekly Tribune four months for only fifty cents, and we can make the same terms for the HERALD and Weekly Free Press. That is, the HERALD and either of the Detroit Weeklies, two papers, four months for fifty cents. This offer will be held open but a short time. Now is your chance to secure cheap reading.

Miss Ugly Girl: The whole affair was so absurd that, I assure you, I could hardly keep my countenance. Miss Flip: Why did you want to?

THE TECUMSEH SCHOOLS.

The annual catalogue of the Tecumseh public schools, just issued and now being circulated, indicates that the School Board are not only sparing no pains to maintain the present high standard of the schools, but are fully determined to keep them in the front rank, and it would seem that they are offering every possible advantage to patrons of the school.

The catalogue announces that instead of dividing the High School into three departments, as heretofore, it will be one whole, but each teacher will have a distinct part of the work: Mr. Kellogg, Latin and Civil Government; Miss Hartbeck, German and Mathematics; Miss Monroe, Science and Rhetoric, and Miss Latson, History and English. It would seem that this arrangement will be a decided advantage, for as each teacher having but one or two branches, must be enabled to do better class work than by attempting to teach a wider range of subjects. The parts have been assigned according to the preferences of the teachers, and each will have an opportunity to give every pupil the benefit of his special preparation. The district schools are largely supplied with teachers from the high schools, and as the science of pedagogy is now one of the requirements in order to obtain a teacher's certificate, arrangements have been made to organize a class in that subject at the opening of the fall term. The class will be under the instruction of Mr. Kellogg and recite daily; in addition to this the members of the class will have an opportunity to visit the primary and grammar grades to observe methods of instruction, and as our primary and grammar grade teachers rank among the best, no better opportunity to prepare for teaching could be offered to those who are not able to pursue a regular course at a Normal school. Our schools have never offered better advantages and we believe they will be cheerfully sustained, both by the citizens of the village and patrons from the surrounding country. Rent is reasonable and the cost of living is as low or lower in Tecumseh than in any other place where equal advantages are offered. Prof. Kellogg has proven himself, during his first year's work here, to be a worthy successor of the distinguished men who have acted as Superintendent of the Tecumseh schools in years past. He is a thorough teacher, in love with his calling, a ripe scholar and a good disciplinarian. This combination always wins. We predict a most successful year for our schools during the coming twelve months.

A SURPRISE.

Monday, the 10th of Aug. being the 25th anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. R. Morrison's marriage, a very pleasant surprise on them was carefully planned and successfully carried out by their daughters, Mrs. E. G. Crego of Adrian, Mrs. J. E. Mandy of Detroit, Mrs. F. Nay and Misses Mae and Minnie Morrison of Tecumseh. About 8 o'clock in the evening a large number of friends met by mutual understanding at the family residence and warmly congratulated the unexpecting couple. Vocal and instrumental music interspersed with animated conversation and merry jokes enlivened the occasion; and it was the "wee sma' hours" before the guests separated.

Mr. and Mrs. M. were married young and consequently are still in middle life. Nine children have blessed and brightened their home, six of whom have grown to vigorous man and womanhood. One died in infancy and two are merry sun-browned little fellows in blouses and pantalets.

Numerous tokens of congratulation and good will were presented by the assembled guests or sent by those unable to be present. Chief among these was a beautiful life size crayon of little Beulah M. Mandy, a facinating little lady of ten months, and the first grandchild.

That the good lady and gentleman may live to celebrate their golden wedding is the sincere wish of their large family and numerous friends.

A BOLD BANDIT.

He Robs an Ohio Bank of a Large Sum.

Three Persons Shot, One Fatally—The Robber Makes His Escape—The Bold Deed Was Perpetrated at Columbus Grove.

A DARING ROBBERY.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 10.—A special to the Evening Dispatch from Lima, O., says: One of the boldest bank robberies and murders ever perpetrated in this section of the country occurred Saturday morning at Columbus Grove, a town of about 2,000 people, 12 miles north of here. Cashier T. J. Maple had just opened the Exchange bank, of which his father is proprietor, and laid out about $3,000 near the cashier's window. About 8:30 a man appeared in the door with a revolver in each hand. He immediately began shooting. Cashier Maple was struck twice, once in the arm and once in the right side. As he fell to the floor, an old farmer, William Van Debark, aged 60, entered the door, having come to get his money for some hogs he had just sold. The robber turned and shot him through and through. The old man died of his wounds a few hours later.

A third man sat in the lobby of the bank paralyzed with fear. He was not molested. The desperado then grabbed $1,300 in greenbacks, shoved them in the pockets of his sack coat and darted out the door shouting: "I'm a second Jesse James." Quite a crowd had been attracted by the sound of the shots, but there was a scattering when the wild-eyed murderer appeared on the street, having a gun in either hand and shooting indiscriminately. One of the bystanders, Henry Buck, failed to get out of the way fast enough and was struck down by a bullet from the rapidly-speaking revolvers. The fellow ran to the outskirts of the town and disappeared in a big corn field.

The desperado is described as being short and heavy set, with full face and small black mustache. He wore a black alpaca cap, black sack coat, blue pants with white stripe, and no vest. He appeared to be about 30 or 35 years old.

A posse was quickly organized and started in pursuit. If found, the fellow will be shot down like a dog. It is thought the wounds of Maple and Buck are not necessarily fatal. Van Debark, who was killed, was a prosperous former in Union township. He leaves a large family. A big reward is offered for the capture of the villain.

JACK THE RIPPER.

An Aged Woman the Last Victim of the Fiend.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—Much excitement was occasioned in the Whitechapel district when it was known that the dreaded "Jack the Ripper" had again appeared and had murdered an aged woman named Woolfe. The fiend used his knife with ferocity. He grasped the woman by the head, and drawing her backward he, with one hand across her mouth, silenced the cries she would naturally have tried to make, while with the other hand he drew the keen-bladed knife across her tightly drawn throat, inflicting a terrible wound. Then using the knife as a dagger he plunged it into her body again and again. There is a deep wound on the woman's arm which it is believed was received while she was attempting to ward off the ferocious blows aimed at her body.

AN OPEN SWITCH.

It Causes a Bad Accident Near East Palestine, O.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 8.—The New York and Chicago limited express on the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago railway, due here at 7 o'clock, was wrecked near East Palestine, O., 50 miles west of this city. Engineer William Garney, of East Palestine, O., and Isaac Richey, of Allegheny, Pa., were instantly killed. The express ran into an open switch and crashed into a freight train standing on a siding. The engine was completely wrecked. The combination car turned over and the first sleeper thrown from the track. Five freight cars were demolished. After the accident an unknown man was killed while working about the wreck.

MUST RELY ON AMERICA.

Without United States Wheat Europe Would Be on the Verge of Famine.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Beerbohm, calculating that America will be able to spare 25,000,000 quarters of wheat, estimates the surplus aggregate of countries with a good harvest at 50,000,000 quarters, and the requirements of other countries at 48,000,000 quarters.

The News, commenting on these figures, says it is not many years since Europe was practically independent of American supplies. This season it is clear that without America's help Europe will be on the verge of starvation before the next harvest.

Drowned in Saginaw Bay.

SAGINAW, Mich., Aug. 10.—While sailing in a small boat on Saginaw bay off Winona beach, a summer resort, Sunday afternoon, Frank Winterhalter, of the firm of Ferris & Winterhalter, and Edward Wittner were drowned, a squall throwing them into the water. Another young man was of the ill-fated party, but his identity has not yet been established. All the young men lived here and were unmarried.

Distinguished Southerner Dead.

LYNCHBURG, Va., Aug. 7.—Hon. Thomas S. Hancock died at his home near here, aged 75. For a number of years prior to the war he was a member of congress and made a distinguished political record. He was also a member of the confederate congress and speaker of the house.

Paid the Penalty.

DOVER, Aug. 8.—For assaulting a child of 8 years, James Thoroughgood, a colored man, was hanged here Friday.

OBITUARY.

Died, at Tecumseh, Mich., on Sunday, Aug. 2d, 1891, David Dunham Meeker, M. D., aged 76 years.

Dr. Meeker was born in Newark, N. J., April 12th, 1815. During his childhood the family removed from Newark to Sucasunna, N. J. After a course of study in a private seminary he began the study of medicine under Dr. Jackson, of Newark. Having completed his preparation he began practice at Mendham, N. J. Thence he removed to West Milford, N. J., where on April 14th, 1842, he was married to Miss Mary E. Cooley. From West Milford Mr. and Mrs. Meeker came in 1865 to Michigan, arriving on the day of Lee's surrender. A home was purchased near Tecumseh and the practice of medicine was exchanged for the cultivation of a farm.

During a time of general awakening in the pastorate of Rev. S. E. Wishard, D. D., Dr. and Mrs. Meeker became professing Christians, uniting with the Presbyterian church. Soon Dr. Meeker was called to the position of a ruling elder in the church, which he held until his death. As a trustee he also rendered acceptable service. In every form of Christian work he was earnest and indefatigable. He was generous in his gifts to every good cause and a helper and sympathizer of those in trouble. Three features of his life were especially prominent above others:

1st, Its unobtrusive character. There was no thirst for prominence in it. His was a quiet life, spent in quiet places, yet none the less useful on that account. The shallow brook is often noisy—babbling as it goes—but the deep river flows in silence to the sea. The strongest forces with which we are acquainted do a silent work. The strongest testimony that can be given for the truth is the silent testimony of a Godly life. Eternity alone can reveal the full value of the lives of quiet self-sacrifice and unassuming usefulness that are being lived among us. The persons living thus do not often receive the meed of notice and of praise in this life. But God takes notice and he is not unrighteous to forget their work and labor of love.

2d, This was eminently a conscientious life. Great attention was paid in it to the decisions of an enlightened conscience; one that was guided in its decisions by the word of God. Conscience governed in what the one who lived this life refrained from doing, as well as in what he did. It caused him, when he undertook a work, to take great pains to do it well. It led him to keep his engagements sacredly. As a Bible teacher it made him study the Scriptures carefully before he attempted to teach them to others. It filled his soul with profound regrets when he saw that he had done wrong and moved him to ask forgiveness for his wrongdoing, both from God and man. This it was which caused him to be so highly respected living, and which will cause his memory, now that he has left us, to be long cherished and held in highest esteem.

A third feature of this life was its faithfulness. Faithfulness is something which may be considered apart from feeling. It is a principle rather than a sentiment. The tide of feeling may have its ebbs and flows, but in faithfulness we have a steady, unchanging force. A good man may feel more deeply at some times than he does at others, but he does not wait for feeling before he moves to do his duty. He who has gone from us was a warm friend of special efforts in the church, and did his best to make them successful. Yet one could see little difference in the tenor of his life at those seasons, from what it was at ordinary times. The same principle of loyalty and faithfulness kept him steady at his work, whether the pulse of devotion in the church to which he belonged was strong or weak in its beatings. Nothing kept him from the discharge of his Christian duties. He was not driven but drawn, by a steady attraction, to his life work. That work is now finished and the promise is fulfilled: "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life."

On Wednesday, August 6th, the funeral services were held in the Presbyterian church, quite a large congregation being present. One son, Wm. D. Meeker, was present with his wife, from Chicago. Another, Dr. Lewis Meeker, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was prevented from coming by imperative engagements of his profession., though he had recently visited his father. These sons, with their widowed mother, were the immediate mourners. But it can be said that all present were sadly conscious of a loss sustained, and many, that that they had lost a true, tried friend.

The Pastor, Rev. Wm. H. Babbitt, was assisted in the services by Rev. James Vincent. At their close all that was mortal of the departed one was laid to rest in the village cemetery. Thus has the Presbyterian church been bereaved of four of its Elders in the present pastorate of a little more than nine years.
